FINE VANDAL WHO ADMITS OFFENSE

Dodson Gets $25 and Cost After Pleading Guilty to Looting Home

The fine punishment passed upon a looting of the storied Sequoyah Hotel was in January, 1 [illegible] day, third of [illegible] after the loot had [illegible] Dodson was arrested by [illegible] when the vandals [illegible] off during [illegible] T. Bridgewater who [illegible] ruins.

Dodson is said to have [illegible] officers. He was [illegible] charging in [illegible] but he pleaded guilty [illegible] into court.

Vandals worked [illegible] a half after it had been [illegible] Wednesday morning [illegible] looting was carried on [illegible] adult market. [illegible] Many of the latter's [illegible] furnished with expensive furniture, all of which was taken before the houses were fired. A large number of the stolen property has been recovered, officials say, but so far Dodson is the only man who has been punished. Officials say many citizens have called attention to that story had in their possession certain property which they had taken Wednesday, believing it to have been stolen. This property is being taken to the police station and inventoried, as fast as it can be placed on exhibition.

A large room at the courthouse is now under lock and key filled with furniture which has been recovered. Among the articles being held are four phonographs, two pianos, several dining room tables, two of which are of walnut, many chairs, a large quantity of bedding, clothing and numerous other articles.

At the police station much more property is being held. Much of the property has been brought in by different parties but police officials have recovered a large portion. Among the articles held by the police are three phonographs, two finely upholstered parlor chairs, two leather-bottom mahogany dining room chairs, two new trunks, a quantity of bedding, clothing and several miscellaneous household articles.

All of the property will be held for identification by its negro owners. As fast as houses are built in the devastated district, the articles will be returned to the owners, officials say.

While several hundred dollars worth of property has been recovered already and it is believed that much more will be recovered, officials declare, although the greater part has been burned. The loss on household goods alone is said to be $500,000.
