LANSING ASKS TRIAL OF NATION'S LEAGUE

Secretary of State Makes Appeal for Adoption of Covenant in Present Form in Public Address.

DEMOCRACY IS A SURE CURE

Ills of Radicalism to Be Overcome When All Nations Become Democratic in Form of Government.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Secretary of State Robert Lansing received the honorary degree of doctor of laws at the annual convocation of the University of the state of New York here tonight. This degree has been conferred by the board of regents on 22 other men, and only four other men who have received the honor are alive. They are Thomas A. Edison, Elihu Root, Jules Jusserand and Cardinal Mercier.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Secretary of State Lansing pleaded for the adoption of the league of nations in its present form. "If for no other reason than that to reject it would be to discourage future attempts to obtain unity of action among the nations in an effort to avoid international conflicts," in an address on "the power of democracy" before the New York university regents here tonight. Secretary Lansing expressed the belief that "if every nation was a democracy in reality, as is the result universal peace would be an accomplished fact and not a goal toward which the world looks with longing eyes striving to devise methods by which it may be attained. "Until democracy becomes the standing policy of civilization other means to insure to the world a continuing state of international peace must be found," the secretary said, in recommending that the league of nations be given a trial in its present form. "Admitting for the sake of argument," he asserted, "all the faults and undesirable features which the bitterest opponents have raised against the covenant, I am prepared to say that it ought to be adopted and tried, for it represents today an international concert devoted to peace.

Sees Success.

"The United States, I am convinced," he continued, "will not be the nation to check this movement to encourage the civilized states of the earth from seeking by united purpose and counsel to restrain the use of force in the settlement of disputes. If, after a fair trial, the league fails to accomplish its objects, then is the time by amendment to make the covenant more efficient. Such action as that which was taken by the conference at Paris, when it adopted the covenant makes for peace, but does not insure its permanency. It is a powerful agency, but not an all-powerful one. The certainty of unbroken peace in this world, I believe, lies in the general adoption of democracy as the supreme political principles of all nations."

Calling attention to the new problems which confront the country, the secretary issued a warning against the doctrines of "class imperialism."

Democracy the Cure.

"Today," he said, "the rights of particular classes over other classes of the population are being preached in our streets, and appeals to selfishness and envy and to ignorance under the guise of justice are being sent broadcast throughout the land. Apostles of unrest and even of revolution, as well as others less radical and more sincere, taking advantage of the industrial and commercial confusion resulting from the war, are seeking converts to doctrines which aim to grant special privileges to certain groups of citizens and to deprive others of those private rights which are inseparable from the American conception of individual liberty.

"Democracy is in danger from within rather than from without the body politic," he declared. "Again we Americans are called to the defense of an American principle which is being attacked not only by insidious foes, but by friends who fail to see the wrong which they are doing. We must meet this new attack with the same unyielding and courageous spirit as that with which our soldiers met the Germans on the soil of France."

REJECT FINAL FALL PROPOSALS TO AMEND PACT

required to pay the expenses of polling that country during the plebiscite.

Want Reservation.

The only speeches made on the amendments were by Senator Fall and by Senator Kellogg, republican, Minnesota, who argued that the purpose could be served sufficiently by reservations. In the course of the day various other features of the treaty and the peace negotiations were discussed. Senator Brandegee, republican, Massachusetts and Wadsworth, republican, New York, attacking the despatch of troops for Russian duty, and Senator Hitchcock, and Senator Nelson, republican, Minnesota, defending the action.

The move to further Ireland's cause in the league was made by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who introduced a resolution expressing it as the sense of the senate that once the league is organized the United States should bring before it, under article eleven, the right of the Irish people to self-government. It was this article which permits any member state to call attention to any condition threatening the peace of the world, which President Wilson repeatedly quoted on his western trip as holding out hope for subject peoples, and embodying his views on the Irish question.

To Finish Reading.

In addressing the peace treaty text a formality required by senate rules, the senate clerks about completed during the day the first half of their task. Most of the time they were droning away with an audience of less than half a dozen senators, and when they resumed in a full chamber after the vote on the Fall amendments, their voices were drowned out so effectually that Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, asked that they be "called to order so as not to interfere with the conversation on the floor." The reading will be resumed tomorrow and the leaders hope to complete it during the day.

Society Looking Forward to Visit of Former U. S. Girl, Now Titled Viscountess Maidstone.

