POINDEXTER CHARGES WILSON AIDING REDS

Washington Senator Declares President's Attitude in Europe and at Home Helps Communists.

ATTACKS OUR SOVEREIGNTY

I. W. W.'s and International Movement Spurred on By Wilson Involves Our Independence.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 8.—Senator Poindexter of Washington, speaking before the republican club of Cambridge tonight, declared a dual attack was being made against the independence of the United States and charged President Wilson with aiding the movement.

"The independence of the United States is being attacked from two directions," said the Washington senator. "One, the internationale of the proletariat represented by the I. W. W., the radical socialists, the bolsheviists and anarchists, and the other a movement of certain elements of international business and international pacifists. Strangely each of these movements receives support from the other.

"In every country in Europe President Wilson has appealed to the socialistic element and they, in return, have from every country in Europe, supported his purpose. The socialist labor party in England, France and Italy, have supported every move he has made for an international government of which he is to be the head.

"Likewise, the president and his administration," the senator continued, "have reciprocally aided and encouraged the communists.

"Like certain international business men, the communists care nothing for the principle of nationality. Unlike them, however, they also care nothing for the principle of property. Such a doctrine is the worst foe of the working man and is destructive of American institutions. Encouragement it has received from the administration intensifies its menace.

"The supreme issue and the supreme duty of Americans is to revive in its full vigor the spirit of American nationality as we receive it from the inspired fathers and leaders of the republic and to defend against violence from below or the intrigue from above, individual security and national independence."

TWO PLANES MAKE LAP---THIRD MISSING

was compelled to come down the sea was reasonably calm and they expected no serious difficulty.

All the aviators agree that the first leg of the trans-Atlantic journey called for the most screve test and all are delighted at the way the two hydroairplanes performed. They say the new meteorological equipment stood up especially well.

Commander Towers said that the visibility throughout the trip was good.

The two planes flew at various altitudes during the trip, the N. C.-1 ascending at one point to 3,500 feet.

At times the two planes got out of sight of each other but they adhered closely to the schedule fixed before the start and flew up the harbor within 10 minutes of each other.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—With two of the three navy seaplanes which started from Rockaway, Long Island, this morning on the first leg of the trans-Atlantic flight arrived safely at Halifax, navy officials were bending every energy tonight to locating the third, missing since early in the afternoon. No report of the missing machine, the N. C.-4, commanded by Lieutenant Commander A. C. Read, has been received after the machine passed the destroyer McDermut, first station ship, located more than 60 miles north of Cape Cod and less than half way to Halifax.

Orders were issued at once sending the McDermut and the next ship beyond him, the Kimberly, in search of the missing seaplane. Commander Read had reported just before reaching the McDermut that the oil pump on one of his motors was giving trouble and he might have to come down. Later the N. C.-1 reported to Commander Towers in the N. C.-3 that the trouble had been repaired.

The navy department at midnight had received no further information regarding the missing N. C.-4 and officers were satisfied that the seaplane had been forced to descend, probably as a result of further trouble with the oil pump which began to work poorly soon after the machine left Rockaway. Officers believed Commander Read had been unable to pick up any passing vessels or any of the destroyers which lined the route.

Less Than 9 Hours.

Commander Towers, with the NC-1 and NC-3, made the trip to Halifax in less than nine hours, the distance on the map over the course they took being 525 miles. These two planes went through the test in such a fashion as to convince officers here that prospects for reaching Plymouth, England, the ultimate goal of the navy airmen, were exceedingly bright.

Each of the three planes had a triple radio installation when it left Rockaway. One was that the telephone by which they communicated with each other while in flight, at a distance of a score or more miles.

Stations and guard ships "listened in" on many of these conversations and reported them.

The second set was the regular long distance radio installation and the third was the equipment for the radio compasses.

As the planes approached one of the patrol vessels, long before it was sighted, the long distance radio was buzzing.

Questions and answers flashed back and forth, dealing to directions for navigation. Important communications were relayed to and from the speeding seaplanes some from Washington.

Communication Perfect.

The communications of the navy department worked out perfectly. Repeatedly messages from Commander Towers sent from his speeding flagship of the air squadron, the NC-3, reached the desks of officers here in a few minutes of the time they were sent.

Intercepted by any of the radio stations ashore or afloat on the chain reaching clear to Halifax, they were rushed to Washington on the navy's leased wire.

More difficulty will be experienced in getting word through promptly when the long trip from New Foundland to the Azores starts. When the fifth or sixth station ship has been left behind communication will have to speed ahead to be relayed back by cable. The destroyers can not communicate more than 250 miles by radio in day time and they will leave their posts after the last of the flyers has passed.

