CITY EMPLOYES ARE ARRAIGNED

Health Commissioner Stewart and Others Charged With Maintaining Nuisance.

ORDER IS EFFECTIVE

REFUSE IS NOW TAKEN ACROSS THE JORDAN.

City Health Commissioner M. R. Stewart, W. G. Margetts, chief sanitary inspector, and a number of employes of the city sanitary department and others were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Dana T. Smith and Justice of the Peace F. M. Bishop yesterday on charges of having committed and maintained a nuisance by dumping and causing garbage to be dumped in "Horseshoe Bend," between Ninth and Tenth West and Third and Fourth South streets.

The arraignment of Health Commissioner M. R. Stewart, Charles Martin, a teamster employed by the Salt Lake Scavenger company, and H. E. Hodges, a teamster employed by the Western Co-op., took place before Justice of the Peace Dana T. Smith yesterday morning.

Health Commissioner Stewart declined to enter his plea at the time of his arraignment. The plea will be entered at 10 o'clock this morning. Of the other defendants, Martin pleaded guilty and will be sentenced Friday morning at 10 o'clock by Justice Smith. Hodges pleaded not guilty, and his trial will be held at the time set for the sentencing of Martin.

Chief Sanitary Inspector W. G. Margetts and three other employes of the city, I. F. Banks, Lincoln Jones and Claude Rogers, drivers of garbage wagons, were arraigned yesterday afternoon before Justice F. M. Bishop in Farmers' ward. The county was represented by Assistant County Attorney Willard Hansen, while Assistant City Attorney A. J. Dininny and P. J. Daly conducted the case for the defendants.

Change of Venue Asked.

As soon as the cases were called a motion asking for a change of venue to the court of Justice Smith, before whom the other cases arising out of the same alleged offense had been set, was filed by the defense. The motion was granted. The cases will be heard by Justice Smith upon a date to be fixed today.

The complaints on which the health department's head and his subordinates were arrested was a "John Doe" complaint sworn to by the Rev. J. H. Worrell, who lives with his family near "Horseshoe Bend," which has been used by the city as a dumping ground for garbage of the most filthy description.

"Horseshoe Bend" is located between Third and Fourth South streets and Ninth and Tenth West streets, and near by on all sides are homes of people who have been compelled to suffer from the vile conditions that arise from the use of the property as a dumping ground.

Order Is Violated.

Notice was served on Dr. Stewart Monday afternoon that the practice of dumping rubbish and filth on the land in question must be discontinued at once by the city.

Residents living near the place declare that this order was not obeyed by the city's scavenger wagon drivers, as one wagonload of filth was deposited on the ground at an early hour yesterday morning.

Dr. Stewart was asked last night if notice had been served on him by the owners of the property to discontinue using the land as a dumping ground.

"I received such notice Monday afternoon," he said.

"Has any rubbish or filth been deposited by the city's wagons since that time?"

"There has not," he answered.

Dr. Stewart declared that he had absolutely nothing to say with regard the cases that have been filed against himself, the employes of the city and others on charges of having committed a nuisance.

"I have not a word to say of that matter," he said.

The city's garbage wagons are now said to be taking their filth and rubbish across the Jordan river where there is less chance to offend residents in the vicinity and start a pestilence, the houses of the residents of that district being farther removed from the dumping ground.

DUTCH BOTANIST HERE TO STUDY

Prof. Hugo DeVries of Amsterdam Says Utah Vegetation Similar to Holland's.

IS DISTINGUISHED SCHOLAR

AUTHOR OF STANDARD WORKS IN MANY LANGUAGES.

Professor Hugo DeVries of the chair of botanical science in the University of Amsterdam, Holland, is in the city and is making a study of the plant forms to be found on the shores of the Great Salt lake.

Professor DeVries has been in the United States for four months, and has just completed a series of lectures on "Species and Varieties, Their Origin and Mutation," at the University of California at Berkeley, which covered a period of six weeks.

Professor DeVries has also pursued a number of researches along the lines of American horticulture and agriculture. During his stay in California he visited Professor Luther Burbank at his farm and conservatories in Santa Rosa, Cal.

