Daily Court Record.

U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals will convene here to-day to hold its January session. The following judges are expected to be in attendance: Circuit Judges Goff and Pritchard and District Judges Morris and Boyd.

It is very likely that opinions will be handed down by the court in several large and important cases now pending before the court.

There will be three cases argued at this session, which have been specially assigned because of their importance and urgency for a final disposition.

The following case will be called today and argued:

No. 873. Horatio N. Campbell et al., appellants, vs. James Elwood Jones et al., appellees; appeal from the Circuit Court at Lynchburg, Va. To be argued by F. S. Kirkpatrick, of Lynchburg, Va., and J. S. Clark and H. A. McCarthy, of Philadelphia, Pa., for the appellants, and by John H. Holt and W. K. Cowden, of Huntington, W. Va., and William A. Glasgow, Jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., and Hornblower, Miller & Potter, of New York, for the appellees.

Claude M. Dean, deputy clerk and librarian of the Circuit Court of Appeals, has received from the Treasury Department at Washington two very large and handsome oak bookcases in which to place the thousand dollars' worth of law books recently purchased for the library. There are between 6,000 and 7,000 law books now in this library, which is considered one of the best Federal law libraries in the South.