CAPE MAY, N. J., May 8.—The navy dirigible C-5, commanded by Lieutenant Commander E. W. Coil left the naval air base here at 2:25 o'clock today under sealed orders, bound for Montauk, N. Y., by way of Rockaway. As the airship left under sealed orders, naval officers were unable to confirm or deny reports that the C-5 was expected to go to Halifax, and would leave Rockaway tomorrow for Chatham, Mass. In addition to Commnader Coil, the C-5 carries two officers, who arrived here today from Washington, and four men.

SCOTTI DELIGHTS LARGE CROWD HERE

ner and lovely face. Mr. Gallager's voice is deep and resonant with a real sweetness of tone. He surpassed himself in the phrasing of a triumphant score after he had accomplished the death of Chim Fen.

Cavalleria Rusticana followed the Chinese opera and was well received.

Miss Francesca Peralta did the difficult role of Santuzza with unerring technique and very fair interpretation. Her voice was very clear and remarkably full. Miss Gean Gordon, contralto, portrayed Lola, and it was much regreted that her appearances were necessarily limited.

Appear Tonight.

Tonight these same artists will offer what is probably the most popular opera being voiced on the American platform today, "Madam Butterfly." The whole of Tulsa is expectant and the seats are showing a splendid advance sale. The doors will be closed at 8 o'clock. Everyone is trusting the doors will be handled with the same efficiency tonight as they were last night. Wonder of wonders! There was no commotion about seats and the three doors were used in admitting the crowd thereby eliminating the breath-losing, patient, exhausting hour or so that is usually spent in trying to put several thousand people through a space of three feet.

Tornado at Lake Charles.

LAKE CHARLES, La., May 8.—A number of persons were injured and a score or more buildings were wrecked when a tornado swept the town of Vinton, near here today. No one was killed according to a meager report reaching here. The tornado was followed by a heavy rain.

Scotti, Famed Baritone, Puffs on Cigarette As He Tells of His Art And Pr ses Oil City

He stood in the lobby of the Ketchum, smoking one cigaret after another. Scotti, the wonderful baritone—and greeted other members of his company of 99 as they arrived from a late special train, with a wave of the hand and a welcoming word.

Welcomed them as though they everyone hadn't sung together in Oklahoma City the night before and parted no later than 12 hours ago. But that's Scotti—affable, breezy, talkative, delighted to see everybody, even a reporter.

And how he did gesticulate as he told of the three weeks' tour that he is now in the midst of presenting three operas at Convention hall in Tulsa. L'Oracola and Cavalleria Rusticana last night, and Madame Butterfly this evening.

"Next year I shall have at least five operas," he said, "and one of them La Tosca, but I cannot sing that favorite on a tour where I sing every night—the role is too heavy. We will make the tour longer and visit more of these good cities in the southwest. Cities such as Tulsa should have a week of grand opera every year, something the lovers of music can look forward to regularly. I am interested in the financial success of this experiment only in so far as it enables me to estimate the appreciation of grand opera among the people. I find those in Oklahoma and Texas are thirsting for it. Cities like Tulsa, Memphis, Dallas, Oklahoma City and Houston should have a league that would enable them to hear the best."

He appeared not at all worn out from the strain of "government" travel, and though having gone through the usual worry of securing apartments upon arrival, something having gone awry and causing him to fail to get accommodations until 2 o'clock, after arriving at 9 o'clock in his private car, he had nothing but praise for everybody, and the city of Tulsa in general.

The great baritone has a pleasing manner, face and physique, a great expansion of chest telling of his vocal ability, though withal, not a robust man. Brown-eyed, smooth-shaven and dressed tastefully in a brown suit of pin checks, he might have been confused with any one of the dozen or more successful business men standing about in the lobby.

"Every city in which we have sung," he said, "has begged us to give them more nights of opera, but of course our plans were made and this was impossible.

Talks About Atlanta.

"I introduced grand opera into Atlanta, Ga., 10 years ago," he recalled in a reminiscent tone of voice. "I was asked to come. They told me they had 80,000 people and 30,000 of them were negroes. I asked, 'Will the negroes come to hear me sing?' 'We're afraid not,' they said. 'Have you an auditorium?' I asked. 'You wouldn't exactly call it that,' they said—and it wouldn't. 'It will cost you $18,000,' I told them, but it didn't disturb them. Fifty thousand people, no auditorium, and $18,000 to pay. I went as a study of what should be done in such a case to benefit the few lovers of music. My reception was an inspiration. The next year they built an auditorium, and they have their regular grand opera season each year. I go back often, a great city now, and I feel that I had my part in its cultural development."

After telling what a hard time he has making people believe the truth of his never having been married, and how really like men in ordinary walks of life he is, the world-famous Antonio Scotti went to his room for rest, making appointments to see some admirers at 5. "I always have tea at 5 or half past," he said. "Then I go to the auditorium for the evening."

BELGIUM DESERVES ALL, SAYS BISHOP

"Stricken Country Cannot Ask for Too Much," Says Head of Catholics in Oklahoma.

