COMPLETE SURVEY OF EXPOSITION

Interesting Commentary on the Scope, Purpose, Location and Character of Great Fair.

OF GREAT HISTORIC INTEREST

Every State Sends Its Priceless Relics of Heroic Days to Be Seen by the Visitors.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION GROUNDS, April 25.—The prime object of the Jamestown Exposition is to celebrate the three-hundredth anniversary of the first English settlement in America, which, as history records, occurred on the 13th day of May, 1607, on a peninsula, jutting out into the James River about forty miles from its mouth. This colony, after many privations, succeeded in establishing a permanent settlement, and this in turn grew till the seeds sown there developed into the original thirteen States, and they in turn eventually became the United States of America, which dominates the North American continent and is recognized as one of the world powers.

But as the waters of the James River have long since transformed the peninsula into an island, and as the island has almost been carried down into Hampton Roads, into which the James empties; as there is now little left of the original Jamestown but an island marsh and the old church tower, fast falling to decay, and the foundations of a few of the once prominent structures; and the further fact that the few hardy Englishmen who came over in the Godspeed, the Susan Constant and the Discovery, first landed at what is now Old Point Comfort to rest and recuperate, having been driven off Cape Henry by hostile savages, it was decided that some point near it should be chosen at which to hold the Jamestown Exposition. Sewell's Point, directly opposite Old Point Comfort, with the broad and deep waters of Hampton Roads lying between them, was considered the most available and was happily chosen.

Favored Spot.

In all this broad land from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico, it would be hard to find a spot more favored by nature and environments for the great international exposition. There may be other bodies of water as deep and as wide as Hampton Roads, with a harbor as safely land-locked, but they are not so accessible in time of peace nor so inaccessible in time of war. Nor can there be found a point elsewhere, surrounded by so many places of historical interest in which so many people at home and abroad share, points that not only mark the giant strides of progress made in the last three centuries, but that also mark the initiative and the final stroke of the god of war in more than one fierce conflict.

Jamestown, where liberty was virtually born, and Yorktown, where it virtually reached its majority, are close together; Washington at the head of tidewater on the Potomac and Richmond at the head of tidewater on the James, are not far from here, and not far from here, or from either of them, is Appomattox, where the strife that centred in these two capitals from 1861 to 1865 reached its climax and its close.

All over Tidewater Virginia are monuments that silently but grimly remind us of the cost of this conflict, but the later monuments of industry are casting their softening shadows over and around them, and the erstwhile sodden battle plain now yields its golden harvests to the prosperous husbandmen; aid out of all this conflict and chaos has come one of the most prosperous nations on earth, and it is to commemorate its history and its growth and material prosperity, as well as the threehundredth anniversary of its birth, that the Jamestown Exposition will be held on Hampton Roads this year, commencing at noon on the 26th day of April and closing at the hour of midnight of the 30th day of November.

Government Participition.

The fact that the government has appropriated nearly two milion dollars for the various government buildings, naval and military manœuvres and drills, for the entertainment of foreign nations who will participate, and most of them have accepted the invitation of the President of the United States to do so, is a guarantee that this feature alone will attract world-wide attention. A reproduction of the famous battle between the Monitor and Merrimac as it was fought in Harpton Roads in 1862 directly in front of what is now the Exposition Grounds, and which inaugurated a new era in naval warfare, will be one of the leading features in this connection. The government has appropriated $10,000 for this purpose alone, and it will certainly keeply interest every patriotic man, woman and child in the United States and in other countries.

Historic Interst.

The historic interest tht attaches to the site of the Jamestown Exposition and to the immediately surrounding country, covering a period of threehundred years from the landing of the first English settlers to the present time, is so great and so well known that only passing mention of it need be made her. Suffice it to say that it was here at Jamestown that the first English settlement was made in 1607, and which resulted in the English virtually ruling, or at last controlling, the entire Western continent; it was here that the first English marriage in America was solemnized; here the first trial by jury was held, as here the first legislative body convened in 1619; it was here that the first English child was born in America, and within a few hours' ride from Jamestown many of the important battles of the Revolution, the War of 1812 and of the Civil War were fought.

Foreign Participation.

