C. J. BRONSTON DECLARES WAR.

Urges the Use of Force on Election Day—Democrats Must Win One Way or Another.

Bailey's Special Train On Its Tour—Immense Audiences Gather to Hear the Republican Nominee.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 28.—Hon. C. J. Bronston started his audience by saying in a speech here last night that force must be used on election day if necessary in order that the Democrats could win. He strongly urged resorting to force and declared that he himself would lead a crowd if necessary. He said that Democracy must win one way or another. His speech created immense excitement and astonished his hearers. But it is in line with Bronston's well known ways of doing business.

Lady-Nabb Nuptials.

Princeton, Ky., Oct 27.—R. W. Lady, a prominent young farmer of Trigg county, and Miss Mary Nabb, of this county, were married last evening at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Vallie Nabb. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. M. Wise. Mr. and Mrs. Lady left at 8:50 for Nashville to attend the Centennial.

BAILEY'S SPECIAL TRAIN.

The Speeches Heard by Good Crowds Along the Line of Their Journey.

Corbin, Ky., Oct 27.—Good crowds greeted J. G. Bailey's special train in Corbin today. The Republican candidate for governor spoke at Stanton Hall, the largest in the city, and had a well pleased audience.

There were at least five hundred present and speeches were made by Senator Deboe, D. Hunter, K. J. Hampton, W. B. Jones and Candidate Bailey. Ex-Congressman Wilson, who has been around the train since it left Louisville, acted as master of ceremonies. Although the party has been out now two days, they seem to stand the strain well and are a good spirited. Good crowds have met the train at each stop and at Crab Orchard, Danville, Lexington, Alexandria, Pleasant View and Cynthiana from two hundred to four hundred were present. At Mt. Vernon, London and points from five hundred to seven hundred have attended the speaking, while at Williamsburg about one thousand people were present.

Some of the most distinguished Republicans in the state have been with the party, including ex-Congressman Finley and Judge Loyd. Judge Denny, who was one of the jury in Mrs. Bailey's case at Lexington this morning, left at Corbin to be home tonight, but will join them again tomorrow. There is a great deal of enthusiasm being worked up in the sections among Republicans, and a large vote is promised. The party will return to the K. C. branch of the L. and N. tomorrow and stop at Winchester at night.

Why pay 10c or 20c for store pipe, when Noah's Ark will sell it for 10c a joint. Just think, they sell elbows at 5 cents.

POLICE COURT.

Two Men Charged With Using Bad Language Were Acquitted.

The case against Ed Morton, of the county, who is charged with stealing a cow belonging to L. F. Mayfield, of near Massac, was called in Judge Sanders' court this morning and continued until Saturday.

The warrant was issued before Justice Hartley, and there is some question relative to who will try the case.

The case against Wm. Jones and Henry Flagg, charged with using obscene language towards a lady, was dismissed.

The big spectacular production, Chas. E. Yale's "Devil's Auction," comes to Morton's Opera House tomorrow night. The "Devil's Auction" is a very popular attraction and never fails to draw a crowded house. They will no doubt have their usual big business here tomorrow night.

Circuit Court.

Circuit court was engaged in trying the appeal case of Thurman against Cochran today.

The Hon. James R. Hindman makes the last speech of his campaign today at Georgetown.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

State Convention Begins Tomorrow at Owensboro.

A Delegation Will Attend From Paducah.

The State Convention of the Christian Endeavor will begin tomorrow at Owensboro, and Paducah, as usual, will furnish her quota of delegates.

Misses Aline Bagby and Hattie Norvell and Master Douglas Bagby were the only ones who left this forenoon for Owensboro, but this afternoon quite a delegation will likely leave with more to follow tonight and tomorrow.

NO INSPECTION

Will Be Made of Trains—No Danger.

The Board of Health Commended For Its Action of Yesterday.

Both Drs. Mason and the Board of Health have deemed it unnecessary to make any inspection of trains and passengers coming from infected points, as was done last year, and consequently, when no one could be found who could or would do the work, a few days ago, a few people here asked the board of health to do something in the matter, and we commended the action from the South.

There seems to be well filled with refugees who had principally from Memphis. Last night every boarding house was full, and many more could be found that morning who did not have a place to sleep. Many were on the lookout today for furnished rooms to occupy until the scare is over.

One gentleman from Memphis stated at the Palmer House this morning that the damage to business done to Memphis would exceed over a million dollars.

Our citizens heard approbation of the action of the health authorities in detaining that Paducah would not be invaded. It has always been thought that such steps would be necessary, but, as Goethe said, well. With a good sanitary inspection in many places below, it is almost impossible for a sick person to come into Paducah from the south.