That Belgium cannot ask for too much in the final peace terms presented to the Germans is the opinion of Bishop Theophile Meershaert, of the Catholic diocese of Oklahoma and former resident of Belgium, who was a visitor in Tulsa Thursday.

"The Belgians saved the world for humanity and they are entitled to everything they ask for," said the bishop, "but since I am not familiar with the terms of the treaty I cannot say that Belgium is being fairly or otherwise treated. They certainly deserve everything they get."

Bishop Meershaert's former home was in Russeignies near Renels, but this particular section of the country was not laid waste on the occasion of the first German invasion. Other territory in the vicinity, however, was completely devastated.

The bishop announced Thursday that he would sail for Europe about the first of June, to be gone several months. During the trip he will visit the Holy Father at Rome and other European Catholics of note. The bishop is 72 years old and a full fledged American citizen. He has lived in America since 1874.

COURT OF INQUIRY PROBES LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS

Appointed by Judge Owen Owen of the district court, Albert C. Hunt, attorney, is conducting a court of inquiry in an effort to further enforce the prohibitory laws of Tulsa county. Judge Hunt explained last night that the activities of his court would be confined exclusively to violations of liquor laws and probably would be adjourned by the middle of next week. The proceedings of the court are kept secret.

SEERESS FORETELLS RETURN OF WOMAN

was supposed to have left Kansas city for Tulsa last Friday. Mrs. Moore, in company with a friend, visited the seeress Thursday afternoon. Because she had given her promise, Mrs. Moore refused to divulge the identity of the seeress, but admitted the seance. And the circumstances as borne out point to a remarkable coincidence or prove the powers of the clairvoyant.

While Mrs. Wall was nearing Tulsa on a Frisco train, her husband, E. Wall, was speeding toward Kansas City as fast as steam would take him, and husband and wife, each of the opinion that they were drawing near to one another, passed en route. Relatives last night wired to intercept Wall en route and it is probable that he will return home some time today.

Starts Home, Becomes Ill.

According to the story told by Mrs. Wall as repeated by relatives here, the Tulsa woman boarded her train in Kansas City last Friday after being helped to the street car by sister. Soon after she became ill and went to the home of a friend, near the union station in Kansas City, where she recovered slowly. Mrs. Wall told relatives Thursday night that her partial loss of memory was accompanied by a loss of interest in life—that she cared neither to come home or communicate with relatives in Kansas City. Thursday she recovered to the extent that she started home, exactly as the local seeress had said she would.

Mrs. Moore refused to state the name of the family friend in Kansas City where her lost sister stayed for the past week but reported Mrs. Wall swiftly recovering from the effects of her experience. It is said Mrs. Wall suffered from a similar attack about a year ago.

Mrs. Wall left Tulsa Monday, April 28, upon summons to the deathbed of her grandfather at her parents home, 4304 East Twenty-sixth street, Kansas City. Prior to her arrival there the grandfather died and the visit was then extended until Thursday evening. The last she was seen was while boarding a Kansas City street car en route to the union station from where she was to take the train to Tulsa.

PETERSON CHARGED WITH BREAKING HIS WIFE'S ARM

Alvin Peterson, who was arrested by police Thursday morning following a quarrel with his wife, it is said that Peterson struck his wife several times with a club, breaking her arm and administering severe cuts on the head and body, was released Thursday afternoon on $100 bond to appear before the municipal court Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Peterson, who was taken to one of the local hospitals, although still in a critical condition, is improving and probably will be released from the hospital Friday.

"I NEVER WAS ARRESTED BEFORE," HE TELLS COPS

"This is the first time in my life I have ever be arrested and I haven't had a drink tonight," said Lewis Blythe when he was brought to the police station Thursday night, alleged to have been selling booze on First street. On being searched at the station three pint bottles of liquor were found in his possession. He will be tried before the municipal court Friday afternoon.

Want Armenian Mandate

NEW YORK, May 8.—Seventy-five bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church in America have urged upon President Wilson acceptance by the United States of a mandate under the league of nations for Armenia and have received from the president a "sympathetic" reply, the Armenian press bureau announced tonight.

FOR HAIR-RAISING REX BEACH FIGHT SEE "THE BRAND"

Battle of Fists, as Only Author Can Create, Seen in a New Goldwyn Picture.

What would a Rex Beach drama be without a conflict? Always there is a terrific clash of wills and often a physical fight comes in some part of the play. The wonderful battle in "The Spoilers" never will be forgotten, and in "The Auction Block" and "Heart of the Sunset" there was no lack of violent action while in "Too Far to Fight" of course the scenes of battle furnished excitement of another kind. Yet in "The Brand" Rex Beach declares that there is the strongest clash of all because the mental condition of the combatants is more acute. He has pictureized his popular novel for Goldwyn and it comes to the Majestic theater beginning Sunday, for three days. Adv.
