TULSA HOUSEWIVES TO RECEIVE ADVICE

Mrs. Helen Harrington Downing to Lecture to Tulsa Society How to Operate a Home

SPEAKS AT KENDALL, TOO

In This Day of High Prices Women Should Be Advised How and What to Buy Declares Expert

"The business of being a housewife was always one that required expert planning. Today, and for many months to come it is going to take more efficient planning in order to cope with existing price and market conditions. The American housewife has a big task cut out for her—she must study in order to carry it out successfully."

This is a statement which Mrs. Helen Harrington Downing, a national authority on foods, has made.

Mrs. Downing is associated with the food economics department of Armour & Co., and will deliver a series of lectures on the vital subject of food buying and preparation. The first lecture will be given Thursday morning at 10:30 before the high school domestic science class.

In the afternoon, the hour to be announced, Mrs. Downing will speak before the Tulsa housewives and other women interested, in the public library auditorium. She will be introduced by Mrs. W. N. Sill, district president of the Oklahoma Federation of Women's clubs. She will address the domestic science class of Henry Kendall college on Friday morning and will lecture again in the library on Friday afternoon.

"In this day of high prices every woman should be an expert on foods, food combinations and how to purchase and prepare them most easily and economically.

"Food costs are higher, since the war but they need not be so high if American wives will learn how to buy and prepare food economically. Everywhere I have been, the women have seemed to realize this. They have stormed me with questions—pointed questions that bear on food-buying and preparation. Their interest is so real and so widespread that I feel safe in predicting that two years from now will see the already capable housewives of America transformed into an army of food experts that will do away with the waste of foods so common today, and hence cut costs."

Wife Chases Husband and Both End in Jail Berths

"Put me in jail. I'm crazy!"

These were the words of Frank Hastings as he rushed up to the desk at police station after being chased a quarter of a mile by his wife, May Hastings. Hastings had barely eighed safety of the cellblock when his wife appeared and informed the officers that her husband was not crazy but "jealous."

In a case like that the officers are at a loss to know what to do. Sergeant Klein has reduced himself considerably since he took on a roll of fat from some other relative and said to him, "Go home, woman's a crazy."

Mrs. Hastings began chasing her husband in case and after he had found another crazy visit or.

"Frank came home for dinner. We live on West Eighth street. We had a little argument and he struck me. Then he got to thinking about it I guess and decided he should be locked up for hitting me. I wasn't mad and I took the blow.

"He started out for the jail and I started after him to try and keep him from getting in but he wouldn't wait. He gave himself up."

Mrs. Hastings protest Mrs. Hastings was not the "women's dormitory." "Please don't let him out of there till I get out," she said. "I'm sure he wouldn't." Sergeant Klein assured all officers who are parently was convinced that he had found another crazy visitor.

HARDSHIPS AND PLEASURE MIXED IN DERBY FLIGHT

though the whole city was out to welcome us. I hated to leave there.

"I talked in a couple of churches last Sunday and had all kinds of invitations I could not accept and was rather disappointed to have to go away.

"I was invited to lunch by the king of Bright no. He was late and I did not have time to wait. I invited him to ride and he informed his day was so short he would not have time.

"We had three days in San Francisco and sal away about 1:20 in the afternoon on Tuesday. We found Battle Mountain, Nev., about the most enthusiastic town in the west.

"Battle Mountain is the home town of Capt. Dowell H. Smith. The whole place turned out at the schoolhouse that night and they gave a dinner and dances in our honor. I did not dance. They presented us with a golden nugget and three arrowheads. We took Trixie, the dog, along for company."

Sergeant Klein interrupted the lieutenant there to remark that during the flight "Trixie kept me company and helped to keep me warm." He said the dog was unusually cold in the mornings but kept her nose into the wind most of the time and seemed to enjoy the trip.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE IS NOT YET COMPLETE

Because a number of those connected with the drive of the Salvation Army for the fund of $18,000 needed to engage the local quarters are out of the city, J. A. Edwards, director of the campaign, said late yesterday that no tabulation of the collection of pledges or cash can be made until Monday.

It is not definitely known how much money has been raised and for that reason the director would make no statement. He announced, however, that the drive will be continued until all the money needed is raised. It is probable that a report will be made at a special called meeting Monday.

PRINTERS' STRIKE TO DELAY BIG MAGAZINES

Demands for More Money and Shorter Hours Causing Publishers to Seek New Homes

A quarrel between certain local unions and their international unions has closed every magazine printing establishment in New York city. Some of the local unions have retained their membership in their international union, while the pressmen, feeders and paper handlers local unions have seceded and struck. These local unions demand that a 44 to 44 hour week and an increase of $14 per week with double and triple pay for overtime take effect immediately. The international unions contend that the men should return to work and the entire matter be left to arbitration.

The publishers of the magazines, meanwhile, have suspend publication until the unions fight out their differences. This means that Collier's Weekly, McClure's, Pictorial Review, Cosmopolitan, Hearst's Magazine, Harper's Bazaar, good Housekeeping, Harper's Magazine, Metropolitan, Scribner's Magazine, Century, Munsey's Popular, Delineator, Everybody's, McCall's, Popular Science Monthly, Cupid, Vanity Fair, Motion Picture Magazine and 132 others as well as many of the largest trade papers in the country will not appear on time, as usual.

Some publishers are making plans to remove their plants from New York city to other places and many western cities are bidding strenuously to induce these publishers to consider their particular localities. Three very large publications have already completed plans for removal and their printing machinery and paper supply is now being shipped to Chicago.

Mildred Pullen Chases and Captures Black Shoplifter

Either Mildred Pullen, saleslady at a local women's clothing store on South Main, is some stepper or Matha Thomas, male, negro would-be shoplifter, was doomed from birth to make slow progress through life by use of his pedals.

Shortly after noon yesterday Thomas snatched a $12 silk waist from the store in question and beat it out the back door. Miss Pullen was right then on the jump after him. Rushing into the alley she displayed utter disregard for the dictates of fashion, gathered her skirts to that degree where action of the lower limbs are less hampered and stepped on the gas. The race was on.

Up the alley between Main and Boston and across Second street sped the black clutching the waist. Close upon his heels sped Miss Pullen and the experience of being chased by a "wild woman" must have paralyzed Thomas with fright. Twice the young lady caught her victim but twice he broke away and ran. But Miss Pullen was not intending to let anyone get away with a $12 waist at such a bargain and when the speed contest finally ended at Third street she had won the handicap sprint, captured the black whirlwind and won the admiration of a copper who popped up about that time to make the arrest.

Miss Pullen then returned to her work with the captured waist while the black went to the station.

"Some stepper," remarked a man in the crowd who watched the finish of the race near Third street.

HAVING HEARD

CHARLES HACKETT

The Exclusive Columbia artist sing at Convention Hall last night, you now know why he is so famous and why records made by him are in such great demand.

His first two records made for the Columbia are "Echo Ridente in Cielo" from Rossini's Barber of Seville and the beautiful, highly dramatic "Che Gelida Manina" from Puccini's "La Boheme."

In both Hackett displays a voice of great power and beauty, together with the most finished execution.

We will be pleased to demonstrate these numbers to you.

Hackett's choice of the Columbia Records as the medium through which to bring his wonderful voice to the whole world, is but one more mark of the artists' approval of the Columbia's absolute superiority.
