included subscriptions made by the employes of the Ellis Paint company, Baxter Furniture company, Anaconda Hardware company, Bertoglio Mercantile company and the Board of Fire Underwriters. A subscription of $51, made by the Japanese employes of the Butte Country club, was included in the report of subscriptions received at headquarters. The Syrian Peace society's contribution of $291 was included in today's reports.

Secretary J. A. Walsh of the Missoula Stampede announced that net profits of the Stampede will be donated to the Red Cross.

Band Concert Tomorrow.

Plans for a big Red Cross demonstration and parade on Saturday night have been abandoned by the executive committee, and in its place a band concert by the A. C. M. band has been substituted.

Tomorrow will be Red Cross Labor day, and Campaign Manager Carroll announced this noon that there would be some surprises at the noonday luncheon. The card system of soliciting will be abandoned Saturday night and thereafter subscriptions in all amounts will be solicited. If all of the cards previously listed are exhausted at noon, Manager Carroll announced that the campaign would then be thrown open tomorrow.

The three local department stores yesterday devoted their newspaper advertising to the Red Cross and local papers each contributed a page.

W. M. Tuohy presided at today's luncheon.

Ovation for Bishop.

With the business details of the meeting disposed of, he introduced Bishop Carroll and as he arose to speak he was accorded an ovation.

After voicing his appreciation, Bishop Carroll plunged into a discussion of the Red Cross and America's part in the war, which time and again evoked enthusiastic applause.

"This is the most charitable of all purposes," said Bishop Carroll in referring to the Red Cross. Then he discussed Butte's hearty response to the appeal despite disturbed conditions, declaring, "there isn't anything Butte undertakes that she can't accomplish under any circumstances."

"The reports just read," he continued, "convince me that you won't have to wait until the close of the campaign on Monday before the $150,000 apportioned to you is raised."

Forced Into War.

Discussing the war out of which grows need of relief by the Red Cross, Bishop Carroll declared that America was forced into the fight against its wishes. "Our patience was sorely tried," he said. "We appealed in vain time and again that the rules of humanity, respected by all nations, be no longer violated, and it was only when our repeated appeals were given no heed that in the interests of humanity America was obliged to draw the sword. That sword was drawn to defend our rights; the rights and liberties of the world."

To Save Day for Democracy.

The bishop pointed out that when America entered the war, it was agreed by all nations that the cause of the allies was a hopeless one.

"This is a war," said he, "in which absolutism and democracy are struggling for mastery. Since Stephen Langdon, Bishop of Canterbury, wrested the Magna Charta from King John, democracy has been in the ascendency and now that it is imperilled America is going to save the day."

"We must throw all our resources into the fray," continued Bishop Carroll. Then he dwelt upon Butte's showing in the matter of voluntary enlistments, in subscription for Liberty bonds and in registration, declaring that now that the appeal of charity has come, it too must be answered in like measure.

"You are used to difficulties here," said he. "They are a part of your life; you wouldn't be happy without them and they serve to spur you on to greater effort."

Bishop Carroll concluded with a patriotic peroration which brought his auditors to their feet.

Through typographical error A. T. Morgan was yesterday accredited with a subscription of $20. Mr. Morgan has given $200 to the Red Cross.

TODAY'S NATIONAL TOTAL IS $75,000,000

Washington, June 22.—America's campaign to raise $100,000,000 this week for the Red Cross today assumed international proportions when word reached headquarters that committees of Americans in London, Paris, Pan-Ecuador, Peru and other South American countries are raising funds. Promises of contributions aggregating several hundred thousand dollars came also from Manila, Alaska and Guam.

Compilations at headquarters early today showed $63,000,000 was obtained in four days, and today's work was expected to raise the total to near $75,000,000.

It was said today that the field of work for the American Red Cross is developing so fast that $100,000,000 might not be sufficient for long and possibly another popular canvass for funds would be conducted or congress would be asked for an appropriation.

BRALY TELLS OF CAUSE OF FIRE

North Butte General Manager Witness at Inquiry Into Disaster.

CABLE PART OF FIRE PREVENTION SCHEME

Sought to Avoid Repetition of Modoc Fire and Walked Into One.

That pursuance of a method of preventing a repetition of the Modic mine fire, resulted indirectly in starting of the Granite Mountain mine shaft fire, which claimed at least 162 lives, was the testimony of General Manager Norman Braly of the North Butte company at today's inquiry into the disaster being conducted by Coroner Aeneas Lane. "We were guarding against fire, when we walked into one," said Mr. Braly.

