STILL TALKING ABOUT LICENSES

Sensational Rumors Continue to Float About—Corrections in List Published.

Persistent rumors of a breach between Judge Witt and the members of the Board of Police Commissioners who assisted him in the preparation of the list of liquor licenses were heard on all sides again yesterday, although confirmation was still difficult to obtain. Friends of the commissioners say that the judge, after asking for the advice of the board, took but little notice of its list, granting many licenses to saloons to which they especially objected, and cutting out others to which there was no objection.

Especially do the police regret the granting of a license to a negro resort in the neighborhood of the Old Market, which figured in a series of bloody crimes some time ago, a negro being murdered in this saloon, and Police Captain Shinberger being shot in another part of town while attempting to arrest the fugitive. A saloon on West Broad Street, suspected of being connected with a disorderly place, somewhere in the region of Elba Station, meets with the objection of the Police Department, but the exact house is not specified.

Rumors Still Fly.

Friends of Judge Witt on the other hand remind the advocates of the Police Department that the appointing power lay entirely with the court, and that the commission was acting only in an advisory capacity. A rumor which gained considerable circulation yesterday was to the effect that a certain well-known criminal lawyer, who has not heretofore been closely affiliated with city politics, had joined forces with a well-known political leader, and that together they had lobbied through the Police Board the names of certain saloon-keepers who were clients of the lawyer. This rumor, whether true or false, is said to have come to the ears of Judge Witt, and the judge, accustomed by years of court procedure to the ways of politicians and lawyers, threw aside the whole police list, according to the story, and went ahead on his own account. Members of the Police Board indignantly deny any undue influence, although admitting that in many cases the judge did not follow their recommendations.

Judge Witt would not discuss any of these rumors yesterday, but said that when the list of licenses is completed he would not object to the publication of the police recommendations, saying that they would be found to be almost the same as his final list. The judge added that where changes had been made, he would be ready to give his reasons, if they were asked.

Comments More Favorable.

A second day's review of the lists as published in all the papers has necessitated some corrections. In some cases checks were tendered by one party and the application for license was made by another, causing it to appear on the records that two applications had been made, and one turned down. One or two wholesalers who had no intention of doing a retail business appeared in the list of those refused, whereas they had never applied, but merely advanced the money for others listed with those who made application, but did not put up the certified check required by the ordinance.

Clerk Walter Christian, of the Hustings Court, has seventy or more certified checks belonging to unsuccessful candidates, which will be returned as soon as the list is completed.

On the whole, the list of licenses granted seems to improve on better acquaintance, and among the comments heard all over town yesterday an increasing number were favorable to the selections by the court. Complaint continues general as to the number of licenses in the Sixth Street Market section, and along that portion of Broad Street covering the retail and shopping district.

Rumor continues to report dealers who are threatening legal steps looking to testing the constitutionality of the Dabney law, but so far no concerted or definite action has been taken, and some of the members of the larger liquor firms which secured licenses seem doubtful if any steps will be taken.

Errors Corrected.

Four errors have been discovered in the list published in yesterday's Times-Dispatch. The parties affected are Hessberg, Gunst & Co., the Schlitz Brewing Company and L. C. Younger & Co., all of whom are wholesale dealers, who did not apply for a retail liquor license. These names are said to have got on the list of applicants in the clerk's office of the Hustings Court through the fact that each of the wholesale dealers put up a certified check for $500 for some retail dealer. Mr. L. C. Younger stated yesterday that he had deposited his check with Clerk Christian, intending it to be for J. J. West, at No. 2928 P Street. Mr. Younger's name was put on the list of those making tender of the required check, but as he did not make the necessary application (which he never expected to make) his name remained on the list of those to whom licenses had been refused. Mr. West was listed among those who did not put up the certified check, and his application was therefore refused also.

It is thought that the names of the Schlitz Brewing Company and Hessberg, Gunst & Co. got on the list in a similar manner, as both of these wholesale houses, like Mr. Younger, disclaim any intention of operating a retail department.

Wholesale liquor dealers and breweries secure their licenses under a separate act on May 1st, and are not affected in any way by the provisions of the Dabney law.

J. C. and P. H. McKinley, at No. 400 North Eighteenth Street, listed among those who were refused, secured their license, and will continue their business at the present place.