Among those foreign countries that have accepted the invitation of the President to participate in the naval and military manœuvres, in celebrating the three-hundredth anniversary of the nation's birth, are Great Britain, Germany, Russia, France, Japan, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium, Sweden and Greece, of the Eastern Hemisphere, and Brazil, Argentina, Venezuela, Mexico, Chili, San Domingo, Porto Rico, Salvador, Peru, Guatemala, Nicaragua Ecuador, Costa Rica and Panama, on the Western Hemisphere.

United States Navy.

There are now in the United States Navy about 270 vessels fit for service, and thirty, or about that number, in course of construction; but it is not so much the number of fighting ships in our navy that is sending us so rapidly toward the top of the list, as their size and power. The United States, like most foreign nations, has adopted the policy of building the heavier class of war-ships—that is, protected by the heaviest armor-plate, and equipped with guns of the greatest destructive power. This is evidenced by the fact of the war-ships now in course of construction; seventeen are battleships or armored cruisers, and it is now proposed to build another battle-ship that will in every way outclass the British Dreadnaught. And, when it is taken into consideration that the battleships cost on an average about $8,000,000, some idea can be formed of the cost of the United States Navy.

While there are no official figures as to the exact number of foreign war-vessels that will participate, it is estimated by those who are most conversant with the status of affairs, naval and military, that there will be at least ninety, and as Uncle Sam will have about sixteen of his own best and most formidable sea-fighters, Admiral Evans in command, in Hampton Roads during the exposition, there will be about one hundred and six of the greatest war-ships in the world for the inspection of exposition visitors during the summer. It will be the first time in the history of the world that armed soldiers and armed vessels of foreign nations have been permitted to land peacefully in the waters or upon the shores of the United States, or that the like has ever occurred anywhere. Admiral Evans's fleet of sixteen vessels is now in Hampton Roads, ready for the opening ceremonies.

Old War Vessels.

An interesting feature of the Jamestown Exposition will be the collection of historic ships, among them the Constellation, which has made a name for itself of which every American citizen is justly proud. At Newport the Constellation is doing duty as a training-ship. The Constellation is 176 feet in length and forty-two feet in width, and has a normal load draught of 1,970 tons. The Constellation is chiefly noted for the completeness with which, under Truxtun, she whipped the French frigate L'Insurgente, and later the Berceau.

The Richmond and Franklin, two old wooden ships, the former built or completed in 1858 at the Portsmouth navy-yard and the latter in Kittrey, Maine, in 1865, are now both doing duty as receiving ships at the Portsmouth, Va., navyyards, and will no doubt be visited by thousands of those who come to the Jamestown Exposition. Besides those ships already named, there will be others, and not least among them will be exact reproductions of the old Monitor and Merrimac and the world-famous battle between these two ships that took place in 1862 will be fought in mimic on the very spot where they met in deadly combat in Hampton Roads, right in front of the Exposition Grounds.

United States Government Exhibit.

The Department of State will exhibit fac-similes of the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, and the Constitution, together with many other valuable and interesting documents. The Treasury Department will maintain a small bureau of engraving and printing, which will illustrate the method of plate work used in that department, and will also show samples of the government paper currency. The exhibits of the War and Navy Departments will be extremely comprehensive, and in connection with the military and naval display, will be more elaborate than at any former exposition.

The Life Saving Service will operate a completely equipped station on the shores of Hampton Roads, where exhibits of the apparatus and crews in action will be given from time to time. The Post-Office Department will run a model post-office in active operation under glass. It will show how the mails are collected and distributed and demonstrate the workings of the many new inventions, connected with the mail department. One of the most interesting branches of this exhibit will be that of the Dead Letter Office, where will be shown the variety of articles that pass through the mails, misdirected.

The Smithsonian Institution will make a comprehensive exhibit at the exposition, embracing all of its departments, namely: ethnological, anthropological, geological and biological. The Library of Congress will show a model of the new library, together with rare maps, letters and other papers of interest.

Exposition Buildings.

The exposition buildings proper consist of about twenty-five structures, many of them handsome palaces of permanent construction, after the colonial style of architecture, and present an array of elegance and dignity seldom seen.

