DRY PARTY LEADERS DIVIDED ON PLANS

Question of what Party Will Do Next Year Causes Possible Split in Ranks at Meeting.

TO DECIDE QUESTION TODAY

W. C. T. U. Wants to Join Forces With Dry Organization and Put Ticket in Field Next Year.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Whether the national prohibition party should continue to function and seek enforcement of prohibition legislation passed by congress or whether the party should be dissolved, today threatened a split in the ranks of the delegates attending the meeting of the national committee of the party. The question will be decided tomorrow by a majority vote of the delegates. Virgil G. Hinshaw, national chairman, announced, owing to today's discussions.

Delegates who are leaders of the W. C. T. U. brought out another point for heated discussions when they advocated combining the prohibition party and the W. C. T. U. forces and putting a complete ticket in the field at the coming national elections.

"There is no hope for the future of the prohibition party as a political factor in the United States," Clinton N. Howard, New York, declared. "The prohibition party should be continued, but not as a political body. It should support the champions of prohibition, regardless of their political affiliations. The prohibition party has been swallowed up by national prohibition."

MRS. CARRANZA IS VISITING.

Wife of Mexican President Reported On Way to San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 1.—Accompanied by a strong military guard, Mrs. Venustiano Carranza, wife of the president of Mexico, has reached Piedras Negras, just across the border from Eagle Pass, preparatory to crossing into the United States for a tour to recuperate from recent poor health.

Part of the country through which Mrs. Carranza had to pass is infested with bandits and only a week ago a train filled with federal troops was wrecked by outlaws. The Mexican president's wife is expected to make San Antonio a brief visit.

Andrew and Imogene

BY ROG FULKERSON.

"Andrew," said Imogene, "on your way down town this morning I want you to stop in a candy store and send Jennie a box of candy with your card in it."

"Oh, you do, do you? And why this wild extravagance, pray?" he asked.

"Why, I think it's only right after inviting us to use four of the six seats for that box last night. It was certainly kind of her, and if you are going to put it in your mercenary way, you saved $12 on the four tickets."

"I did, eh?" snorted Andrew. "I saved money, did I?" As a Napoleon of finance you would have been banished to the St. Helena of bankruptcy before you were old enough to be trusted on the street with a nickel.

"As a calculator you work like an adding machine which has been dropped off the top of a skyscraper.

"In the first place, Jennie has a cousin who works in the box office of that theater and as it was an off week they were playing to long rows of empty seats and the box office did what is technically known as papering the house, and Jennie had the box sent her as free as the 'I told you's' we are hearing since the signing of the armistice. By putting a decent-looking bunch of people in that box we were doing the theater a favor.

"Allow me also to call your attention to the fact that 'I told you's' we man in that box and that the trip to the theater and back cost me $2 taxi fare. Just jot that down.

"After the theater it was up to me, of course, to take that harem to a swell food foundry and order various and sundry things to show my appreciation of Jennie's kindness, and you will remember that Jennie ordered half a dozen raw, a bird, a salad and an ice, and that you and the other ladies in the party followed suit in a little more modest way and that my check was $24.75 and the pirate who waited on us scowled at me and made me feel cheap because he only got an extra 75c out of the $25, and that I had to give up 60 cents more to get the wraps from the white aproned she-robber who presided over the coat rack. That made $26.50, which added to the $2 taxi fare, made that expedition cost your long-suffering husband exactly $27.50 to go to a show which was punk, if one could have seen it, and as he sat back in the rear seat he only saw what took place on the left hand third corner of the stage, and he didn't want to go to the theater in the first place, and he noticed you had on a new pair of 16-button white gloves purchased for the occasion. In return for making me spend all that money you want me to reward the lady by sending her a box of candy.

"Shall I also stop at the florist's and send her a Wales Ajar, and then at the fruit man's and send up a basket of alligator pears?"

"Why, Andrew," said Imogene, almost in tears, "I am sure Jennie only meant to be kind and you make her out a horrid, designing woman who tried to make you buy food for her."

"There, honey, don't cry, but when you have been down in the busy marts of trade as long as I have you will get a little pessimistic about people when they offer you something for nothing. I have had too many men take me out to lunch with them and afterwards make me long for a stomach pump when they tried to borrow five hundred. That old Greek who used to run a shoe shining parlor in Rome was talkin' some when he said: 'Look out for the ginks when they come bearin' giffs!' Something for nothing never happens outside a mining prospectus."

AVIATOR GIVES FORMER KAISER SUITE A SCARE

By The Associated Press.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Sept. 1.—Much excitement was occasioned in Amerongen at 11:30 o'clock today when an aviator passing above the von Bentinck castle, suddenly looped the loop and dived low directly over the garden here the former German emperor was engaged in his daily task of sawing wood.

Many of the villagers believed that the one-time emperor was in danger, but the aviator merely descended to about 50 feet above the garden, leaned over the side of his plane and waved a greeting to William Hohenzollern and then proceeded on his journey.

The aviator is presumed to have been Versteegh, a Hollander. The former emperor is said to have been greatly pleased over the airman's greeting.

Thousands of workers, taking advantage of the two days' holiday, left the city Saturday for nearby summer resorts, and as a result, Labor day was the most quiet in the history of the city.