Viscountess Maidstone, who was Miss Margaretta Drexel before her marriage, is expected to arrive in the United States from England shortly. Her marriage to the viscount has proved to be one of the happiest of international matches. She was a society favorite in New York and Newport before her marriage and so her return is causing much interest.

MAYNARD NEARS GOAL IN FLIGHT

tenant Earl Manzelman fourth, some 200 miles west of Pearson.

Lieutenants E. C. Kiel, H. E. Queens and H. S. Worthington left New York on the return trip today, the first two reaching Bryan, Ohio, while Worthington alighted at Binghamton.

With the arrival of Lieutenants H. H. George, T. L. Hynes and J. B. Wright and Lieutenant Colonel H. E. Hartney, at San Francisco today, 23 of the 67 starters have made the first crossing. Eleven have started the second lap, but Major Spatz, westbound, and Captain Harry Smith, eastbound, have dropped out, the latter wrecking his plane yesterday in Nevada.

The story of how they repaired their damaged plane in a Nebraska cornfield was obtained from "flying parson," Lieut. B. W. Maynard, and his observer, when they passed through Chicago today. Except for the breaking of a crankshaft in Nebraska yesterday, they believed they were making better time going east than they did westward. Lieutenant Maynard was rather cryptic merely saying he flew better than he talked.

All last night while the pilot slept, Kline, with a farmer mechanician, an attache of the Nebraska good roads service, who happened to be near Wahoo, Neb., when Maynard plumped into a cornfield, toiled to install the big Liberty motor from the wreck of Capt. Roy Francis' bombing plane into No. 31. These two did the skilled work alone.

"We trusted to luck—and went to work," Kline explained.

They rigged up a chain over the limb of a big tree and with it lifted out the broken motor and hoisted in the new engine.

Dawn was breaking when the last nut fastening the propeller was tightened and the engine ready.

One reason why Maynard is breaking records is that he does a lot of things not taught or countenanced in the flying schools. Coming into Grant park he had too much altitude, officials said, and, according to the Hoyle of flying, should have gone around the field again.

Instead Maynard did a dangerous looping skid one way then the other way, and set his plane down. That doesn't take so long.

When time came for Maynard to leave, he didn't run down to the other end of the field and "take off" into the wind. He simply "gave 'er the gun" and took off from that part of the field where he happened to be, squarely across the wind. It was more dangerous, but quicker. He held the ship close to the ground for 100 yards, zoomed it a couple of hundred feet—that is shot his plane almost straight up—turned the nose southeast and was on his way to Bryan, Ohio.

DOCTORS FIND NEW USE FOR BEES, MYERS SAYS

Proof positive that the high cost of living is actually affecting everything has been found by Paul Meyers, president of the Tulsa county free fair, who is also interested in farming.

One of Mr. Meyers' hobbies is bees, and his apiaries are not only producing a good supply of honey each year, but queens and colonies from his hives are found all over this part of Oklahoma.

"Honey is in demand this season," said Mr. Meyers, "and is finding a ready market at 20 cents per pound, and this price is not permanent."

According to Mr. Meyers another and more important use of bees has been found by the doctors. The practitioners say that if a man who is afflicted with rheumatism will allow bees to sting him that they will be rid of the trouble.

CHARGE OF ROBBERY IS DISMISSED AND REFILED

The fact that a complaining witness testified that he was not robbed by the defendants but had thrown three dollars into the sand when the two robbers attempted to take his money, led to the dismissal of the charge of conjoint robbery filed before Justice S. C. Maxey, and the refiling of another information upon complaint of another member of the party alleged to have been held up and robbed by Earl King and Earnest Jenkins at Del Rey August 23.

The information was signed by Alexander Antle, but Antle at the beginning of the preliminary hearing yesterday before Justice S. C. Maxey admitted he had thrown the money into the sand when the two men attempted to rob him and his companion and that the robbers did not get the money so far as the witness knew.

Upon the dismissal of the case, another information charging the same offense was signed by James Thornglew, who claims the defendants robbed him of a watch valued at $10 on the same occasion on which Antle lost three dollars. The hearing of the case is set for next Friday.

NO SUCCESSOR NAMED FOR JOHN MORAN'S JOB

No information has been received in this city by John Moran local deputy United States sheriff as to the appointment of a successor to Moran whose resignation will take effect between November 1 and 15. Moran after serving as a peace officer since statehood and as a federal officer since March, 1912, resigns his place to take the agency for the Indiana motor trucks in this district. The appointment of a deputy to succeed Moran will be made by B. E. Enlos United States marshal for the eastern district of Oklahoma at Muskogee.