Yesterday Mitchell, a small place below Cairo, had appointed a committee to meet the people. It passed a resolution to stop trains to get off money, and paper for the Democrat, so I no man was allowed to go beyond Cairo away from the train.

Now, I and 2 were hurry ordered back to Fort Jefferson, Tenn., unless passed. No passengers are allowed to get off there.

The Paducah (Texas) authorities notified any night passenger or sleeping car, and no passengers from Shelby county, Tenn., will be allowed to stop there at any time.

The Dyersburg board of health today decided to give government notice that no mail from the South between Cairo was not fumigated, and that unless it was so it would be refused. It would not be received here.

No trains of any description are allowed to stop today, to stop at Hickman, Ky.

Newborn today became more generous. The authorities notified the railroad company that engines would be allowed to take on water and coal there, provided it was first cut off from the rest of the train, the latter being left outside the city limits. The engine must then back up to the train and go through town at a rate that will prevent a single germ from escaping.

A lady of Memphis telegraphed a friend here today to secure her accommodations for herself and child. The gentleman in question went to ten different hotels and boarding houses but no accommodations could be had.

It has been suggested that all those who have accommodations send in their names to the newspapers for the information of refugees. The principal reason accommodations are now so hard to find is because the refugees do not know where to go for them.

There is no danger from the refugees. Before anyone can leave Memphis, he or she must take oath that so far as he or she knows, he or she has not been in the infected district within thirty days. Memphis is able to keep her sick there, and wants them to remain there where they can get the best medical attention. Past experience taught her that people with fever or exposed to it who left Memphis, usually fell into hands of doctors unused to yellow fever, and died.

JO A. PARKER'S STATEMENT.

Explains His Letter to Representative Edrington—His Position the Best For the Populist Party.

A Few Extracts From the Last Issue of the Free Republic—Parker Makes a Very Strong Statement.

The following are a few extracts from the statement of Jo. A. Parker in the last issue of the Free Republic, Parker says:

When last Wednesday's Louisville "Dispatch" reached me, it came bristling with sensation. It came with flaming headlines, announcing an exposure of Jo A. Parker.

I naturally felt uneasy when I saw the headlines, and my mind flew back over Time's winding path, and reviewed my life to see if there had been some terrible thing which had thus been brought to light. I could think of nothing mean that I had done, so I read the article to learn the news.

I found it to be from the pen of L. K. Taylor, an erstwhile Populist who got his goose cooked in a Democratic primary a few days ago. The gist of his great exposure, over which the "Dispatch" placed its screaming headlines, was a letter I wrote to W. J. Edrington during the Senatorial struggle, and which I had published of my own free will in "The Free Republic," two or three weeks before Taylor discovered it, or before the Dispatch discovered Taylor. All the readers of this paper read that letter when published. You can clearly see what a desperate effort the Dispatch has made to injure my canvass. Its motive is clear. While I knew that this letter had been given broadcast to the public by me, it yet quotes it and writes headlines, in a manner calculated to make the innocent voter who can never learn the other side, think I have done something diabolical, and that a martyred hero by the name of Taylor has arisen and rushed forward with his knowledge to save his country, and that the Dispatch is the chief agency of the performance. * * *

I never wrote a letter to Mr. Edrington or any one else in the interest of Hunter for United States senator. To say that I did is to misconstrue my motive, or to lie like Ananias. I do not accuse those who ignorantly misunderstand me, but I intend to give my respects to those who have lied.

I wrote the letter quoted by Mr. Taylor. I published it in my paper, as I have said, two or three weeks ago, and acknowledge it is authenticity, and explained its meaning. I have never written a polished letter I am ashamed of, and I am not ashamed of this.

My one motive in writing this letter was to advance the People's party, and to give the Democrats a chance to elect Mr. Blackburn. * * *

I explicitly stated to Mr. Edrington that I had no desire to deprive a worse for him, that these were simply my views, as a private citizen.

Now, analyze the letter. What did I propose?

First, For the Populist members to vote for Base the Populist nominee, as long as possible.

Second. Then at a time when their votes would elect, to vote for Blackburn, and RETAIN THE RVOE, giving the Democrats know that they now had a chance to elect Mr. Blackburn and urging them to do so.

Third. And if they refused, that the two Populist votes would go to Hunter and elect him, thus throwing all the responsibility of the election of Hunter upon those who bolted.

I thought then that when the gold Democrats saw that their refusal to meet us in the election of Hunter that they would go to Blackburn. Mr. Speight, for one, afterward stated that he would have voted gently to the session for Blackburn whenever his vote could elect. I believe that the others would have done so too, before the Blackburn managers opened up their shade of vile slander against them and emboldened them so as to make it out of the question for them to ever vote for Blackburn.