"The methods of Professor Burbank and my own are somewhat similar," said Professor DeVries, "with this difference: his is practical work, while mine is theoretical. I find the way and let others secure the results. He secures the results."

Studies Local Plant Life.

Speaking of plant life on the shores of the Great Salt lake, Professor DeVries said:

"I have made a careful study of the plant forms to be found on the shores of your lake, and find them very similar to the life on the coast of Holland. The main types are the same in species, but there are several species which form special American types. The vegetation in America is an interesting study to the botanist. Two years ago I saw the big trees of California, the Sequoias. They are big—the biggest I ever saw. It is to be hoped they can be preserved for future generations to admire and study."

Professor DeVries was given an honorary degree during the Philadelphia celebration of the bi-centennial anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin.

"I felt greatly honored by this degree," he said, "especially when it was granted at the same time to such men as Marconi, Andrew Carnegie and King Edward. Marconi and King Edward were not there, but Carnegie was present."

Professor DeVries attended the St. Louis session of the international scientists' congress, two years ago, and was one of the 100 distinguished scientists invited from Europe to attend this congress. The members of the congress were received by President Roosevelt at the White House.

"I was greatly pleased to learn that President Roosevelt was proud of his Dutch ancestry. One of his ancestors bears my family name. He impressed me as being a very kind, thoughtful man."

Meets Local Scientists.

Mrs. John McVichie entertained a number of local scientists at her home, 156 Brigham street, last night, in honor of Professor DeVries. He will spend one or two days in further study of the plant life on the shore of the lake, and will go to Garfield for that purpose with local botanists today. As soon as his investigations have been concluded, Professor DeVries will go to Chicago, where he will lecture for one week at the University of Chicago, after which he will return as quickly as possible to Holland. The regular course of lectures in the University of Amsterdam will begin early in September, and his time is therefore limited.

Professor DeVries is the author of a number of standard works on botany. One of these is "Species and Varieties, Their Origin by Mutation," published by a Chicago publishing house, which has reached several editions. Another is "Die Mutation Theorie," published in German, at Leipsig, which will be translated into English. Others of his works are published in English, German, Dutch and Italian and French.

WEST HAS BOUGHT LARGELY

J. A. Greenewald, Just Returned From Purchasing Trip, Reports Conditions Prosperous.

"Western furniture men did more buying at the eastern exhibitions this year than ever before," said J. A. Greenewald, who has just returned from an extensive trip to various eastern cities buying for the fall trade. "I attended the annual furniture exhibitions at Chicago and Grand Rapids, and was surprised at the amount of buying western men were doing. Of course San Francisco bought a great deal, largely in the line of office furniture, but the buying from other parts of the west and northwest was far in excess of former years. The exhibitions were highly successful in every respect. One unusual feature was the exhibit of an English firm, a fine display. At the close of the exhibitions I visited a number of factories in the surrounding towns. There are many firms which are not represented in these exhibitions, and I took in all of these. I also was in New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, where I went through many of the factories. At the conclusion of the business portion of my trip I spent a holiday at Atlantic City.

"I was greatly struck with the excellent business conditions all over the country. The factories were all busy and at every one I visited signs were displayed 'Men Wanted.' All were running full time and the prosperity seemed general. This was true of all lines, as well as in the furniture factories."

MORSE WILL NOT SUCCEED BARTCH

Some Republican Will Get Stub Term of Three Months From the Governor.

FEAR ELECTION RESULT

MACHINE LEADERS WILL TAKE NO CHANCES LOSING PLACE.

District Judge C. W. Morse, slated by the Republican state machine for the nomination for the supreme bench, will not be an applicant for appointment to the three months' short term which will be created when the resignation of Chief Justice George W. Bartch goes into effect October 1. This information comes direct from the inside of machine circles, and is authoritative.

For one thing Judge Morse feels that with matters which he now has pending and with other matters bound to come up before the Bartch vacancy occurs, he will not be able to clean up his docket before January 1, when the regular term will begin. If he is elected at the November election he will still have two months to finish his work, whereas, if he took office October 1 he would have to resign from the district bench then.