LEAGUE SUPPORTERS WILL ARRANGE FOR LEWIS MEET

For the purpose of appointing committees and making final arrangements for the address of Senator J. Ham Lewis who is scheduled to speak here October 24, a meeting of all proponents of the league of nations is called for 2 o'clock this afternoon. The meeting will be held in the county courtroom.

PARLEY UNABLE TO REACH VOTE ON LABOR FIGHT

gathering remain in session "until the resolution is disposed of," and Dan J. Tobin and W. G. Lee, the latter chief of the railway trainmen, held up the specter of numerous strikers and pending strikes, now in abeyance pending the outcome of the conference to induce the delegates to take immediate action.

Four members of the labor group, L. E. Sheppard, John H. Dollin, T. A. Rickart and Joseph F. Valentine, voted with a majority of the employer and public groups for adjournment.

There was a tense moment when Samuel Gompers late today rose to address the conference after an hour and a half of desultory debate. Mr. Gompers speaking in a weak voice, thanked the conference for its vote of sympathy during his recent illness and expressed the regret at the inference of L. E. Loree, the preceding speaker, that the decisions of the war labor board were made during the duress of labor at a critical time during the war.

The federation president recalled the conference of 136 labor leaders on March 12, 1917, at which labor pledged itself, three weeks before President Wilson asked for a declaration of war, to back the government to the limit, come what might. "And American labor made good its declaration," he added hoarsely.

Plainly drawing on his reserve of strength, lessened by several days of illness, the veteran labor leader referred with scorn to Mr. Loree's insinuations that labor had enjoyed undue benefits from the war.

"Ah, we should go to the great corporations, to the boards of directors to find the philanthropists of our time," he exclimed sarcastically. "Perish the thought!"

Have Found Ability.

Declaring that "whether you like it or not, the masses of labor of the United States have at last found their ability to articulate thorough organizations," Mr. Gompers, in the most eloquent address yet heard on the floor of the conference, told the delegates that the laboring people are producing the wealth of the world, and that, without minimizing the great contributions made by men of thought and direction to that production, the time had come when in America labor was determined to gain a fair share of the rewards."

Shaking his finger toward the employers' group, in which Mr. Loree sat, Mr. Gompers bitterly assailed the railroad man for his insinuation that the laborers of the United States planned an attempt to overthrow the government. Mr. Gompers shook with emotion and his voice quavered as he violently defended the loyalty and patriotism of organized labor.

Declaring that Loree had "no monopoly on the belief that the government of the United States is safe from upheaval and revolution," Mr. Gompers added that "there are no men in the United States more loyal or more patriotic in their support of the republic than those in the labor organizations."

The labor chief said that as no other country in the world could boast such loyalty from its laboring classes and that as no other nation in the world held forth the same rights of free speech, free assemblage and free expression to all the masses of the people, the protection of those rights was more vital to the laboring millions than to any other citizens of the country.

Speaks for Labor.

"I speak as the authorized representative of the laboring masses of this country," Mr. Gompers continued. "The dumb, the inarticulate, the downtrodden, the dominated hundreds of thousands who constitute the toiling masses of America and I tell you that no people in all this land love our government and American institutions more than they do, no people are further from any idea of attack on this government, no people would or have gone farther to protect that government."

"We hear much of the struggle between capital and labor," he said, looking about the conference room. "What is capital? It is this table, that chandelier, coal, wool, sugar and so forth. They are dead things, inanimate things, material things—things that are subject to barter.

"If the old conception labor and capital still prevailed, we would find women working in the mines and their giving birth to children; we would find children working 14 hours a day.

"Why this anxiousness to have unions of workers incorporated? So as to re-establish the ancient guild system? So that the government could step in and rob the workers?

"Upon what pretext is this formula proposed? In order that we might be milked in damages of all advantage that might otherwise accrue to us? I do not attempt to say that unions have not sometimes violated contracts, but not oftener than the employers have violated agreements with workers."

Referring to the collective bargaining resolution before the conference, he continued:

"If you wanted to deny the laboring people of this country this aspiration, you should have denied their grandfathers and grandmothers a common school education.

Start Too Late.

"You should have started generations ago, not now. We at least know our rights and the day has come when labor dares to assert these rights. If we wish to go on forward in progress as a homogenous nation, working together for our great common cause, you must allow labor the right to association, to be heard, to be represented in the councils of industry and of the nation by such representatives as we choose, whether of legal knowledge or not."

