LILIAN CRAWFORD PERKINS

Banners of Peace.

The purple iris rises now in row
On royal lineage-line. In Bourbon France
As white as purity is dress of love Their glory. Gleam upon friends by enhance Then sudden in brilliant colors in show
In kaleidoscope of gold with silver lance
Now as then, white and red, and yellow Bow to the Lord as royal blue glow.
The banner flowers Drum some hand
Bear Lights
But being gifted the brave dead
Keep striving Still carrying banners All triumphant and hope
Like those flags of old memorial night
Lilies now bloom permanent, the graves among
Grow to purpose formal. Yet forever bright
