PRESIDENT WARNS CROWD IN TIME TO ESCAPE DANGER

People Jump from Track Near His Private Car as Another Engine Goes Past.

HARTFORD, CONN., September 1.—President Wilson tonight shouted a warning to a crowd that had gathered about his private car here just before another engine went past on the rails on which his car was standing. Two men and women had been standing in the track and jumped in time to escape the flying locomotive.

The crowd did not notice the oncoming engine in their anxiety to see the President, but he heard it coming. "Get off the track, a train is coming," shouted the President. The people heard him and retired from the tracks.

The President was in his car at work when his train stopped. A crowd of people all at once quickly assembled and called for the President to come out. He did not appear, but finally appeared on the observation platform. The men anxious to get him swarmed on to the track next to the one on which was his car.

The crowd was cheering when the President heard the noise of the approaching engine. After shouting the warning, he shook hands with all who could get to him before the train started.

"We are for you, Woodrow," shouted several men.

"Thank you very much," he replied. "I'm glad to see you all."
