ROMANCE REVEALED IN ESTATE BATTLE

Wealthy American Marries Spanish Dancer, Deserts Her, and Elopes With Wife's Cousin.

TAVERN KEEPER AFTER FUND

Wants Share of Winan's Millions of Baltimore for Grandchildren—Conference Opens in Paris

PARIS, Aug. 13.—The romantic story of a wealthy young American's love for a beautiful Spanish dancing girl, their marriage, his alleged elopement with his wife's pretty cousin and the death of the dancer, a broken hearted, alone, was revealed today at a conference of representatives of the millionaire Winans and Whistler families of Baltimore, Md., and Lenox, Mass., and a gaunt, grizzled faced old Spaniard, the father of the unfortunate beauty.

The conference marked the opening gun in an amazing international legal battle for the millions of Ross D. Winans, Baltimore and N. Y. millionaire, whose son Thomas Winans, eleven years ago married Virginia Delgrado, daughter of an old tavern keeper in the Spanish town of Malaga, Spain, and famous as "the most beautiful girl in the Spanish peninsula." For the sake of her children, the old tavern keeper of Malaga is seeking to obtain a share of the fortune of their dead grandfather, estimated at between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000, a sum that would make them two of the wealthiest children in the world. He is striving to obtain custody of the children at the same time.

Objects Strongly.

The Winans and Whistler families are attempting to have the children given over to the care of their father, who is now living in Switzerland. At the conference today in a dingy little court room of the ninth Paris district, the old Spaniard opposed such action so vehemently that the decision was finally postponed a fortnight to give the Winans and Whistlers time to offer evidence that the children's father is a suitable person to have them in charge.

The story begins in the ancient Spanish town of Malaga 12 years ago, where old Delgrado kept a little tavern. His two daughters, Maria and Victoria, were locally famous as dancers and were called the most beautiful girls in all Spain. So persistent became the attentions of their many suitors that the old Spaniard used to mount guard with a gun over the stairs leading from the drinking room of the tavern to the quarters where the girls and their mother lived.

Foreign tourists, attracted by stories of the charming dancers, visited the tavern. The Maharajah Kapurthala, one of the most influential and wealthiest of Indian princes, fell violently in love with Maria, convinced the tavern keeper that his affection was not of a passing nature and finally married the girl. Their married life has been one of unalloyed happiness. Then young Winans, who had been touring Europe, arrived in Malaga, became infatuated with Victoria and married her in 1908.

Deserts Wife.

A boy and a girl was born to this marriage. A few years later, according to Arthur Valabrogue, the journey for the children, the American began to neglect his wife and eventually deserted her, eloping with her black-eyed cousin, Carmen Garcia, another noted beauty. At first, the attorney says, Winans allowed her 3,000 pesetas monthly but the payments became irregular and the dancing girl was forced to sell her jewels to save her babies from starvation.

Meanwhile Ross Winans died in Baltimore, leaving a fortune. Victoria wrote Ross Whistler, a member of the family, claiming money for the support of herself and children.

Whistler's lawyer, Charles W. Field of Baltimore eventually agreed to pay her 1,000 francs a month, according to the attorney, on condition that she dropped her suit, in which she alleged infidelity against Thomas Winans in the Spanish courts.

The children were placed in custody of their Spanish grandparents at Malaga. Their father at once began efforts to obtain custody of them and persuaded the Delgrados to bring them to Paris last April. The police commissary's office then attempted to induce the Spanish couple to turn the children over to their father, but the former chief of police of Malaga, a great friend of Delgrados was in Paris and intervened successfully on behalf of the tavern keeper. The Paris courts then confided custody of the grandchildren to the Delgrados for one year.

CAMP AT FORT SILL BEING MADE READY

Units From Oklahoma City and Tulsa Are Now on the Ground—Others to Follow on Friday.

Special to The World.

LAWTON, Aug. 13.—Under the command of Capt. Earl Patterson, a detail from the two supply companies of the Second and Third infantry, Oklahoma national guard, are at Camp Doniphan, Ft. Sill, near here, preparing the camp for the annual field maneuvers and encampment of the state militia. The supply companies are Oklahoma City and Tulsa units.

The various companies of the two regiments are quickly disposing of the preliminary arrangements for their entainment next Friday. That day will generally be spent in travel in Camp Doniphan and the maneuvers and camp proper will be under way early Saturday. The encampment will continue two weeks.

Two governors of Oklahoma will be present during portions of the maneuvers. Governor Robertson, during the greater part of the maneuvers, will be absent from the state and Lieutenant Governor Trapp will be the executive head of the state. Governor Trapp expects to spend at least two or three days at the camp and Governor Robertson, on his return to the state, will spend at least a day or two with the soldiers.

Brig. Gen. Charles F. Barrett, adjutant general and ranking officer of the national guard of Oklahoma, foresees the most successful period of encampment in the history of the guard. The program for the camp activities is now being prepared for distribution among company commanders. It is not "strenuous," as an Oklahoma City newspaper described the probably experience of the soldiers. Among the more important features will be the amount of time devoted to rifle range training. The program sets aside the period from 1:30 to 4:30 each afternoon to range work.

REPRESENTATIVE CHEATHAM IN FAVOR OF EXTRA SESSION

Special to The World.

BRISTOW, Aug. 13.—In a letter addressed to the governor Hon. Wm. L. Cheatham urges the need of a session of the legislature to pass emergency measures to suppress the prevalent profiteering.

He says in part:

"I am in favor of the state enacting such laws as will guard the public interest, and not surrender this power to the federal government. I would therefore favor the assembling of the legislature and the enactment of a law regulating and limiting all dealers in food products, including wearing apparel and implements of husbandry by which they are produced. The regulating to extend to and include the profit to dealers and manufacturers, and the distribution thereof in an orderly way and at such times and quantities as to insure an adequate food supply at all times. This would of necessity include a food survey of the state by which method the Alaska supply would be ascertained and made public, and the hoarding for long periods of time in warehouses of food and materials would be prohibited, except for the sole purpose of conservation and not for the purpose of speculation and profit on a profiteering standard and basis."

For several weeks the commission has been in communication with the passenger departments of the two roads, seeking to have the Oklahoma City-Ardmore-Hugo sleeper service installed as an experiment. The Frisco was said to be willing, but the Santa Fe, it was announced, objected to installing the service.

It is planned that an Ardmore-Hugo sleeper be attached to the Santa Fe train leaving Oklahoma City at midnight and arriving at Ardmore at 3:55 a. m., to be set out there and picked up by a Frisco train which leaves Ardmore for Hugo at 8:20 a. m. and arrives at Hugo at about 1:25 p. m.
