A Chance to Live

The Awakening.

[illegible] I had to confess with Arkansas. Before was a little excited and a lot trying to keep his temper and the other morning as he followed Anne into the kitchen and back again, while she set the dinner in the other. "Your trouble, he said, is that you get up at too early."

"Gosh, that's the way with most people," commented Anne sharply.

"Well, anyway, I got hoot of time. The morning I was asked I'd been feeling peppy and, at Arkansas, Bennie pointed. I figured it was fifteen of five in Indiana passing our cabin a week but because I was down. But he was frank. Said it was simply a case of healing [illegible] job that he couldn't think of he was running his department as well as his expense as other firms did he'd [illegible] Fairness was still [illegible] in the wake of the season. "He said shipping clerks were thicker than flies and that only on absolutely indispensible man got big pay.

"Now, that's just what I want to get at," I gave to him. "How can I be that man?" He kind of looked at me of course, no one's actually indispensable, he said, although a good many think they are. But I like a fellow to be ambitious. I can always see a man that knows more than other men about some lines of work. Are you willing to knuckle down and get the ins and outs of the business?"

"You bet I am, I told him—and he could see I meant it. "What ought I to know to get my promotion and more pay?"

"Well, he said, what I need most is a man who knows about freight rates and routings and keeps posted on the changes that are being made all the time now. This war, he said, ought to boost our business to double its regular amount and maybe more. Everybody's in for buying tobacco for the soldiers, and if this draft law goes through, he says, we'll be working nights and holidays, or I miss my guess.

"The next step after you know all about your clerk job, he said, is to learn the outside end of the business—the selling end. That's the big thing to put over—sales. When you can do that the way's open to almost any job you want in the company—head manager, vice president, director, owner. Those are the fellows that get all the profits, he said. And he's right, Ann. He doesn't know how right he is.

Bernie paused for the double purpose of starting his dinner, which was now on the table, and trying to recall what he had read in a book Rafetsky had loaned him about how the wealth of the world was distributed.

He could remember that the authority stated that 1 per cent of the people of the United States own 59 per cent of the wealth and that even in prosperous years, more than a tenth of the population was upon the verge of starvation. He considered himself fairly within this hideous classification. And he was thoroughly sick of it.

He longed to be one of the 1 per cent. Yet the smattering of knowledge he had so recently acquired as to the pernicious workings of the "system" made him realize that he not only could never be, but that he wouldn't want to be, unless he could, by the magic power of his ill gotten gains reform the world.

Bernie was emotionally and mentally very much mixed up about things. He felt, rather than reasoned out, the righteousness of his newly acquired cause, as all new students of it do.

He was stupendously enthused, as all new students of it are. He wanted to do more than merely acknowledge allegiance. He wanted to shout it from the housetops, to change human nature at one stroke, to wither the noxious fruits of the present instant at certain instants to abolish poverty, slavery, caste, class hatred, child labor, unemployment and all other corruption at a single blast.

He didn't know where to begin, whom to hate, whom not to blame. He only felt that he had found something the possibilities of which to himself and others he did not dream. It remained for Annie, who knew still less of it than he, to set him on the practical path leading upward.

Shouts for Villa.

LAREDO, Texas, Sept. 8.—A belated dispatch received today from Torreon, Mexico, declares Dr. Angel Gutierrez, whose name is among those presented to the state senate as a candidate for the governorship of Tamaulipas, went through the streets of Torreon last Tuesday "shouting viva Villa," causing a great scandal. He was arrested and charged before the district judge with sedition.

Doctor Appeals for Sensible Dress in Talk Before Women

The picture of the meeting and dinner of the Tulsa Town club last night in the Tea Cup Inn, was the splendid talk given by Doctor Schneicher, late of New York, but who is now a resident of Tulsa. Doctor Schneicher has been wireless for the government in Russia, Serbia and directing her knowledge and energies toward the importance of social hygiene. In her talk last evening to this new women's club, "The character-building forces, the important powers of the sex," she finally boiled it down to the big point next of "home." Health is the business woman. Income is nothing—and then, they would not have the first comfort toward success until they wear the right kind of shoes. You must have room to fit your feet instead of making your feet fit shoes, you must wear the kind so as to keep the organs of your body in their right positions and allow the lungs full free space for breathing. These are the needs that will prevent forever backaches and headaches and nerve pains in all parts of your body.

Go home tonight and put your bare feet on the floor and frame with a pencil the outline of your feet, sans the stockings. You will find that the shoe you have been wearing on top of the outline and then behind how and have been pressing yourself. You will find that the shoe your small toes have to bend. She said a podiatrist specialist of New York, that five-fourths of the foot troubles came from the use of high-heeled shoes. Doctor Schneicher said, in referring to the subject of social hygiene in the notorious frills of the present instant at certain instants to abolish are poverty, slavery, caste, class hatred, child labor, unemployment and all other corruption at a single blast.

He didn't know where to begin, whom to hate, whom not to blame. He only felt that he had found something the possibilities of which to himself and others he did not dream. It remained for Annie, who knew still less of it than he, to set him on the practical path leading upward.

AD EXPERT TO TALK ABOUT LIVING COST

Al Shuman Will Speak at Meeting Today—Many Entertainment Numbers Are Arranged.

