Eleven special trains loaded with Endeavorers left Ogden for this City yesterday. Nearly 3000 pieces of advanced baggage are in the baggage office here.

At the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, corner of Dupont and Filbert streets, yesterday the feast of the patron saints of the church was appropriately celebrated.

The attendance at the Shell Mound rifle range yesterday was smaller than usual, most of the marksmen evidently preferring to shoot firecrackers than rifles.

A grass fire at Schuetzen Park, near San Rafael, yesterday threatened to destroy much valuable property and it was necessary to send to San Rafael for help to extinguish the blaze.

David Hackett was arrested in Cloverdale by Officer O'Dea and locked up on the charge of felony in his having disposed of a horse, the property of W. D. Shea, without his authority.

The Letter-carriers' picnic at Schuetzen Park yesterday was a grand success. Fully 3000 people attended. Many gate prizes and prizes to the winners of athletic games and sports were distributed.

William Maher, while enjoying the pleasures of a picnic at Harbor View, saw fit to resist the authority of a police officer who was called upon to quell a fight between two toughs. He got his scalp slit, and after having it stitched at the Receiving Hospital was locked up in the City Prison.

IN THE AMUSEMENT LINE.

What There Is On This Evening That Is Calculated to Attract the Theater-Goers.

The Lyceum Theater Company commences the third week of its engagement at the Baldwin this afternoon with a special holiday performance of the great romantic success, "The Prisoner of Zenda," which will be repeated to-night. To-morrow night the company will offer "The Mayflower," by the author of "Rosemary," for the first time.

At the Columbia Theater the special holiday attraction this afternoon and evening will be "Shenandoah," the great military play, in which a squad of soldiers from the Presidio will take part. To-morrow night the Frawley Company will present "The Two Escutcheons."

A new elaborate scenic production entitled "Captain Paul" is the attraction to be placed on the stage of Morosco's Grand Opera-house to-night. It will be offered with wonderful stage-settings, including a naval battle. Grand matinee this afternoon.

At the Alcazar "A Victim of Circumstances" will be presented this evening, in which Seline Johnson and George H. Trader will make their first appearance. This will be followed by "The First Born," that has been so successful for weeks. There will be a matinee this afternoon.

Imogene Comer, "queen regent of descriptive singers"; Harry Le Clair, protean comique, and Lew Dockstader are among the big attractions at the Orpheum for this evening. There will be a special matinee at this house this afternoon on account of the Fourth of July.

At the Tivoli Opera-house a continuation of "Wang," with all of its attractive music, great cast, beautiful costumes, splendid scenery and the royal elephant, is what is offered for this evening. A number of new topical songs will be introduced.

At the Chutes there will be this evening, in addition to the many attractions on the grounds, an entertainment under the auspices of Presidio Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, who will have a gala time there. There will be a display of fireworks.

At the Sutro Baths there will be a special attraction on account of the National holiday. There is to be a matinee in the afternoon, and in the evening there will be pantomime, music, ballets and beautiful historical tableaux.

At the Oberon there will be no lack of musical attraction. The International Ladies' Orchestra will discourse much popular music, and there will be introduced a number of soloists, who will render some very fine selections.

Fireworks From on High.

The completion of the garbage crematory at the foot of Eighth street will be celebrated together with the Fourth of July by a display of fireworks from the top of the big stack from 8:30 to 10 o'clock to-night. The display will conclude with a descent from the top by rope by Robert Liebert. He will make the drop of 265 feet surrounded by red fire.

Thrown Off a Car.

Michael Murphy, a laborer living at 78A Clementina street, was taken to the Receiving Hospital yesterday morning in the patrol wagon with his right leg broken. He said he was on a Third-street electric car and at Harrison street the conductor threw him off. He intends to sue the company for damages.

DON JUAN RELEASED FROM JAIL

Mrs. Bradbury Goes Bond for the Liberation of Her Companion.

THE TWO ELOPERS MEET AGAIN.

A Rumor That the Erring Woman Is on the Repentant List.

