MAPLE RAPIDS.

Correspondence of the RECORD.

Eber Cowles has been building a house for Oscar Ames and had the same nearly finished when some thief stole all of his tools. It is a hard blaw to Eber.

Thomas J. Hoxy has lost several of his turkeys recently—stolen. Such thieves should have a shot gun emptied into them. Lock your doors.

Justus Cooley had the misfortune to his barn and its contents by fire. His children carried matches to the barn and set it on fire. Mr. Cooley was no. at home at the time. We understand it was insured in the Watertown company.

Mrs. Armstrong has a son and daughter from Bay City visiting her. The son has rented the farm for a term of years.

Wheat sowing is competed and corn cutting is the order of the day.

Letter From Kansas.

EDITOR RECORD:—Thinking some of your readers might like to hear something of this boundless prairie I will endeavor to tell something of it.

A few days after leaving Alma, June 1st, 1884, we located here in one of the brightest spots in central Kansas and cannot better illustrate this fair garden spot than by giving a brief description of early pioneer life, and how different from that of the present day. Many of the early settlers loaded their families and a few traps into wagons and struck out for Kansas something like a score of years ago and drove their stakes on homesteads in this and adjoining counties, building dugouts, sod houses and board shanties, borrowing braces and puncheons from the land of non-residents along the river, and commenced the fight of life with but little to start on. It was then that the early struggles in Kansas were encountered. Not a tree or shrub could be seen upon the bleak prairie; many of them had no team or stock of any kind, and not a cent to supply the necessities of a family; as soon as they did commence to flourish the "grasshopper year" came to hand and sent many who had enough to pay their passage, "back east," away from homes that now are worth a fortune. Though the prospects of those remaining were not of the brightest they managed to pull through and times with them are changed somewhat now. The shanties and dugouts have been replaced by modern dwellings, commodious barns and out buildings, and through energy and industry the unbroken prairie has been made to "blossom like the rose." Many of the fine farms which overlook the Republican river for miles each way were settled only a few years ago by people who had comparatively nothing, but now have neat residences in the midst of the finest groves of the great west, all their surroundings indicate comfort and prosperity. They have made the past few years of bountiful crops tell and the old homesteads along Republican vall y that once could have been bought for almost nothing, are now very valuable pieces of property. A goodly share of the early settlers of this portion of the state were bachelors who lived alone in dugouts, but have thought better of themselves, captured companions and by united efforts have made their homes very desirable. As to the lay of the land, it is a beautiful rolling prairie which meets the horizon on either side and is fast becoming dotted with residences of the latest style, fine hedges and artificial groves all of which assist in making the scenery picturesque,—and thus we might continue did not time and space forbid.

Very Respectfully,
FRANK P. FLOWER.

A patent has been issued for an apparatus to run sewing machines. The inventors have succeeded in constructing an apparatus which is a reliable substitute for foot power, and which does away with the laborious and fatiguing treadle. The motive power is ordinary clock springs, arranged so as to run the motor with any speed desired by simply bearing the foot on a rest. A few moments winding up suffices to store enough power in the motor to run a sewing machine all day.

Bill Nye says: The newspaper of today is a library. It is an encyclopedia, a poem a biography, a history, a prophecy; a directory, a time table, a romance, a cook book, a guide, a horoscope, an art critic, a political resume, a ground plan of the civilized world, a low priced multum in parvo. It is a sermon, a song, a circus, an obituary, a picnic, a symphony of solid brevier, a medley of life and death, a grand aggregation of man's glory and his shame. It is in short, a bird's eye view of all the magnanimity and meanness, the joys and griefs, the births and deaths, the pride and poverty of the world, and all for two cents, sometimes.

Holmes: We must have a weak spot or two in a character before we can love it much. People that do not laugh or cry, or take more of anything than is good for them, or use anything but dictionary words are admirable subjects for biographies. But we don't always care most for those flat pattern flowers that press best in the herbarium.

Never try to hold a bushel if designed to hold a peck,
Or outreach the cranes and camels with your half inch of a neck;
Never try to race with dolphins, if you cannot even swim,
Or try to challenge hawks for vision if your eyes be old and dim;
Never spread a grain of butter over fifty yards of bread,
Or attempt with penny trumpets to awaken up the dead.
Not every stick of timber that is fit to make a mast,
Not every structure builded is a pyramid to last;
Not every piece of music is an anthem or a psalm,
Not every growing sapling that is pine or lofty palm;
Yet every mossy atom has its own peculiar grace,
And each its perfect usefulness or beauty in its place.

Those truths are old and hoary, yet we need them every day,
To reconcile our longings to the limits of our way:

The only true philosopher is he who learns content,
Though quartered in a palace or sheltered in a tent;
Whose cheerful soul is ready, to encompass what it can,
Nor vex itself in criticising God's eternal plan.

OUR PREMIUM BOOK.

Our readers will see by announcement on the fourth page that we have made them a fine offer, but we wish to add a few more words about the book. It is called the "Farmer's Companion; a Manual of Practical Information," and is especially adapted to the use of Farmers and Mechanics. It was written by W. S. Courtney and carefully revised by Geo. E. Waring, who, our readers will remember, is a practical farmer and authority upon all farm matters. Should a man desire to make a fence so many rods long he looks in the book and ascertains the number of posts and rails, or feet of boards and posts necessary for the purpose. If he wishes to find the number of acres in a given field, no matter how irregular its shape, he finds simple directions there for accomplishing the object. If he should desire to ascertain the number of bu hels of grain a certain granary contains, he can there find simple rules for doing so. If he wished to find how many bushels of of shelled corn were contained in a crib full of corn in the ear, he could there find how to do it. If he wished to know how many tons of hay a certain loft or stack or field contained, he would here find rules to work his problem. Should he wish to know the ages of his horses, cattle, sheep, goats he turns to his book and in an admirably illustrated article finds the desired information. The book also contains many valuable tables. For instance: tables of wages per day, per week and per month, from $3 up to $50; interest tables, compound and simple, at different rates; tables showing the number of feet in logs planks, boards, etc. We might go on indefinitely, but this is enough to show something of the value of the book. We are sincere and honest in saying that we think no man will regret the money expended in its purchase. Remember the price of this book alone is $2.00 and we offer you the two, the RECORD and this valuable book for $2.00 in cash. This offer holds good for 30 days only.

We have just received from the publisher a neat new book, containing plans and specifications for twenty-five houses of all sizes, from two rooms up, also engravings showing the appearance of houses built from the plans given. In addition it has valuable information of permanent and practical value on subjects relative to building and building contracts that cannot fail to be of value to those who intend to build. Geo. W. Olgivie & Co., 236 Lake Street, Chicago, are the publishers and will mail it on receipt of 25 cents, to any address.
