Ardmore, Friday, April 2, 1909

There crazy Kiser of the district ought to have with the same amount of salt used with other snake stories.

Crazy Snake is not an idiot for that he knows when the odds are against him.—Sperry Tribune.

Crazy Snake's ambition appears to be the presumption of the tribe in the public affections recently made vacant by the death of the lamented Geronimo.—Kansas City Times.

The corporation commissioners at Tulsa serving under the new charter adopted in that city are charged with using too much secrecy in their work. The Democrats contended at that town takes a serious fall out of them. They are charged with withholding information that should be given to the public.

New Joe Norris and Chas Cade and Herb House should explain that they never asked President Taft for any jobs for themselves. Otherwise they will have a lot of mad republicans all over the state. Organizations are not elected to ask jobs for themselves. They are supposed to ask jobs for the fellows who elected them.—McAlester News-Capital.

Days in Ardmore are becoming strenuous like they were once in Beaumont. Companies are being organized, drillers are being acquired and drilling machinery purchased. Leases are being taken and promises being made. Fortunes look up in the near future and money is becoming plentiful. Every man who has no lease wants one. Lands are soaring high and profit taking is the order of the day. Oil men from other sections of Oklahoma, from Texas, Ohio and Pennsylvania are here. They mean business. Drills will start to the east, northeast, west and to the south before the tenth day of this month. There is something doing in southern Oklahoma.

Mr. Roosevelt, the president of the Lake, and farmers from the vicinity reported that their guns heard such a racket as was caused on the lake Friday night in the butchering of geese, brant and other wild fowls. Hundreds of thousands of geese and brant, swans, gull, duck, herons and other birds spend the lake all night and keep up such a racket that families in the vicinity couldn't sleep. Jim Which said that the geese and brant that he saw should most have covered at least forty acres. There were also a great many cranes. Brant also flew over the city all night and are supposed to have left for their northern home.—Paris News.

Gee! What kind of goods has the Daily News again been stuck for?

That section of Oklahoma which is favored with great interest to the state. When that being a Santa Fe News surrounds yourself with gilt land from every county in the state and reside about the usual character law and believe in the freeze that it must be defeated the very foundation of the state will be shaken. If at any time today or tomorrow you feel the earth trembling under you, remember the quake and do not become frightened. Joe Norris since the campaign last fall has been spending his time in Washington seeking an office for himself and his secretary, Herb House. The republican press of the state has scored him for being selfish. There were other republicans wanting the jobs and they asked for the help of their leader Norris, but he has been too busy working for himself to give help to the rank from the party. Now he has come home to the state for the purpose of running back the influence of the followers. He should before he reaches the state find that there has been an election last year. A Napoleon once member of the 3rd legislative district last fall was elected on a platform to change the district law. The members of the republican section this law will be heard and when it is passed Norris will be the author of that law. He has not been a party to the mischief of knocking the Democrats out of holding the offices of the state.

Oklahoma is to be publicized in a massive volume. Part of the funds made in years previous and some has gone to the compilation of the work. Some time ago the state appropriated $5,000 for the work. Some time last year the state paid out $2,500 more. The work is now in the hands of the publication committee. The work will be printed and bound in Oklahoma. It will be a work of great interest to the state. The publication committee has been very careful in the selection of the material
