EIGHTH AGAIN PROVES FATAL INNING FOR THE OILERS

TULSA'S CHANCES EXPIRE ON BASES

St. Joseph Evens Series by Winning 4-2 Session at McNulty Park.

THOMASON FAILS TO APPEAR

Burke Forced to Fill In at Center in Spite of His Crippled Condition.

BY CHARLES J. BELL.

One more game gone down the same old sewer hole, one more game sincerely won in the early going lost in the stretch drive in the same old fatal eighth. Once more failure to produce hits at the right time left Tulsans hanging on all the varnish, there to die. Fifteen men left stranded on bases. This tells the story of Tulsa's 4 to 2 defeat at the hands of St. Joseph yesterday afternoon at McNulty park.

The papers attack of the home-lings when the day before had electrified Tulsa fandom and aided the oilers through to their most impressive victory of the season was conspicuous by its absence yesterday. It showed for a flash in the opening round but quickly faded before the sweeping curves of long, lean, lanky Williams. It was the same old story from the third when after Dilts had walked, stolen second and made third on a bad throw, Cleveland, Slattery and Davis struck out in succession.

Breaks Unfavorable.

There is a certain amount of consolation however, in the fact that in three vital occasions the "breaks" were anti-Tulsa.

The first piece of mis-luck broke in the fourth. Goodwin opened up with a long drive to center which looked good for three bases. Goodwin had turned second by the time Pitts had reached the ball and an absolutely perfect relay by Kelleher caught Pep as he slip into third. The call was against the home team in the play that precipitated St. Joseph's winning rally in the eighth when Umpire Holmes ruled that Burke had trapped Pitts' Texas leaguer. It also was contrary to Tulsa fortunes when Wuffli was called out on a very close force play at second in the last of the eighth stopping an Oiler counter-rally. These last two plays are mentioned, not to criticize Umpire Holmes who has been giving eminent satisfaction, but to call attention to the fact that the fate of the game would have been different had the benefit of doubts been tilted Tulsaward. The time has passed, however, when Tulsa fandom is going to be satisfied with "what might have been." Results are going to be taken into consideration and the team's popularity is to be governed strictly according to the number of games won and lost.

Locals Off in Lead.

The locals were first to make the circuit. Thomason, the new outfielder secured from Sioux City in exchange for Hal Brokaw, having failed to pur in an appearance it became necessary to send Burke into center, crippled though he is. Jimmy opened up auspiciously by smashing one over Pitts' head for two bases. Wuffli boosted him to third with a sacrifice and then he rambled home on Dilts' drive to the rightfield barrier. Neither Cleveland nor Slattery could produce.

Butcher knotted the count in the second by lifting one into the Midland Valley right-of-way.

Four Tulsans became base runners in the second but not one could complete the circuit. In the fourth it looked like a cinch for further scoring when Dilts walked, stole second, and went to third on Brennigan's bad heave to second. Looks proved deceiving, for Cleveland, Slattery and Davis were all strike-out victims.

Tulsa went into the lead in the fourth. Goodwin opened with a long smash into center, a cinch for two bases and good enough for three, but Manion then doubled and after Salisbury had fanned, Burke chased Manion home with a single.

Three reached first in the fifth and three in the sixth, yet they never got far enough to count.

Lost in Eighth.

As usual, the tide turned in the eighth. Pitts lifted a Texas leaguer into center. It would have been a cinch for Burke had he not been crippled, but it was a hard play under the circumstances and he got the ball at the ground. To home fans it looked as if the ball had been caught, but Umpire Holmes held that it had touched the ground and the runner was declared safe. There advanced him by a sacrifice. There were two down when Goodwin lofted out Kelleher. The former major leaguer having already secured a homerun and a three-bagger, Butcher was given free transportation to first. He stole second and then scored close behind Pitts when Bonowitz singled to right. Brubaker walked and then Beall drove one over first for tow bases, scoring Bunowitz.

DAILY DOPE

With almost three months of play left it is still a difficult proposition to dope the probable finish in the Western league. Several clubs have shown more strength than others, but recent changes in various lineups, with the unexpected strength shown by some and as unexpected weakness by others in the past two weeks of play makes a most complex situation.

The race in Tearney's wheel is unusually close and exciting and is one of the best in the history of the league. With at least four clubs having an even chance to cop, no one could pick the winner with any degree of certainty.

Tulsa, strengthened by the acquisition of new men, will be in the race from now on. With the club as it is now Manager Abbott presents one of the most formidable clubs in the league with a slashing attack and capable defense.

Bill Jackson has a powerful club at Omaha and the Omahogs must be figured strongly, as Pa Rourke will go to any length to get a winner. Des Moines is still dangerous, though the Boosters have lost some of their early season punch. These two clubs, seem to be the nines the Oilers must beat out.

Jack Holland's Indians have been playing over their heads ever since the start of the season. The capital city nine is not a pennant winning club potentially and it is hard to figure them better than third or fourth. Sioux City looks better than Oklahoma City. Joplin is not a first division club, despite six defeats administered to the Oilers in seven games. Just why the Saints are in seventh place is a mystery. Cozy Dolan has a great hitting gang and though not presenting a strong defense, should be up higher. The Izzies are where they will probably be all summer—last place.

Tulsa, Des Moines and Omaha look to be the clubs that will battle for the rag, with Oklahoma City and Sioux City fighting for fourth. St. Joseph is a better bet for sixth than Joplin.

Tom Fairweather is fortunate in having a most loyal bunch of fans at Des Moines or he would have lost much supphor since the disposing of Outfielder Murphy to Washington. When the speedy slugging fly chaser was sold to the Griffs the Boosters were leading the league. And with Murphy's sale, the club started a losing streak and have fallen from a big lead to third place. This selling of players before the end of the season by minor league moguls is one of the greatest mistakes they could make and does the game a great injury. Some much needed reform by those who seek to better the game could be made by passing a rule prohibiting th edisposing of minor league players before the end of the season.

Western league magnates took an important step in adding to the popularity of the game by deciding upon the double umpire system for the balance of this season. Optimistic reports from the league meeting at Kansas City Tuesday indicate that the game has come back in great shape around the Western wheel and that the league is experiencing one of its greatest seasons, both financially and artistically. Not only does the double umpire system add to the speed of play and insure better results, but it also adds considerable prestige.