General Manager Braly, the first witness called when the hearing was resumed this afternoon, explained that the cable which ignited while it was being extricated from the shaft, after breaking from its moorings, was intended to connect up motors and transformers, placed in a concrete chamber on the 2,600-foot level as a measure of fire prevention. Burning of the frayed sections of insulation in this cable from contact with a carbide lamp started the shaft fire.

Mr. Braly today introduced maps and charts to show every detail of the underground workings. They pictured doors and bulkheads and showed that no bulkheads existed between the Granite Mountain and Speculator shafts. All of the doors, Manager Braly said, were easily opened.

Recounts Origin of Fire.

Late yesterday afternoon, Sam Patterson, who was with John "Baldy" Collins, Ernest Sullau and John Constantino when the cable, which started the fire, blazed from contact with a carbide lamp, retold the story of origin of the fire, corroborating Collins' testimony in main essentials. He told of Sullau's attempts to put out the fire and voiced the belief that recurrence of the fire after the first blaze had apparently been smothered was due to spread of the flames to other sections of the frayed covering of the cable.

After the cable fired, Patterson said they tried to get a hose to put water on the fire, but the flames made such headway that their efforts were vain. Sullau, he said, immediately started into the drift to warn the men and with four others Patterson started for the Speculator shaft. He told of breaking down the bulkhead, built to keep out gas from the Modoc fire, and of exit through the High Ore shaft.

John Constantino corroborated Patterson.

Tells How Sullau Fell.

John Bronson, shift boss in charge of work on the 2,400 and 2,500-foot levels, said that he was warned of the fire when Albert Cobb, a motorman, came running into the drift, shouting that the shaft was on fire. Bronson said he met Sullau in the cross-cut and the latter ordered all of the men out at once. Unable to get the cage at the 2,500-foot station of the Speculator, Bronson said the men climbed up to the 2,600-foot level and made their way out through the Badger State mine.

Sullau, he said, was with the party. "He said to me, 'My God, Jack, I don't know if it was my lamp or somebody else's that started this fire,'" the witness testified. The party encountered gas and smoke in big volume and Sullau was overcome. With Matt Mooney and McFadden, Bronson said he tried to carry Sullau out, but when McFadden, who was carrying him, stumbled and fell, they realized that they would all be lost if they tried to bring Sullau out and left him in the drift. He said helmet men appeared a few minutes later while they were in a winze and rescued Sullau, directing them out of the workings by way of the Badger State.

William H. Rogers, a pipeman, told of first seeing the fire from the station of the 2,400-foot level. He said he ran through the drift warning the men and closed a door to keep smoke from getting into the drift. The fire at first appeared to be making its way up between the casing boards, he said.

Tells How Cable Slipped.

C. T. Hale, boss electrician at the Speculator, described the manner in which the cable got away while it was being lowered, a short time before Sullau and the others sought to extricate it. The cable was 1,200 feet in length and previously had been in use at the Butte and London. Ivor Rhude, repairman at the Granite Mountain shaft, demonstrated to the jury just how the cable was lowered. He said they decided to raise the cable in the morning, when they left the job at 10:30 o'clock Friday night after having been on shift for nearly 20 hours.

W. W. Talbott, chief electrician for the Anaconda company, said that the cable was in perfect condition when it was prepared for lowering down the Granite Mountain shaft. He introduced a piece of the cable in evidence, explaining how it became stripped when it broke and piled up at a point 50 feet below the 2,400-foot level.

FOUR MORE BODIES ARE DISCOVERED

Beneath Cavein on the 2,200-Foot Level of Speculator. One Identified.

Four bodies were discovered beneath the cave-in on the 2,200-foot station of the Speculator mine early this morning, and two of them were brought to the surface, one being identified as the remains of Patrick Shields of 422 East Broadway.

The bodies were discovered by the crew working under the supervision of Shift Boss T. E. Rucker. The cave-in under which the men were found occurred at the time of the fire and the work of excavating was commenced as soon as the mine was cleared of gas. It is not believed that any more bodies will be found on the 2,200-foot station.

Patrick Shields, whose body was the only one identified, was very well known here and was especially prominent among the Irish of the city. He was born in Ireland and came to Butte five years ago. He is survived by his cousin, Patrick McAlinden, of this city, and his father, John Shields, one brother and four sisters, all at the old home in Ireland. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning from the Daniels & Bilboa undertaking parlors, proceeding to the Sacred Heart church, where high mass will be celebrated. Interment will be made in Holy Cross cemetery. The body was identified by a tobacco pouch and several other effects which were in the clothes.