Among the principal exposition buildings and those that will attract most attention in consequence of their size and style of architecture as well as for the exhibits they will contain, are the Auditorium and Convention Hall, 160 x 236 feet, with wings 62 feet, having an auditorium 150 x 250 feet, with a seating capacity of about 4,000; Palace of Manufactures and Liberal Arts, 280 x 550 feet; Palace of Machinery and Transportation, 280 x 550 feet; States' Exhibit Palace, 300 x 500 feet; Mining and Metallurgy Building, 100 x 250 feet; Hygienic and Medical Building, 100 x 250 feet; Pure Food Building, 90 x 300 feet; Palace of History and Historic Art, 124 x 129 feet; Educational Building, 124 x 129 feet.

Arts and Crafts Village.

Besides these, there is what is known as the Arts and Crafts Village, consisting of seven cottages after the style of Colonial architecture. These are Textile Building, 53 by 88 feet; Copper, Silver and Woodworkers' Shops, 44 by 137 feet; Pottery Shops, 48 by 50 feet; Iron Shops, 48 by 50 feet; Model School, 35 by 45 feet, with a model schoolroom, 25 by 32 feet; Mothers' and Children's Building, 60 by 100 feet, and Pocahontas Hospital, 50 by 80 feet.

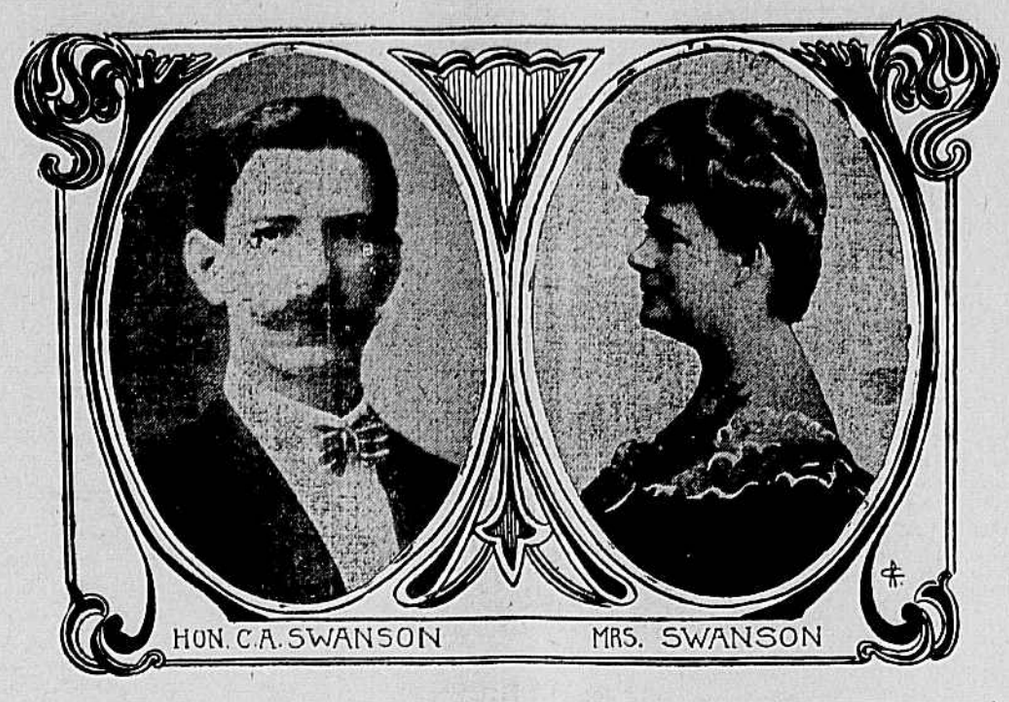
This does not include the various government buildings, the grand piers, nor those on the War-Path, many of which are elegant structures; nor does it include the Inside Inn, which has a frontage of 500 feet on Hampton Roads, overlooking that entire body of water, on which will be held all the naval manœuvres and nautical sports.

States Participating.

