255 DAYS

have elapsed since the day on which Mr. [illegible] definitely promised that a [illegible] supply of pure drinking water should be delivered to this town through the pipes and that Tulsa has not yet been delighted.

The contention of THE WORLD is not and has never been that Mr. [illegible] is a liar, but it does contend that the water department has failed to do the thing delivered it in the most specific manner.

ATTORNEY GENERAL WEST'S CHALLENGE.

Attorney General West comes out with a square challenge to Judge Robert L. Williams to a series of joint debates on what the attorney general terms the chief issues of the campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor. The challenge is there, plain and up to date, and the judge has entirely ignored its receipt and its existence. Perhaps he has not read it, and we would hate to suspect that he is ungracious to the point of discourtesy.

It has been believed, because of that fact, Williams' campaign has been conducted on a dignified plane, and that he expected for The Issue of the people that "sweet" Democratic harmony would be maintained throughout the campaign. Perhaps he intends to do all of the talking himself and, with Vernon and Fitzhugh, he may be able to do it. But, the challenge is there, and it will stick in his craw until he has taken it up or else has given a satisfactory explanation why he does not do so.

It may be that he does not relish the idea of the debate, or it may be not with the Attorney General, but he believes he can "handle the voters" better than his opponent. We do not know, but we do know that he is a shrewd politician, and we believe he is as sure as he has ever been of any thing in his life that he can defeat West in a debate.

We think, too, that he feels he is on the right side of the issue, and he may be not willing to discuss the issue with West, for fear he may be defeated in argument. We believe he is honest in his belief that the Democratic party of Oklahoma is not ready for the adoption of the initiative and referendum, and he may be willing to discuss that phase of the issue with West, but he may not be willing to discuss the other issues with West, for fear he may be defeated in argument.

We believe Williams is honest in his belief that the Democratic party of Oklahoma is not ready for the adoption of the initiative and referendum, and we believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat West in a debate on the issue. We believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat West in a debate on the other issues, and we believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat West in a debate on the issue of the initiative and referendum if he can get West into a debate on the other issues.

We believe West is honest in his belief that the Democratic party of Oklahoma is not ready for the adoption of the initiative and referendum, and we believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat Williams in a debate on the issue. We believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat Williams in a debate on the other issues, and we believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat Williams in a debate on the issue of the initiative and referendum if he can get Williams into a debate on the other issues.

We believe West is honest in his belief that he can defeat Williams in a debate on the issue. We believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat Williams in a debate on the other issues, and we believe he is honest in his belief that he can defeat Williams in a debate on the issue of the initiative and referendum if he can get Williams into a debate on the other issues.
