DEEP RUN CLOSES LARGE ENTRY LIST

The committee of the Deep Run Horse Show and Race Meet, to be held at the Fair Grounds May 14th, 15th and 16th, has closed its entry list, which is a notable one, both in regard to its record-breaking number of entries and the class of horses to appear.

In the sixteen classes there are over 250 entries. In the handicap alone forty hunters are entered. In the class for Deep Run and Riverside hunters there are thirty-seven; in the green hunter class thirty-seven; in the lightweight hunter class twenty-three. No previous exhibit in the State has brought together so many amateur horses. These are all Virginia horses, and good ones, ridden regularly to the hounds in their respective sections during the hunting season, and can negotiate any country. From Orange county will come Mr. W. W. Osborne, Mr. James N. Andrews and Mr. John J. Daniel.

Mr. Buck Langhorne will come from Albemarle; Mr. W. S. Field from Gloucester, the first exhibit this county has ever made at a Richmond show. Petersburg sends Mr. M. C. Jackson, Mr. LeRoy Roper, Mr. Harvey Seward, Mr. Cary Randolph, Mr. W. Gordon McCabe and Mr. Duncan Wright. The horses exhibited by these are all good ones, and will have to be reckoned with in every class. Rockingham county sends Messrs. Byers Bros. & Koontz with the largest string ever brought from the Valley. Richmond exceeds all previous records in its number of exhibitions and horses entered. Class No. 11, with its thirty-seven entries, will be especially interesting to the residents of Petersburg and Richmond, exhibitors being members of the Deep Run and Riverside Hunt Clubs. Two handsome silver cups will be presented; one by C. Lumsden & Son in the pony class, and one by A. Simon & Son in Class No. 11, for Deep Run and Riverside hunters.

There will be six horse-show features, two flat races and two steeplechases daily, which are all well filled. Many of the best "timber toppers" from Bennings and Pimlico are entered.

Most of the tracks have only one steeplechase daily, but the management, wishing to make this meet particularly attractive, put in this additional steeplechase and have offered large purses so as to get the best horses.

Many of the boxes have been reserved, and Richmond's social element will be out in full force all three afternoons. Some of the box owners are: Messrs. S. T. Morgan, Joseph E. Willard, Joseph A. White, A. C. Young, P. H. Mayo, A. S. Buford, Coleman Wortham, E. B. Sydnor, Legh R. Page, John G. Walker, I. N. Vaughan, Ashton Starke, John W. McComb, C. B. # CANOEISTS WILL DOT JAMES

Much interest has been aroused in Richmond by the successful efforts of the Opecan-Canough Club, in the face of many difficulties to establish a canoeing organization here.

This club will soon have a beautiful boathouse on the bank of the stream, and its canoes will cleave the waters of the Indian's Powhatan river, now known as the noble James, and in sunshine and moonbeams will seek its pretty coves and stem in gentle tides, as did the Emperor Opecanenough, the greatest of all Indian chieftains, only excepting his kingly brother, the great Powhatan.

Appropriate to the sentiment which clings around the cruising ground of this great chieftain and with an apology for light play upon his name, the Richmond canoeman's pennant bears the words "Opecan-Canough."

The bluff-bound and verdure-bordered stretches of the gentle river below Richmond offers unexcelled canoeing ground, and by eliminating its inaccessibility, the Opecan-Canough Club opens up an unending source of pleasure for those who love the delights and romance of quiet waters.

The club has quietly perfected its arrangements, and having accomplished ways and plans for a practical fulfilment of its expectations, has now opened its doors to new members, and will probably reach its limit of membership the present season.

Its plans provide for a boathouse on the river bank in Fulton, with ample storage, reception and dressing-rooms, with balcony overlooking the stream.

The street cars will land the devotees alongside the boathouse, and a few feet more will find them ready to step into a light canoe waiting in the stream.

The club has adopted a natty but simple uniform, with white blouse trimmed in blue, and white duck trousers, white gymnasium slippers and canvas sailor hat.

The pennant, which will fly over the peak of the club's home and from the staff of club canoes, consists of blue ground with crossed paddles, and the letters O. C. in white, with white streamer.

The officers of the new club are: John D. Murrell, president; Edward S. Evans, vice-president; J. G. Hankins, secretary and treasurer.

Those desiring to become members should address one of the above.

The canoes to be chosen will be of safe model, easily handled by one man, and will present a graceful picture upon the stream.

The canoes are all patterned after the birch back canoe, which makes them safe, light and swift. They are strongly and handsomely made, and are usually finished in hardwood and brass.

Every canoeist is an enthusiast. Nor could he well help being, considering that nothing is more languorous or soothing than the motion of this small craft as it glides among the twilight shadows of the shore. Nothing is more exciting than its quick, nervous dash through the foaming waters of a rapid, nor nothing more steady and sure for long cruising trips.

The canoeist uses his frail craft as a vehicle by day, a shelter by night, and a sure friend in dangerous waters.

In the days of the red men, from Canada south, the bays and rivers of America were dotted with the dainty birch bark canoes.

The love for canoeing engendered in the hearts of many individuals has been the means of forming of hundreds of clubs for the enjoyment of this sport. On the Charles River, near Cambridge, may be seen at any one time as many as 600 canoes. In Washington there are three clubs and about 400 ardent canoeists. It is attractive to see in the early evening the canoeists clad in duck sailor suits, accompanied by girls in dainty white dresses, gliding along the verdure-clad shores of the Potomac, the bright-colored canoes and variegated cushions adding to the color scheme.