The participation by States is certainly highly gratifying, and is evidence that the interest is general, and that the great historical and industrial importance of the exposition is universally recognized. The following are among the States that have already made appropriations or otherwise provided for buildings and exhibits, and others will no doubt yet follow:

Connecticut made an appropriation of $70,000; Alabama, $25,000; Delaware, $10,000; Louisiana, $15,000; Georgia, $50,000; Illinois, $25,000; Kentucky, $40,000 (popular subscription); Maryland, $65,000; Michigan, $20,000; Missouri, $40,000; Massachusetts, $50,000; New Jersey, $75,000; North Dakota, $15,000; New York, $150,000; North Carolina, $50,000; Ohio, $75,000; Oklahoma, $10,000; Pennsylvania, $160,000; Rhode Island, $71,000; South Carolina, $20,000; Tennessee, $30,000; Virginia, $300,000; Virginia counties (additional), $150,000; Vermont, $10,000; West Virginia, $55,000; New Hampshire, $10,000; Arkansas, $15,000.

VIRGINIA EXECUTIVE AND WIFE HOSTS AT BRILLIANT RECEPTION



HON. C. A. SWANSON MRS. SWANSON

NOTABLE COMPANY ATTEND RECEPTION

lier taken from the room used by the present King of England when he visited Richmond, a lad, on his "tour of the world."

Among the Virginians who were especially notable were: Colonel and Mrs. Day and Miss Day, General Charles Anderson, General Cecil C. Vaughan, Dr. Lyon G. Tyler and Mrs. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Von Mayhoff, of Monticello; Judge Carter Scott and Judge Ingram, of Richmond; Colonel Charles Marshall, President Edwin Anderson Alderman, of the University of Virginia; Major Mallony, Captain Carpenter; Lieutenant Coates and Lieutenant Bagby, of the army; Mr. Brooks Johnson, of Norfolk; Hon. Floyd Hughes and Mrs. Hughes, of Norfolk; Colonel Jo Lane Stern, of Richmond; Colonel and Mrs. Joseph Lawless, Colonel and Mrs. Eugene Massie, Colonel and Mrs. Thomas Branch McAdams, Colonel Scott Parrish, Major and Mrs. Lynch, Major Waring, Major Shewton and Captain Bickford, aide-de-camp to General Vaughan.

Epidemic of Colonels Spreads Everywhere.

To this list might be added many hundred colonels, fr to-day there broke out an epidemic of men of high military rank—a veritable eruption of officers above the grade of majors.

Brigadiers were as thick as the sands on the seashore, but the colonels rolling in by every train and boat were far beyond a simile, for the very earth shook beneath the proud procession of their martial tread.

Late to-night Governor and Mrs. Swanson entertained the receiving party at supper, and at midnight drank the 300th birthday of the nation.

If the ceremonies to-morrow are one-half as delightful and attractive as the Governor's reception proved to-night, the unfinished portion of the buildings and the unsightly spots scattered here and there through the grounds will be forgotten, and the so-called unpreparedness will count for naught.

Not the least beautiful part of the entertainment was the view from the Virginia State Building portico of the great fleet at anchor in Hampton Roads brilliantly lighted in honor of the occasion, its scores of searchlights playing over the waters and lighting of the Colonial city as they were turned on the land.

LOCAL POST WILL STAND A CHANCE

T. P. A. Adds Nearly Two Hundred Names to Its List.

The campaign for new members of the Travelers' Protective Association conducted by committees from Post A ended last night, and the reports showed that one hundred and seventy-seven new names had been added to the list.

A most enthusiastic meeting was held at the rooms of the association, and the various chairmen vied with each other over their work.

The post will hold its monthly meeting to-morrow night, when the matter of new members will be more fully gone into, and further reports will be made.

Secretary H. L. Harwood reported that two hundred and sixty new members had recently been enrolled in the State, one hundred and seventy-seven of whom were secured in Richmond during the recent campaign.

Virginia is competing for the "Texas Horn," which is considered a great prize, and members of the association here think she has a fine chance to capture it. But there is another one which will almost surely fall in the lap of the Virginia association, and it is a prize of $200, which is offered to three States, which are put in a class to themselves. They are Virginia, Tennessee and Texas, and the one getting the largest number of new members for the fiscal year ending May 1, 1907, will get the $200 prize.

At this time it looks as though Virginia would be an easy winner. Here are the figures to date: Virginia, 529; Texas, 353; Tennessee, 196. The winning State will be notified from national headquarters, in St. Louis, on May 1st.