An exceptional treat is in store for all the members of the Ad club who attend their meeting at Hotel Tulsa at noon today. Al Shuman, advertising manager of the Fort Worth Star Telegram, will address the meeting. His subject being the solving of the labor problem and the high cost of living through advertising.

Mr. Shuman, who is considered one of the biggest advertising men in the southwest, has held the position of president of the Fort Worth club and also president of the Associated Advertising Club of Texas.

Leonard D. Orbauer, recently elected as an honorary member of the Tulsa club, and also its chairman of entertainments, has arranged a program of surprises for the meeting. He has secured the services of Miss Edith Wantland, a talented elocutionist, who will give a few of her most interesting readings. There will also be a few song numbers, among which will be a novel idea in club singing. Mrs. Ruth Stanford, of the Jenkins Music company, will do the piano honors.

Inventor Seeks Ad.

Stating he has an invention that will make a fortune shortly after the article is placed upon the market, M. F. Powell, jr., of Claiton, Mississippi, has written to the chamber of commerce here and is soliciting aid of the Tulsa financial corporation in preparing his invention for the market. As stated in his letter Powell's invention, attached to a buggy or wagon, will disencumber shafts or tongue from the vehicle in case of runaway.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 26 years old and have been married seven years. I have a little boy 4 years old. My husband has part night work and so is too tired to do anything at home.

He gets $140 a month. I do all my own work, washing and ironing, and take care of the garden, chickens and cow. Many times I have night work when my boy is sick. My husband gives me no money to spend and buys me very few clothes. I never go anywhere, even to church. I have been hope so long I do not mind it as I did at first. But is it right? Can I do right things for my child when I am alone so much? My husband does not want me to read, it is a waste of time.

I am very nervous, but he says I ought not to feel that if I tried and if I were hard enough it will take my mind off herself. He says he will stop working if I am not willing to stay at home and help save.

I love my husband and have tried hard to please him and always take his part when others criticise him. I have faults too. I am so tired and my giving up only makes him more selfish. What can I do?

DISCOURAGED WIFE.

Without a doubt your husband's intentions are good and he thinks he is creating style, forsooth. But he is not, he is making a slave of you.

First of all go back to church. Do not worry about your clothes. Your mind needs food. After you have been out and mingled with others again and get a different point of view, you will be less nervous and more fit to mother your child.

Reading is not "a waste of time." It shows ignorance to believe such a thing. Refresh your thoughts every chance you have with a good book. Also read to your child. He will never forget the stories you read him and he will remember the hours spent that was as his happiest in childhood.

Your husband has not assumed his share of the work. If you do all housework, including the washing and ironing, he should take care of the garden, chickens and cow as much as he eats. Of course some of the care would fall upon you because of his irregular hours at work.

You are nervous because you are alone so much. Take time to go away from home. Cultivate friends. Your husband will be jealous of your new interests and will complain, could. Disregard what he says and act independently. Which he thinks no reason why you should not be with a husband who will go to work. You could get a position as waitress to stop work, tell him that if he does you will have him. Then hire a housekeeper and take your little boy with you, of course I do not advise this unless your husband gives up his position and loafs.

Consider yourself first. You have served will grow more selfish as time passes unless you assert yourself.

PRE-HISTORIC MAN PROVES TO BE OLD "DUMMY" MODEL

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 8.—Twenty or 25 years ago when that son prison's industries were in operation, Jimmie Lathrop spent a few years with its walls, and during time hanging heavily on his hands, modeled human images in plaster of Paris. At the end of his sentence he had quite a collection of "dummies," one of them, Jimmie's "pre-historic man," was about half a day in Patrolman Oscar Niemann's back yard. This was the explanation put forward today as the street commissioner's find, which several geologists, after a hasty examination, declared was the petrified body of a man, 12 feet and seven inches in height.

Who Made the First Baby Food?

WHEN I wanted to wean my baby and find a food which would agree with him as well as my own milk had done, I asked my doctor, "Who made the first baby food?"

"Nestlé's," he said. "They originated the modified powdered milk form of baby food nearly [illegible] years ago, and now it has the largest sale of any baby food in the world."

Then, they must know how to feed babies, I decided. And so it turned out. For my baby didn't seem to feel any difference at all when we changed to Nestlé's Milk Food—and all my fear and worry was gone.

That is why I wanted you to know about Nestlé's—that it is simply pure sweet milk, in powder form—already modified—easier to digest because the curds are broken up—and sure to keep your baby safe summer and winter.

No germs can get in, because you just add water, stir well, and your baby is the healthy happy [illegible] he ought to be.

I know the Nestlé Company will be glad to help you as they helped me. If you will fill out and send the coupon below. They will send you free enough Nestlé's Food for twelve feedings, and a Mother's Book by specialists on how to care for your baby.

They want your baby to smile, too.

Nestlé's Milk is made from the purest, freshest cows' milk, and sugar, skim wheat, malted barley, and potassium bicarbonate. Nestlé's Food is sold by druggists everywhere. Nestlé's Food is one of three products of the Nestlé Company, the largest maker of any baby food in the world.

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon.
