Big Parade Will Mark the Opening of Amateur Baseball Season

AMATEURS ALL READY FOR SEASON'S GRIND

Some Old Stars Rejoin Ranks—Parade on Saturday to Mark Season's Opening—Nearly 700 Youngsters Now Under Contract.

BY JOHN R. HOOPER, JR.

Everything is now in readiness for the start of the amateur baseball season, and the parade which will take place on Saturday promises to be the grandest affair of its kind that has ever been given in the interests of the amateur ball.

Although definite plans have not been made it is practically a settled fact that the boys will assemble in the Capitol Square at 2 o'clock next Saturday, where they will be addressed by the Governor of the State and Mayor Ainslie. One band has already been secured and the committee is trying to secure the services of another.

The boys are taking an unusual interest in the opening this year, and the majority of the teams have secured banners with the names of their teams painted on them. Plenty of automobiles have been secured for the parade, and the boys are requested to show their appreciation of the kindness of their friends by turning out in uniforms, whether old or new.

Everything connected with the organization points to the most successful season of amateur baseball that has ever been known in any city in this country, which is another proof that "old Richmond" can and will do whatever she tries as long as she has such men as Julien Hill president of the organization, and a big factor in bringing the regional bank to our city; James T. Disney, vice-president of the commission, and one of the best friends the young men of the city have ever known; Joe Seamans, R. J. Crowder, T. F. Duval, A. Volkman, Jr., George H. Black and several other men who are young and progressive citizens, not afraid to work for the upbuilding of anything that means something to the city.

Judging from the way that contracts are coming in this year, there will be fully 700 youngsters who will play under the jurisdiction of the commission, an increase of 33 per cent over last season, which was the best ever.

Among some of the old timers who have signed contracts this year are Fergus McRee, who has signed a Collegian contract. McRee is acknowledged one of the best all-round amateur athletes in the city. Stanley Clarke, Billy Sitterding, "Ollie" Richardson, Harry Augustine, Denny Wright and a score of others that the managers had not counted upon as being members of any of the teams this year, are all in the field.

There will be more leagues this season than there have ever been before, and all that is needed now are grounds. The public seems to be waking to this fact and is lending its help in every possible way.

The players signed during the week are as follows:

BASEBALL RECORDS TO BE MORE COMPLETE

Secretary Heydler of the National League Will Publish What Every Man Does, Regardless of Number of Games Played.

John Heydler, secretary of the National League, is contemplating further improvements in the averages he yearly compiles and issues. This improvement is the printing of the records of the players who take part in less than fifteen games, these records being kept each year, but never made public. Consequently, when baseball experts desire to get a complete record of a certain player, they cannot obtain all the required information from the baseball guides, and have to apply to the league secretaries for the missing data.

Sporting editors whose papers make a specialty of answering questions about the national pastimers will applaud Heydler's determination of printing the records of the limited opportunity class, no one connected with baseball, not even Heydler himself, having an idea who it was that made the rule that a player wasn't to get a record unless he took part in fifteen games.

One hundred and twenty-five noble athletes were denied records by the National League's able secretary last season because he followed precedent and didn't take any cognizance of the men who participated in less than fifteen games. There probably were just as many men in the American League whose performances were not made public by Ban Johnson's official statistician—Irwin M. Howe.

According to the guide-books, the first year Christy Mathewson was in the National League was 1901, but really "Big Six" broke into fast company in 1900. "Rube" Marquard gets into the guides for the first time as a National Leaguer in 1909, and is not in them at all in 1910. The fact about the holder of the modern record f constructive victories is that he fi ured in one victory in 1908 and in fo wins and four losses in 1910. Al Dem ree's first record in the guide-books in 1913, but his National League d but was accomplished in 1912.

The same condition of affairs regar ing prominent pastimers crops up the American League. Eddie Coll first donned the livery of the Whi Elephants in 1906, playing under t alias of "Sullivan" and covering hi self with errors; yet he doesn't bre into the averages until a year lat Frank Baker is awarded his first reco in 1909, but he played under Conr Mack in the fag end of the seas of 1908, hitting close to the .300 not that campaign, but not manufacturi any of those four-bag blows that sin have made him famous until the f lowing year.

Tris Speaker, Chalmers car-winn in 1912, is shown by the record-boo to have reached fast company in 19 but, as a matter of fact, he was wi the Red Sox in the fall of 1907, pla ing his first game for them on Se tember 14, 1907, when he batted f Minstrel Man Morgan in the eigh inning of a game in Philadelph Jimmy Dygert pitching. Two days l ter Tris again did a pinch-hitti trick in a game in Washington, Cha ley Smith pitching; and on Septemb 17, he played his first full game in t American, getting a hit off Te Hughes and accepting his lone chan in the field. Speaker's batting ave age that year was .282.

Heydler has made a lot of improv ments in the National League ave ages in the last few years. He w the first secretary to give the numb of complete games pitched by ea man, the first to adopt the new earn runs system, and the first to place t full names of the players in the reco

RYAN HAS A LIKELY BUNCH

Walter Smallwood probably comes next in the consideration of the fans. The Maryland schoolboy, with a season's experience, should make a valuable man, provided he doesn't become too much impressed with his ability. Smallwood, from the moment he arrived last year, gave evidence that, with proper handling, he could be made a pitcher. He knew practically nothing about the game, and after receiving several severe maulings, was sent first to the Carolina Association and afterwards to the Appalachian League, where he finished the season, being recalled after his work in the Appalachian had ceased. He is promising, but many a promising youngster has been spoiled through too great an appreciation of his own ability.

