ALL ARE NOW FOR GOOD ROADS

KANSAS COUNTIES ARE KEEPING THE STATE ENGINEER BUSY ON ACTUAL ROAD WORK.

A CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION

His Advice and Instruction in Materials and Methods Are at the Disposal of County and Township Officials—Department Needs Money.

Topeka, Sept. 12.—Kansas experts in road the work of the Good Roads Day passed in the workers last week. The new state engineer recently appointed as a member of the faculty of the state agricultural college, at Manhattan, is on the point of actually road work, instructing the county and township road officials, superintendents, commissioners of bridges, superintendents to ascertain the best materials for use in durable roadbeds and bringing to every way to promote the campaign of education for modern highways which is just now starting in the Kansas farmers.

This week the state engineer has been sent to southern Kansas where the services have been requested in the matter of bridge building. It is the purpose of Governor Stubbs and the regents of the college to utilize the road fund for showing more improved road made as well as to keep the different counties in actual operation. The demand upon the department within the few months since it was established indicate that Kansas has realized the mistake made by the short sightedness of the last legislature in refusing to provide for a more efficient part. A bill introduced by Representative Case of Dickinson county last winter provided for a department at Topeka with sufficient help in the office to enable the state engineer to carry on extensive work, and gives the engineer ample authority to enforce effective methods. The measure passed the house carrying with it a provision for a motor car tax that would have contributed revenue almost sufficient to bear the expense. When the bill was introduced in the senate by George H. Hodges the sentiment in that body could not see enough merit in the bill to justify its enactment. The limited means provided therefore in the department that was created in another tribute Kansas is paying for cheap politics.

But Governor Stubbs and the agricultural college regents are determined that the communities that desire to cooperate with the state engineer in road building shall have all the help that can be given under the circumstances. Any county or township may obtain the assistance of the state engineer upon application to the agricultural college for his services, and any county engineer or road superintendent may ask and obtain his advice in the laying out of highways, the improvement of roads, material to be used or in the making of specifications for road building.

Subjects of the forthcoming conference of the National Civic Federation, which will be held in Washington the first part of next January include labor, employers' liability, workmen's compensation, insurance, railway rates, the tariff, the insurance, the [illegible] Pure Food Laws, laws relating to women, child statistics, public health and good roads.

Bookmen continue to figure on having the most hazardous occupation in Pennsylvania for of the number of deaths in its ranks 43, or nearly one-third of the total of 141, were bookmen, and the number of deaths is greater than in any other class of employes. At the same time the number of persons injured was 104, far more than the injuries in any other class, and nearly one-third of the total injured. The same ratio prevailed in each quarter.

One of the most important of many matters to be taken up at the session of the Woman's National Trades Union League, which is to open its first meeting in Chicago, September 27, will be to arrange to secure national legislation for an eight-hour day for all women tailors and to arrange eight work, wages as in workrooms.

The bookbinding trades council of San Francisco, Cal., has given notice to the affiliated unions that all persons belonging to the unions must comply with the laws of the country in the matter of working conditions, and it proved that a serious handicap if there are members of the organized workers which is said to be having material were paid to a branch in the month.

In France the matter of women and child labor in the trades is at present in that country have a law which provides that whenever it appears advisable to prohibit the employment of women or children in employments that are dangerous to health or morals, or in employments in excess of their strength, the people in charge a prohibitory order, and that is all there is to it.

An agreement has been reached between the International Union of United Brewery Workers and the International Union of Steam Engineers in regard to a jurisdictional dispute as to which organization the engineers should be members of. It was decided that the matter be left to a referendum vote and the majority of votes shall decide in which union the engineers shall be. The result is to become effective January 1, 1910.

Labor union have for a long time recognized the necessity for uniform labor laws among the states. On this point Charles P. Neill, United States commissioner of labor argues that there should especially be uniformity in the laws regarding employers' liability, the guarding of dangerous machinery, industrial hygiene, compulsory reports on accidents and the compulsory registration of deaths, whether fatal or to permanent, etc. He also favors uniformity of legislation regulating the employment of women and children, the hours of labor of all employes in industrial occupations, factory and mine inspection and all matters made products.
