Social and Personal

Miss Sarah Chandler Jeffress, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bacon Jeffress, and Branch Beale Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Morgan, formerly of Petersburg, but now of this city, were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents, 914 Park Avenue. The Rev. E. T. Dadmun, of Farmville, brother-in-law of the groom, performed the ceremony, which was witnessed only by the immediate families and a few intimate friends, additional guests being invited for the reception following.

The drawing-rooms of the Jeffress home were hung with Southern smilax and white flowers, and an improvised altar of lilies and Cathedral candles was arranged in the bay window. Lighted candles, bay trees and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the hall and library. The dining-room was arranged in pink blooms. A rustic basket of Killarney roses was used as a centrepiece for the table, and pink flowers and rose-colored lights decorated the mantel. An orchestra, hidden by palms and a screen of white flowers, played the wedding music.

The bride entered with her sister, Mrs. Neill Dunlop Sills, who was dame of honor, and they were met at the altar by the groom, attended by his two brothers, George D. Morgan, of Richmond, and Robert M. Morgan, of New York. The bride's wedding gown was an exquisite affair, fashioned of softest white satin and cobweb lace, and the chiffon draperies were caught up at intervals with pearl ornaments. Her tulle veil fell from a Juliet cap of real lace, finished with a wreath of orange blossoms, and her only ornament was an antique pearl necklace. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and purple orchids. Mrs. Sills were ping brocaded charmeuse made with an overdress of chantilly lace, finished with bands of ermine and jeweled buckles. She carried a conventional bouquet of Killarney roses and lilies of the valley. Little Miss Waller Jeffress, of New York, niece of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a lovely dress of white batiste and lace, with pink ribbons. She carried a "grandmother" nosegay of pink sweet peas edged with a lace frill and tied with pink tulle streamers. The ribbons were held by little Katherine Jeffress, of New York, and Frances Morgan, of Richmond, who were dressed alike in white lace, with wide pink sashes.

Many out-of-town guests from Farmville, Petersburg and New York City were present for the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have gone North on their wedding trip, and on their return will occupy an apartment at the Raleigh.

Afternoon Reception.

Quantities of lovely pink roses, against a background of palms and trailing vines, decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill H. Tilghman, 1017 Park Avenue, yesterday afternoon for a reception, at which Mr. and Mrs. Howard Tilghman, their son and his bride, were guests of honor. Big baskets and vases of yellow and white chrysanthemums were used to decorate the living-room, and a basket of red roses and lilies of the valley formed an effective centrepiece for the tea table in the dining-room, smaller rustic baskets of the same flowers being arranged throughout the rooms. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Tilghman and their son and daughter were Mrs. Peyton Giles, Mrs. Adolph Osterloh, Mrs. Robert Powers, Mrs. John Hancock, Miss Bessie Grammar, of Philadelphia, and Miss Annie Ronaldson, Miss Etta Munford and Miss Frances Wheat were at the punch bowl. Mrs. Tilghman received in a black satin gown trimmed in real lace and held a bouquet of red roses. The guest of honor wore a French frock of pink brocaded chiffon, with a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. About 100 guests were entertained.

Miss White Weds.

Palms, Southern smilax, yellow and white chrysanthemums and many lighted candles decorated the drawing-room of 817 West Grace Street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Willmer, last night, for the marriage of their sister, Miss Elise Wilson White, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. White, of Abdington, and Victor S. Paine, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. John B. Paine, of McMinnville, Tenn. The weding was very quietly celebrated at 7 o'clock, the Rev. F. T. McFaden officiating.

The bride entered with her two brothers, Dr. Thomas W. White and Gilbert G. White. Her wedding gown was a lovely affair of white brocaded satin trimmed in pearls, and her long veil of illusion, falling to the hem of her train, was fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias, and her only ornament was a pearl necklace. Mrs. Marvine Gorham was matron of honor, and the bride's only attendant. Her gown was of white chiffon cloth embroidered in gold, and made on a foundation of yellow charmeuse. She carried an armful of yellow chrysanthemums. James H. Allport, of Philadelphia, attended the groom as his best man, and they met the bride at the improvised altar in the drawing-room. The tables in the dining-room was set with a centrepiece of Bride roses and lilies of the valley, and white chrysanthemums and smilax were used on the mantel.

A small reception was held immediately after the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Paine left later for a wedding journey. They will make their home in Dante on their return.