McIntyre Looks Best.

Of all of the youngsters brought for tryouts, Lemuel McIntyre is by far the most impressive. He has a wonderful curve ball, but doesn't know how to use it. The break is far too wide and too slow. If he can be taught the art of causing the ball to break sharper his curve will be effective, but not until then. Young Shipe, the lefthander of the squad, when he loses some of the soreness that is now apparent, will be valuable. In the early days he cut loose with enough smoke to make anybody sit up and take notice. He has lost this fire recently. Still there is the hope that he will regain it. Lloyd Ramey is pretty apt to find a berth here; at least he will remain until he has been further examined. Though not of the flashy type, he has performed more consistently than any in the stable. Russell Byrd will never do. He lacks experience, and is apparently gun-shy. Button, the lad who just arrived, unexpected and without invitation, will be allowed to go his way unmolested, unless he perks up considerably and discovers a new brand of flinging to show. Sloan, who is due to-morrow, will be graciously received. He is needed.

Back of the bat Ryan is better fixed than any Richmond club in years. Both Lean and Woerth are good boys, with good arms and heads, the last named article of furniture being useless in a number of youngsters who have been here temporarily. Catching is primarily a thinking part. The mechanical work of cathong a ball and even throwing it may be cultivated, but a catcher who fails to think is about as valuable as a horse with a broken leg. Which of this duo Ryan will part with, as one must go, is going to present a hard problem.

Plenty Infielders.

In his infield Ryan is likewise well fortified. He has Raley at first, and after Honest John rounds into shape he will be good enough for the Virginia League for at least one more season. At second he has the most valuable player on the team in Doc Newton. At short Bill Ryan his proved the surprise of the squad, hitting hard and fielding in good shape, especially in covering second. Third base has Connie Bresnahan and Dave Bunting dividing honors. Connie is in far better condition and is infinitely better spirits than he was last season, while Dave Bunting is always a reliable player. It may not be surprising, if Raley fails to get into condition, that Bunting goes to the initial corner, John Collins, one of the fleetest footed members of the squad is another infielder to be reckoned with.

It is in the outer works that Ryan is weakest. Clarence Berger is a great youngster. He hits well, stands at the plate like a youngster and, given some attention can be taught how to field his position. At this time he doesn't know how, and this, with no intention of underestimating his ability. He is willing and anxious, young and strong and will remain with the club. Lefty Snyder has not proved impressive in his work. He has misjudged several fly balls, and on ground balls fails to cover up as he should. Only yesterday he let one get away from him in the first inning that cost several runs. He has hit the ball good and hard, and he may correct his faults. Dolly Gray, the fence buster, is clearly out of condition, but he must speed up considerably. A man of his bulk is naturally slow, and Ryan very wisely shifted him to right field, where the throw is short.

Taken as a whole, however, the outfield does not compare favorably with the rest of the team. It is not fast nor has it the power of attack so essential from an offensive point of view. Of course, this is all an early season opinion, and may have to be changed. Our conclusion is that with another outfielder who can hit and run the bases, the club will be the best balanced outfit Richmond has had since the pennant winning days of Perry Lipe. Later on we shall take up each of the clubs, and with Richmond as a standard of comparison, tell their strength as we see it.

was splendid, and the coaches were ample to take care of every one attending. Walter Taylor, district passenger agent of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac, will be actively in charge, and will look after the comfort of those attending. It is highly probable that the Battle Axe team, of which Joe Boehling was formerly a member, will attend in a body.

Manager Griffith, in the following letter has assured the people of Richmond that he will take care of them. There will be no trouble about tickets. Here is what the manager of the Nationals has to say:

Mr. Gus Maibert, Richmond Va.

Dear Sir.—In reply to your letter will say the Washington management will be only too glad to reserve seats for the excursion contemplated to be run to Washington on our opening day. However, I would greatly appreciate it if you would inform me about three days in advance just how many people there will be.

Awaiting your reply, I am,

Yours truly,

CLARK GRIFFITH.

the dogs set through the fields to Patterson Avenue. Then the course lay through Shafer's to Grove Avenue, thence to Cary Street to Sunnyside; thence on through Ball's to Williams's to a check at Williamsgate. The next cast was in Woodlawn, and it was a veritable steeplechase that galloped over the turf in Woodlawn and adjoining Place to a check at Patterson Avenue. The dogs were next cast in Adams's, and the course lay through Adam's to Butler's to a check at Westwood Lane. After a short check the dogs were thrown in back of Westview and followed the course to Colonel Hall's property, thence along to a finish over the jumps in front of the club.

Taken as a whole, in spite of the terrible heavy going, the hunt was voted the best of the season. There will be two more hunts of the Deep Run Hunt before the season closes.

Those riding were W. Ormond Young, F. H., riding High Ball, who is one of the best performers in this section; Harry C. Beattie, Jr., whip, riding Gate; Fred S. Campbell, whip, riding Megant; E. B. Sydnor, on Joe Mason; John Branch, Flat Foot; Erskine Buford, Brigadier; Miss Fanny Crenshaw, Her Grace; Miss Wa field Crenshaw, Quaker; W. B. Sydnor, Roy; E. D. Harris, Leesburg Boy.
