WHERE CUPID MADE A SLIP

Matrimonial Bureau Romance That Ended Badly.

GIRL'S LONG TRIP FOR NAUGHT

FOUND PROSPECTIVE GROOM WAS OLD MAN AND BALKED.

CUPID WAS ROUTED yesterday. It was all due to a bunco trick played on both the prospective bride and groom.

On Thursday Charles E. Price, a well-to-do rancher, arrived in this city from Paonia, Colo., to meet and marry the girl who had been selected for him. Price attracted attention at the Windsor hotel, where he stopped, and on the streets, by wearing a sweater of immaculate white, a white hat, loud check trousers and a small walking stick. He looked as though he might be older than 60, but he confessed to "just over 40." Almost everyone who talked with him learned that he is a widower and has two children, and that he came to Salt Lake to marry.

Arriving by another train on Thursday were Harry E. Derby and his cousin, Miss Emma Derby, from Detroit, Mich. Harry escorted Emma here to meet her fiance and to give the bride away to Mr. Price. They registered at the Kenyon. Harry left the city yesterday for parts unknown, but the winsome girl whom he lured away from home is stranded here.

"I will tell you all about it if the news won't get to my parents," said Miss Derby, between heart-rending sobs, last night at the Wey hotel, where Mrs. Wey has generously taken her in. "Some time ago my aunt in Detroit, who is a widow, put a matrimonial advertisement in a paper. Mr. Price answered it and they exchanged letters on the subject of matrimony. Finally Mr. Price wrote that my aunt was too old for him; he wanted a younger wife.

"Somehow my cousin got hold of the letters and wrote to Mr. Price that he knew of a young woman who would just suit him, and sent him my photograph. I never wrote to Mr. Price and never received a letter from him, and what I have told you and some other matters I will tell you about were unknown by me until I came to Salt Lake.

"I learned that Mr. Price exchanged letters with Harry, my cousin, and that he got $250 from the old rancher to come to Salt Lake with, and that he had been promised $500 more on my arrival to fit me out for the wedding. Harry misrepresented things to me or I would not have come. He said Mr. Price was rich and generous and a little over 30 and a nice man.

"Well, when we arrived here we met Mr. Price, but I wouldn't marry him if he were the last man on earth. I guess he could easily tell that I could not love such a man as he is. He seemed so peculiar in his ways. The old man promised to pay my way back home, but at the last minute he said he didn't see how he could, for he had only $3 left.

"Today at noon Harry said he was going to leave Salt Lake, but he wouldn't tell me where he was going. I don't think he got the other $500 from the old man. Mr. Price said he let him have only $36 after we came here. I guess he thought Harry was working him and that's why he would not help me to get back home.

"This is awful. My parents don't know where I am. They live on the farm at Utica, Mich., but I have been living with my sisters in Detroit the past few months. I never saw Mr. Price until I met him in Salt Lake, and I don't know why I did such a foolish thing, but Harry made me believe that the old man was such a nice man and one of his best friends."

Miss Derby is not yet 21 years old and she has not seen much of the ways of the world. Mr. Price took the early train last night back to his Colorado ranch. He confided to some of his new found friends before leaving that the next time he sought a wife through a matrimonial bureau he would first have to be shown.

An engineer on one of the roads entering here, in speaking last night of fast runs said: "Although my machine is not slow, once let a cold get six hours the start of me and my machinery is no match for it. ## MILLERS IN A TANGLE.

Utah Flour Makers Know the Trouble But Evade Remedy.

For two hours yesterday the Utah State Millers' association wrestled with the problem of its existence. There were about one-fourth of the fifty-one members in attendance, and the consensus of opinion was that if the organization were to continue it would have to be on more aggressive lines than have heretofore characterized the association's affairs. Motions to proceed to elect new officers, to re-elect the old board, to let them hold over and to disband the organization were successively made and defeated. The only motion which did prevail was to adjourn without taking any action whatever.

It was pointed out by nearly every member present that ruination threatened the Utah flour millers unless they combine like other industrial concerns do or arrange to have one executive head of the association handle the output of the mills so as to maintain prices and prevent cutting into each other by the fierce competition that has existed all along. It was shown, too, that because the millers had thus forced down the price of wheat, the farmers have turned their attention to raising alfalfa and sugar beets instead, and every indication pointed to a condition for the next three years at least where there would not be enough wheat by half grown in Utah to run the mills.

All agreed that the association had accomplished nothing and could not expect to until the right policy of unity were adhered to on lines of co-operation. President Ellison and all of the officers protested against serving the association longer, but the meeting adjourned by common consent without attempting to relieve them of their embarrassment.
