DANIEL BORDER.
Bedford, May 22, 1857.

The Pacific war, between brother and brother, and for no other reason than that they hope that in the anarchy and confusion which would ensue, the darling projects of their lives, the abolition of slavery and the civil and social equalization of the white and black races, would be accomplished. Now let us see whether the Republicans of Bedford county, will be true to their oft repeated declarations that they are in favor of giving the South her rights. Let us see whether they will have the courage to repudiate such men as Wade and his co-workers when they denounce the Fugitive Slave Law. Let us hear them speak out if they are honest in their boasted conservatism. What say you to Mr. Wade, Messrs. Republicans?

He took a strong stand for the Union, and against the right of a State to secede, denouncing such an act as treason."
If Senator Wade vindicated the position of the "Republican" party, then the position of that party must be one of hostility to the Fugitive Slave Law, because Mr. Wade says that