BOTH AT PRESENT IN RETIREMENT.

That "Romance" of Four Days May Be Called Off by Mutual Friends.

Mrs. Bradbury and her runaway companion have temporarily got free of the clutches of the law and are the guests for the present of Mrs. Norman Brough of 2054 Green street. Ward secured his release from the City Prison yesterday through the good graces and funds of his companion and at once set to work to join the woman whose escapade has set the whole coast talking.

He was returned to freedom shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon. No attempt was made by Mrs. Bradbury to see him since the time of her release on her own recognizance Saturday night. About 3 o'clock Judge Low telephoned to the prison-keeper that if $1000 cash bail were offered on behalf of Ward he might accept the same in lieu of a $2000 bond.

About 4 o'clock Garret McEnerney arrived at the office of Captain Bohen with the $1000. It was placed in the hands of Detective Gibson with instructions to enter the bail in the name of McEnerney. For some unexplained reason the receipt was made out in the name of Ward. The money was given to McEnerney by an attorney from Los Angeles, who stated that he had received it from a gentleman well known throughout the State as a man of large interests, but whose name he declined to divulge. Ward claimed that the money was telegraphed here from Los Angeles on his order, and that it was part of his own personal funds.

Whatever the facts as to who provided the bail, Ward was again turned loose on the public. Then began a very wild pursuit of his missing inamorata. He had gone but a few paces from the jail door when he hurriedly retraced his footsteps. He asked the desk sergeant for his valuables that had been taken from him when he was locked up. He was told that he would have to call for them to-day, as the officer who had the key to the safe would not be back again until then.

After getting clear of the precincts of the prison he asked a pedestrian where a newspaper office could be found. He boarded a McAllister-street car, and alighted at the business office of a newspaper. Thence he took a car back to the City Prison in search of two "important letters." His search was fruitless, and then he took a most erratic course for Marchand's. He reached there about 5:30 P. M. Here he partook of a light supper, gathered some toilet articles that had been left there on the occasion of his previous visit in company with Mrs. Bradbury, and continued his search for his errant partner.

During his sojurn in the restaurant Ward received word by means of a messenger-boy that Mrs. Bradbury was awaiting him at the Green-street house. He started bravely off on a Sutter-street car, only to learn before he had gone two blocks that he was shadowed. He spent three hours in a vain endeavor to throw his pursuers off the track and at the same time lose himself in the City that he had only spent one day in.

By means of frequent interrogating of police officers and streetcar conductors he finally brought up at the rendezvous to find the erring wife of his former friend awaiting him. The meeting between the two was not redolent with the affection and terms of endearment such as a romance of theirs would call for. Possibly it was because Mrs. Brough was present, and the presence of a third party was a damper on their ardor. For be it known that Mrs. Brough is in the employ of a morning paper that "syndicates" such salacious episodes as that of these two, and it may be that they were not anxious at the last moment to have their doings garnished up again in such style as might again attract the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Vice.

To disinterested spectators it seemed that the woman was manifesting indications of regret for her unenviable position. There was a tinge of hauteur in her manner to the man she declared two days ago she loved better than husband and children. Still women are peculiar. Possibly it was all due to the pique resulting from a day's separation. The man seemed unconcerned. The twenty-four hours he had spent in the City Prison possibly gave him much time to reflect, and it may have prepared him for a chill from his sweetheart.

But the two are still together despite the rumor on the street yesterday that the parents of the woman in Los Angeles had persuaded her of her folly and convinced her that her wisest course was to return to the friends and home she had outraged. They refused to receive any representatives of the newspapers, declaring they had had enough of publicity. The proprietor of the house said that his guests would take apartments down town to-day. In fact, Ward left the house for a short time last evening, ostensibly on a search for quarters for himself and Mrs. Bradbury.

Major Hooper of the Occidental Hotel received a letter from Mrs. Banning, the mother of the erring woman, on Saturday evening asking him, as an old friend of the family, to see that her daughter did not want for a roof in her troubles in San Francisco. Mrs. Banning added that she had learned of her daughter's arrest and the notoriety attending it, and consequently could not ask Major Hooper to receive the runaway as a guest at his hotel, but she hoped that he would see that if the worst came to the worst Mrs. Bradbury would be provided with quiet quarters.