Afraid of Salt Lake County.

There is a political reason, moreover, why Judge Morse will not succeed Judge Bartch. Were he to resign October 1, his successor would have to be elected to the district bench at the election this fall. Republican leaders, knowing the uncertainty of politics in Salt Lake county, fear that either a Democrat or an "American" would be elected to succeed him. Summit and Tooele counties, both of which have a strong sprinkling of "American" voters in them, are included in the district, and that fact renders the situation all the more uncertain from a Republican standpoint.

Should Judge Morse be elected to the supreme bench in November he would resign from the district bench in December. This would give Governor Cutler the opportunity to name his successor, who, of course, would be a Republican duly approved by the Smoot machine.

Still a third reason for Judge Morse's unwillingness to take the supreme judgeship by appointment is that, if he were to take it October 1 he might be defeated in November for election to the long term. Then on January 1 he would have no place at all. His Democratic successor would succeed him on the supreme bench and his place on the district bench would have been filled by another.

Consolation Prize for Frick.

It appears, therefore, that some Republican patriot will be given the distinction of serving on the supreme bench by appointment from Governor Cutler for three months and three months alone. It is said, in view of this, that Governor Cutler may tender this appointment to Judge J. E. Frick, whose slaughter for the long term has been commanded by Senator Reed Smoot.

The Provo boss, it is said, wouldn't object to Judge Frick having a three months' term. Judge Frick, however, may object to being shelved in such a fashion, and his friends say he would not consider the proposition for a moment.

Hammond a Possibility.

In this connection it has been suggested that Governor Cutler may name ex-Secretary of State J. T. Hammond to succeed Judge Bartch for three months; then, were Judge Morse to be elevated to the supreme bench, it is suggested that Mr. Hammond be named as Judge Morse's successor as district judge.

This plan, it is said, is being advocated by State Chairman William Spry, who is taking a great deal of interest in matters judicial. The elevation of Mr. Hammond, it is urged, would be a concession to the anti-Smoot faction and a move in the interest of party harmony—which is a scarce article in Republican circles now.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR.

Elmer King From Poplar Grove Receives Injuries in Collision.

A hay wagon driven by Elmer King, 15 years of age, who lives in Poplar Grove, was struck by a street car about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon at First West and First South streets. The wagon was overturned and King thrown to the ground, sustaining serious injuries.

The motorman, J. W. Hooper, attempted to stop the car but was unable to do so before it had hit the wagon.

The car, No. 77, is the one in which Gleason and Brighton were murdered by James M. Shockley near the university on the night of January 6, 904. Some one sent in a fire alarm and called the department to the scene of the collision.

RALEIGH GETS WHITEWASH COAT

Mulvey Browbeats Witnesses Who Tell Committee of the "American" Graft.

AFFAIR IS HOWLING FARCE

NO ATTEMPT IS MADE TO DISPROVE GRAVE CHARGES.

Street Supervisor J. T. Raleigh was whitewashed last night by the special council committee appointed to investigate the charge that he has been levying "tithing" upon employes of his department for the "American" campaign fund. Councilman Martin E. Mulvey occupied the dual role of chairman of the investigating committee and chief counsel for the defense. He spent the evening bulldozing and browbeating witnesses, "roasting" Councilman F. S. Fernstrom, the minority member of the committee, and making stump speeches to draw applause from the lobby, which was packed to capacity by Raleigh's employes, all of whom were there to corroborate anything and everything that Raleigh or his chief clerk "Tommy" Atkins, might say.

Positive evidence was produced and not denied that Atkins, Raleigh's man Friday, prepared a subscription blank with the typewritten head, "Campaign Fund, 1906," and gave it to William Jones, then foreman of the "old men's" gang in the paved district, with instructions to collect from them 10 per cent of their mid-July pay. Evidence was also produced and not denied that Atkins threatened to have Jones arrested if he did not turn over the money collected, after he was discharged from the department. Testimony was likewise given that Raleigh has at times kept as many as four of his own horses in the city barns at the city's expense. This was not denied.