Some of the guests from a distance attending the wedding last evening were Mr. and Mrs. Marvine Gorham, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Clark Carpenter, of Johnson City, Tenn.; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas White, of Coalwood, W. Va.; Gilbert G. White, of Charleston, W. Palms and tall wicker stands of chrysanthemums were used everywhere, and ten tables of bridge were entertained. Favors for the guests were quaintly costumed cupids, and Miss Taylor was presented with a big box of Parma violets. Mrs. R. T. Alvey received with her daughter, and Miss Taylor, and those present included the debutantes and the younger society set. Tea was served at the card tables, after the game was concluded.

Miss Myrtle Butler, who was maid of honor, wore a gown of blue brocaded satin trimmed in crystals, and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Miss Ruby Brimmer played the wedding marches and "O Promise Me" very softly during the ceremony. Frank Beaters was the bridegroom's best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Layne left later in the evening for a wedding trip that will include Washington, Philadelphia and New York. They will be at home at 520 North Seventh Street on their return to Richmond.

Smith—Sims.

An out-of-town wedding of the greatest interest to society in Richmond, where the bride and groom have many relatives and friends, is that of Miss Lucy Winston Sims, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Frederick Wilmer Sims, and William Worth Smith, Jr., of Fauquier County. The ceremony, which took place at the home of the bride's parents in Louisa last evening at 9:30 o'clock, was a brilliant affair, and a large company of relatives and friends were present. The Rev. Hugh H. Hudson officiated. Miss Virginia Shoop, of Suffolk, played the wedding march and also accompanied Miss Lucy Gwathmey, of Richmond, who sang "O Promise Me" and "I Promise You" just before the entry of the bridal party. The house was decorated in masses of yellow chrysantemums and running cedar and candles, shaded in yellow, were used everywhere.

The bride descended the stairway with her father, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the improvised altar of white blooms and burning tapers by the bridegroom and his best man, Howard W. Smith, of Alexandria. The bride wore an imported gown of embroidered crepe, with a tulle veil festooned with lilies of the valley, and her ornaments were pearls. She carried a presentation bouquet of lilies of the valley. Mrs. John Benjamin Pinder, of this city, who was dame of honor, was gowned in white crepe de chine finished with lace, and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. ELDERLY LORD ELGIN TO BE MARRIED AGAIN

Chief of Great Scottish House of Bruce to Wed Widow of Captain Ogilby.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

LORD ELGIN, who has just followed the example of Lord Walerdn, Lord Suffield, and so many other elderly widowers, in seeking a helpmate for their declining years, and whose impending marriage to the widow of Captain Frederick Ogilby, of the royal navy, has just been announced by cable, is the chief of that great Scottish house of Bruce, which furnished Robert Bruce to the throne of Scotland as its most famous King. Moreover, he enjoys the distinction of having been born on this side of the Atlantic, having first seen the light of day at Ottawa, during his father's term of office as Governor-General of Canada.

Lord Elgin received the Order of the Garter on the completion of his term of service as Viceroy of India, but curtly rejected the offer of promotion to a marquisate, tendered to him, by way of a solatium for his virtual removal from the secretaryship of State for the colonies, by Herbert Asquith when he became Premier, on the death of Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman. He is not an impressive man, and does not in his appearance suggest the knightly graces of the Norman chevaliers, or the Yorkshire barons, and of the Scottish Kings, who were among his ancestors.

Worst of all, he is a very indifferent horseman, which was greatly to his disadvantage when Viceroy of India; for all sorts of funny stories were current about his equestrian deficiencies. Thus, on one occasion, when at Simla, he was taking horseback exercise on the fashionable promenade of the locality. One of the most important dignitaries of the government wanted to discuss a matter of imperial and urgent importance with him, and sent an aide-de-camp to ask if he might join his excellency in his ride. The aide-de-camp cantered up and said: "Your Excellency!" No answer was vouchsafed. A little nonplussed, the A. D. C. tried again, with no better result. In desperation he returned to the attack: "Your Excellency: Sir So-and-So requests——" Lord Elgin turned upon him furiously, with this laconic, but to his mind all-sufficient excuse for his preoccupation: "Great God, sir! Can't you see that I am riding!"