It was a pathetic message from a sorrowing mother in behalf of a wayward daughter. Mrs. Bradbury, however, has not yet asked for any such assistance.

It is interesting to note that Mrs. O. W. Childs of Los Angeles, who thus far has been given credit for planning the elopement, arrived in the City yesterday accompanied by a male companion. The two called at the City Prison for the purpose of learning of the runaways' whereabouts. At a late hour last night they were still engaged on this chase.

CONDEMN DEBS' PLANS.

The Socialistic Labor Party Against His "Social Democracy of America."

Since Eugene V. Debs of railroad fame undertook to launch his co-operative commonwealth plan, under the name of "The Social Democracy of America," his proposition has been much discussed by those interested in matters of political economy. The Socialists in particular have made diligent inquiry to learn exactly what Mr. Debs intends to do and how he intends to do it. They have learned enough now to condemn his plan, and all over the country general condemnation is being uttered. At a meeting of the central committee of the Socialistic Labor party held recently the following resolution was passed:

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 30, 1897.

WHEREAS, Under the name of "The Social Democracy of America" Eugene V. Debs and colleagues have a plan to establish within a State of this Union a miniature socialistic commonwealth; and whereas, the success of the international socialist movement depends upon the economic intelligence of the people and not upon their willingness to follow an individual or to industrially co-operate in a competitive system; and whereas, the colonization of districts results in no general dissemination of the principle of solidarity, but re-establishes capitalistic community interests against those of the world; be it therefore

Resolved, That no logical conclusion can be arrived at regarding this scheme, which will place every engine of governmental and private capitalism in immediate and direct opposition, except that this colony, the weaker of antagonistic and contesting governments, must yield, and in this case necessarily be extirpated; and be it further

Resolved, That a growing class in numbers, a growing class in intelligence, the ruling political factor of the near future, the proletariat, would be frittering away its time in vainly endeavoring to economically revolutionize a geographically small fraction of the Nation, when it is more practical to revolutionize the whole country by education and united political effort, guided by the economic development, and not guided by time-worn and oft-tried schemes invested with the glamour of a leader's name.

HONOR THEIR PATRONS.

The Feast of Saints Peter and Paul Appropriately Celebrated.

Father Piperni, Superior of the Salesians, Delivers an Eloquent Sermon.

At the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, popularly known as the Italian Church, corner of Dupont and Filbert streets, the feast of the patron saints whose name the church bears was celebrated yesterday by a special solemn high mass at 9 o'clock. Father Gualco of Chico was celebrant, Father Cassini deacon and Rev. M. Oreni sub-deacon. The church, which had been decorated with a profusion of flowers for the occasion, was crowded to its fullest capacity. The edifice was also filled at the other morning services. Specially selected music was rendered by the organist, Professor Spadina, and the choir.

Father Piperni, the superior of the Salesians of this City, delivered the sermon. He related eloquently the events of the life of Peter, who at Christ's call left his nets to become, not a fisher of fishes, but a fisher of men, and of Paul, who, when directed by Jesus, undertook the mission of preaching his name before the Gentiles.

The speaker also related the experiences of the ten apostles in Rome, where they made many converts to the faith and finally died as martyrs.

"It was a beautiful thought," declared the speaker, "that prompted the founders of this church, which was to be for the use of the Italians, to have it placed under the patronage of the two princes of the apostles who first planted the faith in the then capital of the world—Rome—and to have them now as patrons of the church where the descendants of the old Romans may gather to worship in the faith that Peter and Paul preached nineteen hundred years ago."

Solemn vespers were sung at 7:30 in the evening, and the services concluded with the benediction of the most sacred sacrament.

OUT BY THE SEA.

The Largest Number of the Season Visited the Ocean Beach and Sutro Baths Yesterday.