Notwithstanding this evidence, the majority of the committee, composed of Councilmen Mulvey and Crabtree, dismissed the case without calling upon Raleigh to answer the accusations against him. Mulvey made a speech to the crowd announcing that the charges were "all rot." Fernstrom declared that he would submit a minority report.

Jones' Charges Read.

The farce was played to a crowded house, most of the throng having been drummed up by Mr. Raleigh to furnish "evidence" if needed. City Recorder J. B. Moreton read Jones' charges against Raleigh and the street department, which were as follows:

First—That he had been ordered in July to collect a "tithing" from the men under him.

Second—That after the men had paid their "tithing" he was ordered by Raleigh to discharge all the "Mormon ——" under him, and that when he refused to do so he was discharged himself.

Third—That Raleigh spends much time in a saloon, and that the intimation has been given out in the street department that employes, if they were wise, will do their drinking in the same saloon.

Fourth—That Raleigh has kept his own horses at the city's expense, and that men on the city payroll have done work for private contractors at the same time.

Jones Produces Paper.

Jones, who is an elderly man, was the first witness. He produced the subscription blank, which he said had been given him by Atkins about July 1. It bore the typewritten heading, "Campaign fund, 1906," and there were blank lines, made with the typewriter, for subscriptions. He said that Atkins instructed him to collect 10 per cent of the men's wages. Atkins said that such were Raleigh's instructions. Atkins told him that it was "all the same as paying tithing."

Jones testified that he did as ordered, collecting $24.55 from the men whose names were set down on the subscription paper. A few days later Raleigh told him to discharge all the "Mormon ——" under him, and Jones declined to do so. That day Raleigh discharged Jones himself, acting through another foreman in the department.

Still the following day, he said, Atkins summoned him to Raleigh's office and demanded that he turn over the money which he collected.

"If you don't turn it over by tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock I'll have you arrested," Atkins declared. He refused to turn it over, but offered to give it to the committee then and there. This gave Mr. Mulvey his first opportunity to browbeat the witness.

"We can't take it," he said. "I'd advise you to give it back to the men you got it from. That's what I'd advise you to do if you know what's good for you," and the supposedly impartial investigator looked really fierce.

Saw Raleigh in Saloon.

Mulvey cross-examined the witness. Jones declared in answer to questions that he knew personally of Raleigh frequenting a First South street saloon much of the time. He knew only by hearsay that employes of the street department were expected to patronize the same saloon. He declared that he also knew of frequent instances where Raleigh had neglected the city's business to attend to his private business.

Jones declared that he knew of a case where an employe of the city named Holgate had been required to clean up refuse left in the street by a private contractor. Holgate, who was present, was called upon, and admitted that he had spent three hours at this work. Jones declared that he himself had several times been directed to clean out refuse left in gutters by private and favored contractors, while in other instances he had been ordered to have contractors arrested for leaving refuse in the street.

Mulvey demanded to know if Jones had not spent the night of March 30 in the city jail, and if Raleigh had not discharged him for drunkenness. Jones gave a firm negative to both questions. Fernstrom said this had nothing to do with the case, and once more Mulvey's gentlemanly instincts came to the surface.

"We're going to get at this," he declared, "and we're going to get at you, too, Fernstrom."

Mulvey then pointed his finger at Jones and sternly accused him of being actuated by malice in bringing the charges against Raleigh.

S. G. Obray, an employe of the department, was called and admitted that he had paid $1.80 to Atkins. He said that he had given it to Atkins to give to Jones.

Atkins Threatened Arrest.

Mrs. Jones was called. She testified that her husband refused to tell her why he had been discharged, and she went to the street department to find out. Atkins was there, and told her of Jones' collecting the money.

"He said it was for the campaign fund," said Mrs. Jones, "and that if my husband didn't turn it over by 8 o'clock the next morning he would be arrested. He said Jake (meaning Raleigh) wouldn't stand for it for a minute. While he was talking my husband came in, and he told him the same thing."

Mrs. Jones declared that Mr. Raleigh told a falsehood when he stated in the council meeting a week ago that he had discharged Jones because his wife complained that he had not been at home for four days. She declared that she had never visited the department until after her husband was discharged, and then only to find out what he had been discharged for.