When Mr. Gompers concluded, Mr. Loree said that he had referred inadvertently to the war labor board when he meant the war labor conference board as the body from which he said labor wrung undue concessions during the war.

"I do not see how my statements could be construed as a reflection on organized labor," Mr. Loree added, "but in case it has been so construed, I wish to express my profound regret. The members of organized labor entertain patriotic sentiments equal to any of us."

John Spargo, a member of the public group, broke into the discussion to assert:

"The right of collective bargaining was won in the United States many years ago and no action this conference can take can deprive labor of that right."

Mr. Spargo pleaded with the delegates to heed the warning sounded in Russia and to realize the justice of plea placed before the conference by the members of the labor group.

OFFICERS OF RED CROSS ROBBED OF $500 LOOT

Of all the places that one would expect a robber to visit, it is safe to say that no one would consider the Red Cross offices in the new Lynch building where a burglar would find any loot of great value.

Yet that is what actually happened on Thursday night when someone succeeded in opening the lock on the office door. Upon entering the office room they found articles valued at a little over $500, which were removed without leaving any clews as to who the intruders were.

Pressure Weak But Sure.

Bang! a flash of fire shot across the room and an angry flame leaped from a spot on the floor. Above the cries of alarm could be heard the roar of a motor truck and a band of firemen rushed into sight. A moment later and all was well. It wasn't a movie just two women at 229 West Eighth street last night were installing a new stove. After removing the plug a match was lit to see if the gas was off. It wasn't.

TULSA COUNTY LEADING LOCAL AID, VINCENT SAYS

Of the 11 counties in the northeastern agricultural district, of which George W. Vincent is district agent, Tulsa county ranks first in amount of local aid provided. In addition Mr. Vincent says that every one of the 11 counties have increased their appropriation for the farm agents. Tulsa, Okmulgee and Muskogee have also given more for women's work.

His report shows these facts:

Nowata ..... $ 840.00

County	1918	1919	Increase
Nowata	$ 840	$1,260	$ 420

$5,000 NOW RAISED IN SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Although J. A. Edwards, special director of the Salvation army campaign in progress here with an objective of $10,000 for improvement of the local citadel, had no complete reports at a late hour last night, it was estimated that more than $5,000 had been raised.

Mr. Edwards could not get in touch with several workers and for that reason could get no complete tabulation of pledges obtained. It is probable that a meeting of the active team captains will be called today for the purpose of determining the exact amount raised and deciding on future policy.

Allotments Collected.

Mrs. Hallie Golay, in charge of the home service department of the Red Cross, announced on Friday that so far in October allotments and other claims of returned service men had been collected exceeding $2,200. During the morning she was informed that one back compensation claim for a soldier who was discharged while in a camp for dementia precox of $475.55 had been paid through the efforts of the Tulsa offices of the Red Cross.

Visitor Astounded.

"I am perfectly astounded at Tulsa and the cities that one sees riding through Oklahoma," said J. H. McMichael of Iowa City, Iowa, representative of the American Book company, who spent Friday in Tulsa. McMichael said that his first trip to the Sooner state was one continual revelation to him, and that nowhere in the north or west had he seen such towns and cities.

FAIL TO AVERT MINERS' STRIKE

and the men who dig the coal could get together.

"The impending labor dispute and possible strike in the bituminous coal fields is of vital importance to all of the people," Mr. Wilson said. "As the executive officer of the government, intrusted with the function of mediation in such disputes, I feel that nothing should be left undone that may give hope of an amicable adjustment of the differences existing between the operators and miners.

"I realize the difficulties to be overcome and give full weight to the statement of the coal operators that certain assurances relative to carrying out of existing contracts, the rescinding of the strike order and the withdrawal of a demand for a shorter work day can be renewed, and the statement of the miners that there must be a disposition to really negotiate on the part of the operators before it would be worth while for them to go into conference. I am sure, however, that there can be no objection on the part of either side to meet with the secretary of labor for the purpose of discussing with him all of the matters involved in the dispute."

Coming out of the meeting, Lewis said:

"The position of the mine workers is unchanged. We have waived no demands; we are prepared to defend the demands already made. There will be no modification of our position."

In a formal statement Lewis charged that the statement of the operators justified the contention of the miners that the operators did not want to avert the strike.

Building and engineering contracts in the United States for the first six months of 1919 show an increase of $90,000,000 over all last year.
