This Simple Laxative A Household Necessity

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Should Have a Place in Every Home.

Constipation, or inaction of the bowels, a condition that nearly everyone experiences with more or less frequency, is the direct cause of much disease. When the bowels become clogged with refuse from the stomach, foul gases and poisons are generated, and unless the congestion is quickly relieved the system becomes weakened and most susceptible to attack. Various remedies to relieve constipation are prescribed, but many of these contain cathartic or purgative agents that are harsh and violent in their action and shock the system. The most effective remedy is the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

The Hon. John D. Keister of Brandywine, W. Va., who has represented his district in the State Legislature for six years, writes that he uses Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and finds it a splendid laxative, easy to take and mild, yet positive, in its action, and that it should be in every household for use when needed.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists in all parts of the United States and costs only fifty cents a bottle. It contains no opiate or narcotic drug, does not gripe, and is recommended as a family laxative mild enough for the tiniest babe, yet sufficiently powerful to act easily on the strongest constitution.

To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Ben Newsome

Lesson October 15, Acts 25.

Since our last lesson Felix was succeeded as governor of Judea by Festus and one of the first acts of the new ruler was to visit the chief city of his dominion and "make himself solid" with the influential citizens of that place. This had been some two years since Paul's trial before Felix, and all that time the apostle had been a semi-prisoner in Caesarea, what you might call on parole of honor. But when the new governor arrived at Jerusalem the old-time enemies of Paul took the opportunity to ask as a favor that Festus bring his prisoner down to Jerusalem for trial. This looked like a reasonable request, and we may be sure Festus was expected to do a great many things to pave the way for pleasant relations with the people he had to govern. The plan was, of course, that a waylaying party would see to it that Paul was disposed of for good before another trial was held. Festus could not be expected to know this, but he had the fairness to ask the prisoner if he was willing to this arrangement. Paul's reply was that he had done no wrong to Jewish law or custom, and that, as he was accused of stirring up sedition, he was entitled to trial before a Roman court. To return him to Jerusalem would virtually be to surrender him to the malice of those who had sought his life. Rather than run the risk of the governor's assenting to the wishes of the Jews, he forestalled any further controversy by appealing to the emperor, the last resort of every Roman citizen in any part of the world. This left Festus with no alternative but to send him to Rome as he had requested, and thus were the Jews again foiled in their scheme of revenge.

Another official appears in this lesson, King Agrippa, a potentate who owed his power to the good will of Rome. His authority seems to have been more directly over the Jews distinctively, although he in turn was responsible to the governor who was the official agent of Caesar. This man came from the house of Herod, a line of kings springing from the Idumeans, a race close of kin to the Hebrews, but yet far from them in religion and national sympathy. Not one of them, as far as we have any record, was a credit to himself or his people, but the government of Rome evidently thought they were conceding something to racial pride and Hebraic loyalty in keeping up a useless monarch as a figurehead. The effort of these men was to gradually absorb Jewish prejudice by diluting it with Greek and Roman ideas, the same as Rome afterwards did to Christianity by adopting its profession while retaining the pagan forms that were familiar. This Agrippa comes into the lesson through a visit of courtesy to Festus, during which the case of Paul was discussed. Agrippa's curiosity was roused and he desired to hear the words of the apostle at first hand. Paul made a notable address before this man and Festus also took up the argument, the governor's idea being to discourage the Jews from what he esteemed to be a truitless prosecution. To Festus and Agrippa the peculiar thing about Paul was that he claimed that a man who had been crucified was still alive and had a power greater than any earthly monarch. The spiritual part escaped them, just as it does many a modern philosopher, whose investigation in its material conception has never fathomed the truths of spirituality, which, as Paul said, was a thing that to the Greeks was an absurdity. But Paul had no hesitation or timidity in speaking for Christ before good or bad, Jew or Gentile, just as long as opportunity presented itself to drive home the truth of the gospel to a sinful soul. "It is enough for the disciple that he be as his teacher, and the servant as his Lord."