Mr. Fernstrom then stated that a young man named Bert Dillingham, who worked for the department in July, had been ordered to pay a $2 political assessment, and, upon advice of his father, had quit rather than pay it. The young man, he said, was at Bingham, and could get away to testify. A sub-foreman named Taufer, under whom Dillingham worked, was called and denied that an assessment had been levied on the man.

Kept Horses in Stable.

J. M. Leonard, formerly a teamster in the department, testified that at different times Raleigh had kept his own horses in the city stable. He had had four horses there at different times, and for about three weeks had kept three there at one time. Leonard denied that Raleigh had discharged him, but said he had been "laid off," after which he quit.

The reporters at the press table leaned over and asked Raleigh if he had discharged Leonard.

"Yes. I fired that long-legged Missourian," replied Raleigh, "for letting his team stand in the middle of the street while he lay down under a tree and smoked a cigarette."

"You're a liar!" called out Leonard, who overheard the aside.

"Be careful now," exhorted Raleigh, shaking a warning finger at the Missourian.

"I never smoked a cigarette in my life," declared Leonard. "What you say isn't true."

Crabtree cut in with a remark here that Jones had offered to drop the charges, because he didn't want to hurt the "American" party, and because he would like to be reinstated. Jones denied flatly asking to be reinstated, but said that he had told Crabtree he did not wish to hurt the "American" party.

Testify in Chorus.

Mr. Mulvey then stood up and asked the mob in the lobby if any one of them had ever been forced to contribute anything to campaign funds. With a whoop and a howl Raleigh's underlings yelled a negative. Mulvey then made a speech, telling them what a wicked thing it was for people to be forced to give up money for political purposes. He declared that Raleigh had been guilty of no such thing.

Fernstrom said the charges had been proven. Mulvey asked him if money hadn't been collected under the Morris administration.

"It was," replied Fernstrom, "but it was never done before a campaign committee was organized; it was never collected by means of forced contributions, and it was never collected on a per cent basis."

Crabtree moved that the charges be dismissed and placed on file. He and Mulvey voted for the motion, and Fernstrom against it, and the meeting was over.

WILL LEAVE BRIDE DAY AFTER WEDDING

TO GO ON TWO YEARS' MISSION ABROAD

The marriage of Miss Nellie E. Williams and Donald A. Priestly will take place in the temple today, and tomorrow the bridegroom will leave for a mission for the Mormon church in Great Britain, to be gone two years. His bride will remain in this city.

The engagement of the young people had existed for some time, and they had planned to be married a little later in the year. Within the last few weeks a call was received by the young man to go to the foreign mission field, and take upon himself his duties as an elder in the church, for two years.

When the call was received he and his bride determined that their wedding should not be delayed until his return, and that as it would be impossible for her to accompany him, they should be married at once, and that he should perform his duty to his church, leaving his bride behind him.

The arrangements for the wedding were quickly completed, and the service that is to unite them is to be performed in the temple during the day.

UINTAH FARMERS PROSPER

Great Improvements Being Made on Ranches Taken Up Last Year.

Reports coming to the city from Vernal indicate that the land office at that point is being buried under a mass of litigation which has followed as a result of land contests in the territory opened to settlement in the Uintah reservation last year by the government.

These contests have been filed by or against the settlers who have entered the reserve since the great rush that took place immediately after the opening. The grounds for the greater number of the suits filed are alleged priority of settlement and alleged trespass by new settlers on the lands of those who were on the grounds early.

The settlers have been busy during the entire summer fencing their homesteads, improving their buildings, breaking new ground and making their properties more habitable generally. There has been an abundance of water on the lower lands during the season, and large crops of hay, grain and vegetables have been raised. Many of the settlers have set out young fruit orchards, which are thriving wonderfully well.

The Blue Bench lands are still dry, and it will be several years before a canal of sufficient capacity can be built to water this great area. The settlers on this section of the country are looking forward eagerly to the completion of a canal which will put their land under water, believing that this section will turn out to be the greatest fruit belt in the entire arid region.