Acres of people listened to the music at Golden Gate Park yesterday. The drives and walks were thronged and the museum halls were crowded.

The Sutro Baths scored their greatest success of the year, and the seats were filled to the upper tiers. So heavy was the travel toward the ocean beach that both engines in the power-house of the Sutro carline were called into service for the first time this season.

The conservatory is in fine condition to please the throngs of visitors who will be here this week. An especial favorite, which is blooming just now, is El Espiritu Santo, the Holy Ghost flower.

There were a few slight accidents. C. E. Rice of 923 Hyde street fell from a bicycle and bruised his hip; C. McGrath of 229 Park avenue got a face wound and left hand hurt while playing ball; Frank Vincent of the Bella Vista Hotel got a severe fall while cycling at Ocean beach. He struck the ground with his temple, and had to be carried in the ambulance to the Park hospital station.

WIRES GROUNDED.

The Southern Police Station Shut Out From Telephone Communication.

"This is one of the quietest Fourths of July I have ever seen in San Francisco," remarked Lieutenant of Police Dan Hanna of the Southern police station late yesterday afternoon.

The old wooden shed called a police station has been steadily sinking since the big fire a few weeks ago, and as a result yesterday the wires became grounded and shut off all outside connection. Several attempts were made at the Central police station to ring up the Southern station, but all to no purpose, as no connection could be had. Things were too quiet to suit the lively disposition of Lieutenant Hanna at last and he tried to find out if other sections of the City were as peaceable as his own. Then he made the discovery that he was not in touch with the other stations nor with any portion of the outside telephone world for that matter, and the reasons for the unusual peace of the Fourth of July dawned upon him. He at once dispatched Sergeant Davis to the telephone office to report the case and repairs were soon after made.

Another attempt will be made to have the Supervisors provide a station for the southern district which will not be liable to tumble down at a moderate gust of wind.

Wolfe Tone Club Picnic.

The third annual picnic of the Wolf Tone Club of Oakland was held at Shell Mound Park yesterday, and the attendance was comparatively large. The pleasure-seekers spent the day dancing in the pavilion and strolling among the trees. In the afternoon there were races and athletic games in which old and young participated, and suitable prizes were given to the winners of every event. A large number of gate prizes were also distributed. The picnic was under the following committee of arrangements: P. N. Hanrahan, chairman; P. J. Ryan, secretary; J. H. Cregan, M. Coakley, P. J. Delehanty, T. Crowley, P. Flynn, Martin Ryan.

A VICTIM OF OTHERS' WILES

Ex-Collector Welburn Talks Some More of His Downfall.

Forced to Spend the Day in the County Jail in Default of Bonds.

Declares That If Deputy Loupe Were Well All Would Be Righted for Him.

"If I had lived at the pace the stories spread about me during the past week would indicate I would be short half a million dollars in my accounts to-day with the Government."

Osca M. Welburn as a prisoner charged with a defalcation by the treasury agents ago she sent a telephone message to my office that she had information that would lead to a big opium seizure.

"The following day she called at the office and attempted to borrow money. This is only one instance of many. A certain notorious private detective called on me some time ago and informed me that he was aware of some alleged escapades of mine and offered his services afterward in ferreting out some people that were passing themselves off for me. A few days later he presented a bill for $500 for what he claimed as services. I refused to pay it, and he afterward sent an attorney to me with the account."

The suspended Collector maintains that his accounts will be found square when the treasury officials shall have completed the examination of his books. He declares the warrant under which he was arrested for embezzling the sum of $85 20 is a mistake due to a wrong interpretation of his countermanding a salary check for that amount due E. C. Aiken, one of his clerks.