I thought this plan the only one that could elect Blackburn. I believed it would elect him whenever tried. I believe it today. * * *

But there is nothing that does not have humor in it, and Taylor's letter is no exception. I quote:

"Had he wanted to ruin the Democratic party, as he claimed, why did he not stop when he advised the vote for Blackburn? That would have thrown the responsibility of his defeat on the heads of the gold Democrats, as it did do when Poor, later on, joined Edrington in his support of Blackburn."

This is real funny. If such a course would ruin the Democratic party, as Taylor seems to indicate, why didn't it do it? It only resulted in confusion in our party, the desertion of Poor and Edrington to the Democratic party, the defeat of Blackburn, a natural disgrace to our state, the expenditure of $138,000 of the people's money, the prevention of any legislative work by the general assembly, and the election of a Republican Senator at last. I don't think I would have to knock a voter down with a club to show him which policy was in the people's interest, as well as in the interest of the People's party.

* * *

Shortly after writing these letters I went to Frankfort. I called on Senator Blackburn. He complained that Poor would not vote for him. He said that he had accommodated him whenever asked, and had secured the appointment of several of his friends in the Federal service, and yet Poor wouldn't vote for him under the circumstances. He agreed that my plan was a good one and asked me to lay it before Poor and urge him to act on it. He said he could be elected, he was confident, if Poor should vote for him on one ballot. This was in Blackburn's room at the Kenyon Hotel. We were alone there, Senator Henry L. Martin having just left the room before I explained my proposition.

I don't know whether Mr. Blackburn will admit this or deny it. There were no witnesses, and it is with Mr. Blackburn and his conscience to speak out.

I never visited Dr. Hunter's headquarters, I do not know where they were. I think they were at the Capital Hotel, but I don't know whether they were up stairs or down stairs, or in the basement. I never met Dr. Hunter to more than speak to him during the whole session of the legislature.

THE FIRST TANK.

The Sewerage Is Proving a Success.

The First Tank in, and the First "Flush" Today.

This morning the first flush tank for the sewerage was put in, only ten being ready at present to use.

The tank is in Rowland's alley, near 8th and Harrison street, and when the water was turned out, the sewerage was found to work like a charm. The flushing is done automatically, and the sewerage engineers say the tank is the simplest they ever saw.

The sewerage so far as it has now been constructed, is perfect, and city engineer Wilcox says no better results from todays test could have been wished.

This tank is built in the earth and is similar to a small cistern. It fills from the water works and when full automatically discharges itself into the sewers, flushing the sides of the pipes and carrying everything before it to the outfall. There has been but one built so far and it works so exactly as to excite surprise at its nearly good perfection. After watching the tank fill and discharge itself the reporter, in company with several gentlemen, went down the line of the sewers for some distance and when the caps were removed the rushing of the water was plainly to be seen.

There is a sufficient fall to allow the water to move rapidly, and it was observed in the laterals as well as in the mains. There is no doubt but the system will be most satisfactory and a grand success. Some of those people who were off the edge of their seats, as well as the patrons of good people, picking flaws and finding fault with the sewers, should go down and see what may be seen. Then we shall not have so many "it is said," "we have heard," "it is talked on the streets," and such like stuff.

When people know a good place to do their trading they seldom change. That is why Noah's Ark has built up such a vast business in this city.

RETAIL GROCERS.

A Local Association Formed in Paducah.

It Meets Every Monday at Odd Fellows Hall.

The retail grocers of Paducah organized a few days ago, an association for mutual benefit and protection. The officers are:

Mr. G. W. Robertson, President.
Mr. M. V. Cherry, Vice President.
D. W. Randolph, Secretary.
Lloyd Boswell Treasurer.

One of the officers stated that some of the wholesale grocers, probably unintentionally, are encroaching on the retail trade, and that the association organized principally to adjust matters between retailers and wholesalers.

The association has a hall in the Odd Fellows' Hall, corner of Third and Broadway, and meets every Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The finest line of coal buckets, fire shovels, hose sets and coal vases are found at Noah's Ark, and cheaper than any other place in town.

CRUMBAUGH

Will Not Superintend the Coast Geodetic Survey.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Vanderlip has selected Prof. Pritchett, of Washington University, St. Louis, for Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and he will be appointed. The President was in favor of the appointment of Crumbaugh, but for some reason the opposition was too strong in the Treasury Department. There is no doubt that Maj. Crumbaugh was well equipped for the position, and the cause of his rejection is a mystery.

Maj. Crumbaugh refuses to discuss the subject tonight. He will remain in Washington, however, in the hope that some good plum will still fall in his direction. It is said tonight that he may get the Commissionership of Navigation.
