Who Will Not Pay the Full Price

By EDITH C. JOHNSON

Within a few days, that is on April 21, the fifth and last Liberty loan campaign will be launched in the United States.

As in all previous Liberty loan campaigns the women of this country will be expected to take an active and vigorous part and to raise of the $4,500,000,000 it becomes necessary for every patriotic woman in the country to lend a hand in this great and last task of the world war.

"Why should the government ask for a huge sum of money when the war is over?" some persons may ask.

In the first place, the war will not be over until the terms of peace have been decided and every soldier and drafted man has been released to his country and been given an honorable discharge. I will say that we will be under heavy expense, not so great as in the past, but still great enough to demand substantial support and assistance from the civilian population. The Fourth Liberty loan was subscribed not only to provide for future indebtedness but to pay bills incurred during the six months previous to that time. The same is true of the Victory loan. Our government must have money. But one of most desirable of the future has to pay war bills that are now coming due. That is the reason we, people of the Victory loan as the "Price of Peace."

To Bring Them Home.

Mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of men who are still overseas—a part of this Victory loan will be used to bring your men folks home to you. Just as the government was calling upon the people one year ago to provide funds for sending hundreds of thousands of men into the overseas army, so it is calling again upon the people to furnish sufficient money to bring those same men home to you.

Another share of this Victory loan will be used to rehabilitate and rejuvenate men who have been maimed or seriously wounded and who, on account of their disabilities, will not be able to follow their former trades and occupations. There are thousands of these men who are receiving vocational training, and while they are being trained, the army must support and pay them. With your approval and with mine, the government promised every man who went into service, that if he should be disabled, it would train him for some new form of usefulness. It would not turn him out of the army to struggle singlehanded for an existence. On the contrary, it would endeavor to educate him to make a better living, if possible, than he had made before. We must now redeem our purpose—and we cannot redeem it unless we loan to the government, by purchasing gilt-edge securities, such sums as will enable it to carry on this great work of justice.

Quick End a Surprise.

When on the memorable day of November 11, the armistice was signed, we had placed on French soil, millions of shells, thousands of guns, airplanes, tanks, motors and supplies of every kind which would enable our soldiers to give the Hun a few more doses of the same medicine he had been compelled to swallow at Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood. In our moments of wildest optimism, we had not dreamed we could be so fortunate as to end the war as soon as we did. But, as we found our force, it was the magnitude of our preparations as well as the efficiency of our fighting men that convinced the enemy at the eleventh hour of going on with the war. Whether it was had not manufactured and purchased so lavishly, the war might be going on this very hour, or we might have had an unanswerable peace with Germany as the victor.

These things we must consider as we approach the hour for the Victory loan. We have achieved that thing which we longed for—an early victory and peace. And what a paltry price it is we are asked to pay for them, when we consider that we came out of the world struggle as no other nation involved in it, with a comparatively small number of casualties, with our lands undevastated, with our industries intact, with greater prosperity and brighter prospects than we have enjoyed in years.

"Not subscribe this Victory loan? What a terrible indictment of our morals, our patriotism, our character as a people! It would be tantamount to admitting, "We have gained the moral, political and material victory we wanted, but our souls—they are dead."

NATIONAL DRIVE IN FINDING EMPLOYMENT

Churches Throughout Country Enlist in Campaign to Find Jobs for Soldiers and Sailors.

All the churches and church organizations in the country have enlisted in an intensive national campaign to assist the United States employment service and co-operating agencies in finding jobs for soldiers, sailors and war workers.

A feature of this drive will be the observance of Sunday, May 4, as "Employment Sunday" in every church in the United States. On that day, clergymen, Bible class teachers and special speakers will appeal for support of the work of the United States employment service and urge employers to keep all local offices of the federal employment service and its bureaus for returning soldiers and sailors.

The churches also will appoint special committees of business men to assist in canvassing employment openings for soldiers, sailors and war workers in their communities.

The idea of "Employment Sunday" was originated by the committee on reconstruction at home of the Methodist Episcopal church and adopted by all other protestant denominations through the war-time commission of the federal council of churches. The national committee of Northern Baptist laymen endorsed the plan today. The action of the war-time commission means that "Employment Sunday" will be observed in approximately 150,000 churches in all parts of the country.

The Catholic churches already are at work interesting their congregations and organizations in employment for soldiers and assisting the federal employment service and for several weeks have been systematically urging "jobs for soldiers" from pulpit and through special speakers.

All churches are being asked to include in their classified and display advertising an appeal to local employers to keep their employment openings registered with the local office of the federal employment service or bureau for returning soldiers and sailors, which is located at 405 South Main street, Tulsa, Okla.
