having found no new lucky omens in the way of hairpins, singled to left, scoring J. Collins. "Happy" Felsch also delivered a single on which Jackson took second but Felsch was forced at second by Gandil's bounder, ending the season for the moment.

In their half the home team took heart when Eddie Collins juggled Rath's sizzling grounder. The crowd, which was less vociferous than usual, yelled for the sevens to come and meet the Sox going up. But it was a vain prayer, for Collins redeemed himself by going way back and taking Daubert's fly, the mighty Groh struck out and Rousch hit to Collins, who threw to Weaver, forcing Rath.

In the second the Sox were bowled over in short order, without getting a man to first. The Reds did a little better, for after Duncan had flied out to center Kopf singled, but was caught stealing on Schalk's perfect throw. Neale fooled out to Weaver. It was not until the fifth inning that Cincinnati, by virtue of a single and a base on balls, got a man safely to second. The Sox, however, got another run in the third, Johnny Collins again making the count.

Collins Starts It.

Collins, who played center for Felsch while Felsch went to right where the sun is not so troublesome, was the first man up. He delivered his second single as if he were playing billiards. The ball slapped off Sallee's mitt, caromed off Kopf and finally got to Rath too late for a play at first. Eddie Collins, who was unable to deliver a hit in a similar circumstances in the first, got a hit sharply to center, sending his namesake to second. Weaver sent a grounder to Kopf who threw it to Rath for a force of Eddie Collins. Rath claimed that the runner interfered with his throw to first for a double and Weaver was called out for the interference. J. Collins meanwhile reached third and scored on Jackson's hit.

In the fourth Schalk sandwiched a single between the outs but never got further than first. In the fifth the Sox registered their final brace of tallies. Slim Sallee in this round was driven from the box and the remaining two-thirds of the inning was pitched by Fisher.

Reds Bobble It.

J. Collins started inauspiciously by flying out to right. Captain Collins again singled. Weaver rolled one to Groh who let it get through his legs and Weaver reached first and Collins second. Groh's error and that which followed by Rath were costly. Jackson drove a bounder to the Red second baseman, who made a straight fumble of it, and the bases were filled. In this crisis Felsch, who is frequently called on to sacrifice, was ordered to hit. He singled to center and Eddie Collins and Weaver scored.

Gandil relieved the strain on the Reds by going out, Fisher to Daubert.

In their half of this round Cincinnati contrived to get a man to second for the first time. Kopf, the first man at the plate, flied out to Jackson. Neale singled and walked to second when Wingo was given a walk. Wingo became quite a pedestrian during the contest, as he was given free passage three times, and he attained a batting average of 1.000 by delivering a hit in the ninth. Confronted for the first time with men on first and second, Cicotte tightened. Rariden made a brief appearance as a pinch hitter for Fisher and fouled out to Weaver. Rath shot a grounder at Weaver and was thrown out at first.

Reds Count in Sixth.

The sixth inning produced the one lone tally accumulated by the Reds. Daubert struck out, but Groh, smarting in self-castigation because of his recent record of error, whaled the ball over the temporary fence in the left field, but because of ground rules, what would have been a triple or a homer, went for a double. Cicotte threw Rousch out at first, Groh going to third. Duncan singled to center and Groh scored. Duncan was forced at second by Kopf's grounder.

In their half of this round J. Collins doubled after two were down, but the Cuban, Luque, now pitching for Cincinnati, struck out Captain Collins and the chance went glimmering. The Cuban in the seventh fanned Weaver and Felsch, while Jackson died as an infield assist.

In the eighth and ninth the Cuban pitched splendid ball, striking out Cicotte and retiring the batsmen, one, two, three, with little apparent effort.

Cicotte was not menaced again until the ninth. Kopf and Neale had been retired on flies when Wingo singled to right. Sherwood Magee batted for Luque and also singled. If Rath, the next batter, could have poled a home run it would have tied the score, but his attempt to this line went no further than Felsch's mitt.

It was not until the crowd had worked its way from the grounds back to town that it learned how small the attendance really was, namely, 18,922, which is less than half the average attendance of games here, and 20,000 under the Chicago average.

"Hod" Eller, who held the White Sox to three hits in the fifth game of the world's series at Chicago Monday, establishing a series strikeout record of six in a row, probably will face the Sox in the eighth game of the series scheduled for Chicago tomorrow.

"Lefty" Williams, although twice beaten by the Reds, is expected to be Manager Gleason's pitching choice.

"The Sox went in the game today fighting with the old-time dash that won them the American league championship," said Manager Gleason tonight. "They were themselves for the first time in the series. They are right now and will defeat Eller tomorrow if Moran decides to start him.

"It's a strange thing, but the Sox have badly beaten the pitchers who defeated them before. Ruether was knocked out of the box, and so was Sallee. The same thing will happen to Eller. The Sox played magnificent ball, outguessed the Reds, outbatted them, outplayed them and Cicotte outpitched them. I am happy to say that my confidence in Cicotte was not misjudged. I may start Williams tomorrow.

"Cicotte was our master today, but I am confident tomorrow will see the end of the series," said Manager Moran of the Reds. "I expect to pitch Eller and if he can repeat his remarkable game of last Monday no club can beat him. The Reds realize that they must rally. The Sox outhit and outfucked us today, but the Reds will come back with the same drive that won the first two games of the series.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Loyal supporters of the Reds thought Manager Moran made a mistake in not starting Luque, the Cuban pitched the last three innings. Cuban pitched the last three innings and held the sox to one hit. He fanned five.

Groh's double in the sixth ordinarily would have gone for a home run, but ground rules limited him to two bases. The ball sailed over Jackson's head and landed under the left field bleachers. Groh scored a minute later with the Reds only run when Duncan singled to center.

There was an appalling falling off in attendance as compared with the crowd of 32,000 that witnessed yesterday's game. The $4 box seats were not a third filled. There were gaping holes in the grandstand sections and the left-field bleachers did not provide more than 200 spectators. The right field bleachers, however, were nearly filled. Scalpers who bought tickets expecting there would be a demand for them lost heavily.

The Sox were retired in the second on five pitched balls. Gandil and Risberg hit to the outfield, while Schalk flied out.

RUPTURED MEN

Read This Guarantee

If you do not have greater comfort, a better fit, feel more secure and have greater confidence in this truss than any you have ever bought, tried or worn, while lifting, stooping, running, wrestling or boxing, bring it back and we will give you back your money under such circumstances.

We want you "hard ones," you fellows that "case" a truss more than you did the kaiser, because we know that when you are fitted within an Honest John you will boost as hard as you "cussed."

How can we make this guarantee? In the first place we are experts and know just what we are doing at all times. In the second place the chances are that you never had a truss that fitted you, and last but not least we know from past experiences that the Honest John truss is the best on the market.

Just a word to you men with the small rupture. Every disease, ailment and affliction starts from a small beginning. The longer you put off getting a truss that fits you the more you are going to suffer in the future. Don't put this down as a lot of "bunk." It is straight from the shoulder advice. Ask some of these men who are going around just half men on account of neglecting their rupture when it was small. It was not always their fault. Up to the time we established offices in Tulsa there was not a truss fitter nearer than Kansas City. People had to buy trusses like you have been buying them and you can see the result.

We are at the office from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m. every day and at the office on Sunday by appointment. If you live out of town, write us and we will send you literature describing the Honest John Truss. Consultation is free and if the truss isn't the best, it doesn't cost you a penny. The only thing that you are out is your time.
