THE ALMA RECORD.

FRIDAY, SEPT 18.

BY THE WAY.

I overheard a prominent Ohio lawyer the other day commenting upon the training of children. Said he: "The rigid discipline exercised by parents over their children a few generations past was, in many respects, a serious mistake. An established custom unhappily not yet wholly abolished, was the condemning of the young folks on the occasion of a dinner party or other festive event, to await the second table. How the minutes seemed like hours while waiting in an adjoining room to the tinkling of the merriment of the guests, and agonized by every appetizing smell wafted through the half shut door! Now such treatment was wrong from every standpoint and at my home-table places are not wanting for the entire family and such visitors as happen along. As a result my children, while not forward, have a becoming self-respect and suffer no such harmful infringement of their rights."

The roller rink season approacheth! Once again the enterprising editor will tell us that "the most striking thing about a skating rink is the floor," and the unlimited will emphatically prove it. When will this craze end? From the great cities comes reply "its demise is already accomplished and its huge amphitheatres for sale at a bargain." Soon this inevitable result will be universal. We come the glad tidings.

***

Yes, school days are once more on. Ah! my son, do you but know that they are, or ought to be, the happiest of your life, how differently would you feel, how much lighter would your heart be. Although I am now an old man and have passed through earth every phase of life, at most I recall my school days have I had the lightest heart and happy-go-lucky feeling come over me each day at noon. You may imagine how hard it was for me not allowed with some other boys to play in idleness the livelong day. Perhaps me such is not the case. Perhaps the story given you for the next day will be the spur becoming "a man" and by so proving yourself therein. And then, with a perfect recitation you pleased the teacher, your parents and your friends. Indeed, is there more happiness in school days than in any other period of life—if you will only look on the right side and act accordingly. Be good if you must, be playful at times, be joyous and free, but above all be earnest in your study, and thus become the pride of all who know you.

***

I heard a good one the other day on a present or absent minister between here and Saginaw. O no, not St. Louis, couldn't possibly happen that smart town. An inexperienced clergyman boarded a S. V. & St. L. train bound east, and when the conductor came through for the fare the passenger asked to pay cash for one mile to Shaw. The obliging conductor pointed out at the first station this side of Shaw that the inebriate seemed to be in the wrong place.

***

The following anecdote of Charles Dickens, related to me by an English gentleman illustrates his keen observation and lively fancy. During one of possessed by the great author on his second visit to this country while his steamer was moored off Hoboken he went on to see the sights of that city. The boat trade him the observed of observers, and while walking about the streets one morning noting whatever was strange to him at the shops and warerooms he chanced to read on a sign which brought from him a roar of laughter. It was that of a painted beehive and its accompanying inscription, which my informant copied as follows:

"Within this hive we are all alive,
Industry is our motto;
Honesty is our Sweetness of our honey."

OUR PREMIUM BOOK.

Our readers will see by announcement on the fourth page that we have made a fine offer, but we wish to add a few more words about the book. It is called the "Farmer's Companion, or a Manual of Practical Information," and is especially adapted to the use of Farmers and Mechanics. It was written by W. S. Courtney and carefully revised by Geo. E. Waring, which our readers will remember, is a practical farmer and authority upon all farm matters. Should a man desire to make a fence 80 money rods long he looks in the book and ascertains the number of posts and rails, or feet of boards and posts necessary for the purpose. If he wishes to find the number of acres in a given field, no matter how irregular its shape, he finds simple directions where for accomplishing the object. If he should desire to ascertain the number of bushels of grain a certain granary contains, he can there find simple rules for doing so. If he wished to find how many bushels of shelled corn were contained in a crib full of corn in the ear, he could here find how to do it. If he wished to know how many tons of hay a mow or stack or field contained, he would here find rules to work the problem. Should he wish to know the ages of his horses, cattle, sheep, goats he turns to his book and in an admirably illustrated article finds the desired information. The book also contains many valuable tables. For instance: tables of wages per day, per week and per month, from $1 up to $60; interest tables, compound and simple, at different rates; tables showing the number of feet in logs, planks, boards, etc. We might go on indefinitely, but this is enough to show something of the value of the book. We are sincere and honest in saying that we think no man will regret the money expended in its purchase. Remember the price of this book alone is $3.00 and we offer you it and the RECORD and this valuable book for $2.00 in cash. This offer holds good for 30 days only.

R. W. Dodge, of Jackson, has a relic of the war of 1812. It is a single barrel, flintlock pistol and was made in 1808 at Harper's Ferry. The weapon weighs 2 pounds and 10 ounces and has a ten inch barrel. It was probably manufactured for the United States government, as the figure of an eagle and the letters U. S. are cut in the side of the lock.