At Broom Hall, his ancestral seat in Fifeshire, Lord Elgin preserves many historic relics, including the sword and helmet of King Robert Bruce. His grandfather was the peer who presented to the British nation those masterpieces of ancient Greek sculpture taken from the Parthenon, at Athens, known as the Elgin Marbles, and which now figure in the British Museum; while his father was that Earl of Elgin who was special ambassador to this country in the early fifties, and who concluded a commercial treaty with the United States, which is described as having been "floated through the Senate on a sea of champagne."

But that was far from being the only title to fame of the late Earl of Elgin. For Englishmen regard him as having saved India for the empire at the time of the great mutiny fifty years ago. He died at his post, as Viceroy, and lies buried, not in the family mausoleum in Scotland, but at the hill station in India, where he breathed his last.

The late Lady Elgin, who died four years ago, was a member of the house of Carnegie, and daughter of the sixth Earl of Southesk, and by this marriage there were no less than eleven children; the heir to his father's honors estates being Lord Bruce, some thirty-five years of age, and still a bachelor.

Last spring the Comte de Palikao was dropped by the Jockey Club at Paris for borrowing money from one of the club servants and failing to repay it. The amount was not large, being under $20. He is now drawing attention to his expulsion, by a suit brought against the members of the executive committee of the club, demanding his reinstatement, on the ground that the money was repaid and accepted by the servant within six hours after the decision to drop him, and before he had received any notice of his expulsion. The club is fighting his suit, and it may safely be assumed that it was only too glad to avail itself of his violation of the rules of the club, in order to get rid of a member whom it did not consider desirable.

His title is of modern origin. For he is the grandson and heir of that General Cousin-Montauban, who was created Count de Palikao by Napoleon III., in 1862, on his return from the capture of Peking, by an Anglo-French force. This feat of arms was marred by his vandalistic and altogether inexcusable destruction of the summer palace of the Emperors of China, justly celebrated as one of the Seven Wonders of the World, and possessed of the most extraordinary artistic and historic value. No military expedition, either in modern or ancient times, has ever been disgraced by so much plundering, and the loot which he brought back from China was of so costly a character and so enormous in its extent, as to excite the shame and indignation of the French people.

The latter gave striking expression to their feelings about the matter, when the Legislature, by an almost unanimous vote, and in obedience to public sentiment, rejected the measure submitted to it by the crown, providing an annuity of $10,000 a year to the general, by way of endowment of his title of count. Not until the fall of the empire did it become known that the Emperor, of his own authority, and without the consent of the Legislature, had consoled the general for this hostile vote, by awarding to him a sum of $200,000 out of the war indemnity exacted from the Chinese government. The general came to the fore in 1870, as Prime Minister, at the time of the downfall of the empire, on the 4th of September, and it was largely owing to his incapacity that none of the necessary steps were taken to prevent its overthrow. Nor did he take any measure to protect the Empress or to assure her safety, being more preoccupied about his own life, which he saved from the mob by a somewhat ignominious flight to Belgium. His record is not one of which French soldiers are proud. His name used to be so execrated, indeed, that it is a wonder that its present bearer, his grandson, should have ever succeeded in obtaining admission to a club such as the Jockey.

Ex-Congressman Francis Burton Harrison, the newly-appointed Governor-General of the Philippines, is already known in that part of the world as "the man with the hat," and has been made the object of a good deal of fun. It seems that, while on his way to join his post, he gave all sorts of elaborate directions, by means of wireless, about his official reception on his arrival at Manila, and emphasized in several of these communications that he would wear for the occasion a cutaway coat and "a high silk hat," thus indicating that he expected American and native civilian dignitaries to be similarly garbed.

Now high silk hats are virtually unknown in the Philippines, being unsuited to the climate, the usual form of headgear being a pith helmet, such as is worn by white people in the tropics. In fact, the only use made of high silk hats in the Philippines is to present them to petty sultans and chieftains of the remote islands of the archipelago, as insignia of their vassal sovereignty, in lieu of crowns.

The Governor-General arrived in due course, and landed in his high silk hat, which created a great impression among his compatriots, as well as among the Filipinos. But there were only four hats of this style of architecture visible among the civilian officials and leading American citizens assembled to greet him, and these were of so ancient a vintage that they had the effect of giving a burlesque savor, rather than any solemnity to the occasion.

The American and native newspapers of the Philippine Islands are getting no end of amusement out of the new Governor-General's "topper," and about his wireless messages in connection therewith; and he may be said to have inaugurated his tenure of an office, which is one of the most delicate and difficult in the service of the United States, by a succes de rire, that is to say, by a storm of ridicule, not conducive to American prestige.
