Hoped to Beat Hawker Across; Predicted He Would Be Found

Capt. Raynham Traced Hawker's Course Across From Weather Reports.

RAN INTO TERRIFIC WINDS

Steamer Caught the Radio Signals and Flashed Them To Another Vessel.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., May 26.—Messages from London announcing the safety of Harry G. Hawker and his navigator, Lieut. Com. Mackenzie Grieve, spread through this city as rapidly as the airmen kept over it a week ago, starting the trans-Atlantic flight attempt which resulted a seven day wonder.

Believing who central for was perhaps greatest among the group of British aviators who had been preparing to follow in the Sopwith plane's uncertain wake.

Capt. Frederick P. Raynham, who was stopped on the attempt to follow Hawker by the collapse of his Martinsyde model, Greyhound, had held firmly to the belief that Hawker and Grieve would be found somewhere north of Scotland. The basis of his opinion lay in weather reports upon which he and Hawker jointly decided to start and subsequent reports of storm areas shown north of the Azores on the last map which Hawker saw before hopping off.

"This storm assumed the form of an era extending northwest from the Azores," said Raynham. "That meant that Hawker would first encounter northeast winds, then easterly winds, then a strong set of winds from the south, those from the south being continuous and stronger than the others.

"That would have blown him north on the course which the Mary presumably followed."

Further apparent substantiation of Raynham's theory was found in reports brought here by the British freighter Glendevon, which arrived last week from London after a stormy passage.

Clifford Nixon, wireless officer of the Glendevon, said that at 1:30 Monday morning, (Greenwich time) he overheard the steamer Sammanger sending to "DKA" the Sopwith's radio designation, proposing as 56 degrees 28 minutes north latitude, 30 west longitude. Subsequently the Sammager informed Nixon that it had sighted the red lights of a plane to the north.

A few hours later the Glendevon was overtaken by a northeast gale working down from the direction in which the red light, believed to have been that of the Sopwith plane, had disappeared.

This, according to Raynham's theory, was the storm which Hawker passed before being struck by the violent southerly blow.

The Glendevon sent out repeated calls to other ships, broadcasting the reported positions of the Sopwith and requesting that ships stand by to give aid, but received a response only from the cable ship Faraday.

The log of the Glendevon shows the development of the weather which Hawker went through and which Capt. H. W. Sudderby of the Glendevon said he stated at the time was so "tempestuous that no plane could live through it." During the 24 hours covering Hawker's flight the weather went from fine with light westerly winds and a moderate sea to a full gale with heavy rain in which the Glendevon rolled and strained heavily. Officers said that if Hawker had started a day earlier he would have met ideal conditions.

WILLING TO SHOULDER BLAME FOR BELGIUM

But the German Delegates Are Unwilling to Admit Germany Is Responsible for the War.

PARIS, May 25.—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau's thirteenth note to the allied council was delivered this morning. It is a rejoinder to the council's reply to the German note regarding responsibilities.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau insists that Germany's only responsibility is for the violation of Belgian neutrality, which it is ready to make reparation for, and declares that all the powers were responsible for the war, and that the material damage done was the work of the allied armies, as well as the Germans.

BERLIN, Saturday, May 24.—A semi-official statement issued today says German counter-proposals on the peace treaty would be presented at the beginning of the week. The document is based on the principle of right contained in Secretary Lansing's note.

It is added that the counter-proposals will attempt to remove "the contradiction in the added proposals whereby Germany's economic progress is rendered impossible, yet Germany is expected to bear the hardest economic impositions."

The statement says the note will make positive proposals showing what Germany can and can not do, and declare the fulfillment of certain requirements will only be possible through community of effort by Germany and her enemies. The statement expresses the opinion that the counter-proposals will be published in Berlin simultaneously with their presentation at Versailles.

COPENHAGEN, May 25.—Dr. Karl Renner, Austrian chancellor and head of the German-Austrian peace delegation, has addressed a note to Premier Clemenceau complaining over the delay of the peace conference in submitting the peace terms, which, he says, is imposing grave anxiety regarding the maintenance of peace and ordeals in our fatherland."

The overbearing lawyer—Ignorance of the law excuses no one.

The culprit—I'll be sorry for you, then, if you ever get into trouble!

Schoolmaster—And, I am just wondering, Tommy Jones, how I shall flog you.

Tommy—Please, sir, I should like it on the Italian system of penmanship—the heavy strokes upward and the down ones light.

LICENSE APPLICANTS RUSH HIGHWAY OFFICE

Force Is Not Adequate and Demand Is Away Ahead of Office Facilities for Handling It

(Special to The World.)

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 25.—The state highway department is forty days or so behind hand in its work of issuing licenses for the registration of motor vehicles. It is said that it will be 30 days before the backlog of work can be disposed of, and the department powers on such a basis that it can keep abreast of the demands for registration. The congestion is principally due to the fact that a special appropriation is necessary to enable the department to employ a sufficient force to handle the business. The appropriation was made by the legislature in its last session, but it was not available until April 1, the fiscal year beginning July 1 being the beginning of the fiscal year in which it was made by the legislature.

Motor license tags now being sent out by the department bear numbers in the 70,000 series, which represents more than one-half of the total number of cars registered in 1918. A member of the clerical force also pointed out that many applications are faulty, running in the proportion of about 200 in each 400, the latter figure being the average number of daily applications this year. In most instances owners fail to give motor numbers and engine information. Frequently the registrations have not been properly prepared, in one instance a draft did not bear the signature of the cashier who issued it. These deficiencies cause an exchange of correspondence and usually result in delays that mount into weeks rather than days.

The number of registrations made last year reached about 127,000, and it is believed that 200,000 is a fair estimate for this present year. Cars are now being checked under the supervision of the department, and it is the work of the department under the amendment upon the motor vehicle law, which was passed at the recent legislative session, to force upon the last group of registrations. Dealers and others are expected to refer the matter to the law, which provides that a license must be secured before June 1, and it is upon the law department that the burden of proof will rest in case the law is broken.

The problem for each county clerk is a difficult one, and it is expected that many complaints will be made to the county officials. Many of the county clerks have asked for more help in the matter of issuing licenses, but the department has not been able to furnish them with additional help. It is said that the department will be able to furnish some help to the county clerks after June 1, when the law becomes effective.
