PAGE OPPOSED BY TULSA LABOR MEN

Union Officer Says Men Against Acceptance of Shell Creek Scheme

Nine out of every ten laboring men are unanimously opposed to any project of page suggested by Chas. Page, according to S. W. Hales, chairman of the Greater Tulsa club general committee, who appeared before the mayor and city commissioners Friday. This applies especially to the Shell creek project. This attitude of the laboring men, Hales stated, was caused by Page's refusal to show any consideration to local labor in the Shell creek dam project, and his tendency to beat down wages for common labor to a scale that cannot be termed a living wage.

"Labor's attitude toward Page was demonstrated publicly Labor day of this year when it held its annual picnic at Cherokee park instead of at Sand Springs park," Hales explained. "Heretofore," he said, "as soon as the Labor day parade was over the participants have gone to Sand Springs park to enjoy themselves. This year, however, it was found that Page has been outstanding enemy of labor, and the result was that the place for holding the picnic was changed."

Apologized for Outburst.

Hales apologized to the city commission for what he termed the "outburst" of Rev. Harold G. Cooke at the organization meeting of the Greater Tulsa club at the Moose hall Wednesday night, at which Mayor T. D. Evans was one of the speakers. Cooke, he stated, was to have confined his remarks to Mooseheart, the philanthropic institution maintained by the Moose order, and to the unemployment problem, but instead he launched into a discussion of the water problem and wound up by urging the adoption of Chas. Page's offer to the city.

The meeting was in no sense a water meeting, according to Hales, and Cooke was completely out of order when he injected the water question.

WILL CALL FOR BIDS

Quanah Avenue Property Owners in West Tulsa Still Insist Upon Paving of Street.

Property owners along Quanah avenue in West Tulsa living on the stretch of road between the end of city paving and the beginning of the Red Fork hard-surfaced highway are still anxious that this half-mile be paved. A letter from several prominent property owners thereon read at the meeting of the mayor and city commissioners Friday in which the residents protested strongly against futher delay in letting the contract for paving that will connect the city and the county on the southwest.

The commission ordered that a resolution be run at once asking for bids on this project.

There has been no small amount of agitation in favor of paving this section of Quanah avenue for several years. In bad weather it has been the worst stretch of road in the county. City Engineer C. E. Griggs and other city officials have consulted with paving contractors about the project and have been informed repeatedly that the abutting property is not of sufficient value to justify city paving 36 feet wide, equipped with storm sewers. Last year it was proposed that an 18 foot concrete road be built, but the property owners declared they would not permit it to be built on such specifications.

A few weeks later the Automobile club and the city joined forces and built a macadam roadway on Phoenix avenue, one block east of Quanah, which has made possible a passable throughfare at all times of the year.

City officials are skeptical as to whether any bids will be received. However, several property owners have assured them the project will interest contractors.

employed as a jewelery salesman, and also worked for a time in an automobile repair shop. According to the police his description answers that of a man sought in connection with a recent holdup.

Dougherty's body was seen on a sandbar in the Desplaines river early today by a passerby. The police were notified and found it lying in less than three inches of water. In the pockets was a watch, which was still running. Twenty-seven dollars and some cards by which they identified the body also were found. The automobile company was notified and the investigation started which resulted in the arrest of Church.

Had No Account.

An inquiry at the bank where Church, it is said, planned to obtain a certified check for the car disclosed that he had no account there and was not known to officers of the bank. At the offices of the automobile company it was said that when Dougherty started out with the car, accompanied by Ausmus, Church protested and offered Ausmus $15 not to accompany them, explaining that an extra man was not needed.

Police tonight were dragging the Desplaines in the hope of finding the body of Ausmus and a squad of detectives had been sent to Wisconsin to bring back Church.

added, substantial progress was made in "clearing the atmosphere."

Official treasury figures prepared for the committee show that with the six changes recommended yesterday by Secretary Mellon, the house bill would yield $3,298,455,000 this fiscal year, or $16,000,000 less than the house measure in its present form, and $2,785,750,000 for the calendar year 1922, or $95,500,000 less than the house bill.
