CHANG CHAU APPOINTED POLICE COURT INTERPRETER

Chang Chau, one of the prominent members of the Chinese colony, educated in the public schools and associated in business with some of the leading firms, was yesterday appointed by Judge Lymer as Chinese interpreter in the district court.

Chang Chau was interpreter of the court under Judge Whitney, but owing to an effort to deprive him of his position on the ground that he was not a citizen, he was forced into retirement some years ago. He is one of the best interpreters the court has had. He assumes his duties this morning.

Judge W. B. Lymer yesterday took his seat on the police court bench for the first time and sentenced a defendant who appeared some of the most important cases which have come before the Honolulu district court for over a year.

He has appointed his official staff temporarily, subject to approval by the Republican central committee, Nagaran Fernandez becomes chief clerk in the place of Ben Zablan, who was dismissed through alleged complicity with the police court scandal which resulted in the arrest of Henry Clark for embezzlement.

Dan L. Keen, formerly in the office of A. G. M. Robertson, and up to last week clerk and messenger for the Board of Supervisors, becomes assistant clerk. Eli G. Crawford, who is at Hilo selling the electrical work, returns the national position of Hawaiian interpreter.

FEDERAL COURT MATTERS.

Following the selection of a jury to try the case of the government against Chee Kwai Lee and Chee Lee, the action was set for trial this morning. This is one of the most important cases in the history of the federal prosecution of Chinese for violations of the Chinese Act. [illegible]

TREATMENT FOR NEW DISEASE

Authority Recommends Massage and Exercise in Cases of Infantile Paralysis.

[illegible]

"The onset of this disease is usually without warning, beginning with vomiting and fever, and the patient may often be found the next morning, but usually comes on from two to four days afterward. Sometimes it is not noticed for a week or ten days. It is accompanied by rapid wasting of the muscles, which, however, may be obscured by the presence of fat. Sooner or later contractures develop, causing extension or inversion of the foot, over extension or flexion at the knee, while simply foot is present after complete paralysis of all the muscles.

"There may be overextension of the knees or relaxation of the abdominal walls, simulating hernia; the scapulae may be winged as a result of paralysis of the serratus, and the unbalanced actions of the arm and hand muscles may produce marked deformities.

"The paralysis is characteristic by reason of its distribution. Growth for the following table shows the most frequent combinations of regions involved:

Distribution of Paralysis.

Both legs	215
Right leg	132
Left leg	143
Right arm	30
Left arm	23
Both arms	5
All extremities	53
Arm and leg, same side	14
Arm and leg, opposite side	5
Trunk	26
Three extremities	14
Total	661

"The groups involved may be determined by the weeping by reaction stimulation, and by exact examination of the muscles with the impulses of "electric." The relationship between paralysis may be determined with great accuracy and the difficulty of the case been treated upon by Dr. [illegible] in his excellent lectures on Massage and Manipulations (Dodd).