"It is customary at times to draw the salary checks slightly in advance in order that they may be hypothecated or discounted with a broker. The warrant for Aiken's salary for May may have been drawn about the first of the month and handed to my deputy, Louis Loupe. A few days later Aiken asked me for the preceding month's salary, and this led me to suppose that possibly Loupe had his own reasons for retaining the check—possibly that Aiken owed some money upon which the check had been applied. This led me to countermand the check until Loupe, who is now sick to the point of death, could be consulted. Well, you know the rest. Special Agent Thrasher, in examining the accounts of the office to ascertain the full amount of Cashier Norton's shortage, happened to ask Aiken if he had received the check which was resents all insinuations that he has lived beyond his means and has spent the funds of his office for his own purposes. The suspended Collector of Internal Revenue walked the office of Chief Jailer Sattler yesterday as nervous a man as ever was behind prison bars, but he was persistent in his denials that he was a sinner against that law which forbids the coveting of a neighbor's goods even when that neighbor consists collectively of the whole people of the country.

It was on the cards that the prisoner should be released on bonds yesterday morning, but the absence of United States District Attorney Foote and his deputies from the City delayed this programme, and in the end the ex-Collector found himself obliged to spend the day in custody. In conformance with the usual custom relating to United States prisoners he was removed from the City Prison to the County Jail as soon as it was found that there was no immediate prospect of his release on bonds. The disgrace of going to an ordinary cell as a common prisoner was spared him. He had the privilege of the general office to receive his friends and visitors, and all in all had a rather busy day of it.

Welburn feels his disgrace keenly. There was in him yesterday nothing of the usual braggadocio of the ordinary man who finds himself an object of curiosity because of his transgressions in high places. There were traces about him of recent carousals or else extraordinary nervousness. His face was pinched and haggard. His hands and knees trembled with the slightest exertion, and his voice frequently failed him as he recalled the explanation of the events that led up to his present predicament. He had little to say of his shortcomings as a public official. He would not admit that his pace in the Tenderloin had been such as to attract the comment of the half-world. These were stories of the street pure and simple, he contended, which had gained such general circulation that it was almost too late to deny them.

True, there were women in his downfall—those frail yet dovelike creatures that are responsible for half the trouble in the world—but he knew them only casually. They had made use of his name and a slight acquaintance with him to make free of his name and his reputation. They and their boisterous companions had spread falsehoods of his doings and his habits.

"There was no theft of mine due to champagne," was the way he put it. "The stories that I have lived beyond my means are absolutely untrue. I know the women whose names have been connected with mine only in a casual way. In the course of my duties as an officer of the Government I had occasion to send one or two men to San Quentin and thus earned the eternal enmity of their wives. Then began a systematic persecution and a desperate attempt to blacken my character. Reports would be spread that I had spent the night in notorious places in the tenderloin when I was at home with my family.

"I was impersonated by the friends of these women. Men would go to a lodging-house and register in my name for the purpose of blackmail. The landlady of the house would declare the next day that I had been one of her lodgers and then send a man or a woman to me to inform me that my alleged sin had found me out.

"In this way frequent attempts were made to blackmail. The woman, Virgie Melrose, who declared to the Federal officers a few days ago that she knew of my whereabouts is one of these. Some time drawn in his favor, and he naturally replied in the negative. Forthwith I was believed to be an embezzler.

"This will be found to be the true state of affairs. My books are square, and though I think that I shall probably lose my position on account of the notoriety connected with the case, I am confident that I shall be exonerated of any crime. The story that I have been on a prolonged debauch is untrue. I left the City on Saturday last on private business and returned on Tuesday to learn that there was a warrant out for my arrest. It was my first intention to go down to Marshal Baldwin and give myself up, but I could not consult with my bondsmen or my attorney at the time."

Welburn hopes to get bonds to-day at the latest. Assistant United States District Attorney Schlesinger was ready yesterday to pass upon the responsibility of all offers of bail, but Commissioner Heacock could not be found at the time. The deposed Collector had a consultation in the evening with Attorney Gavin McNab and Captain Webb and declared afterward that all arrangements had been perfected for his release as soon as Commissioner Heacock was ready to listen.

MORE YELLOW FEVER.

The San Jose From Panama Is Placed in Quarantine.

The Pacific Mail steamer San Jose arrived from Panama yesterday with two cases of death from yellow fever reported. She was at once ordered into quarantine and taken off Angel Island near the quarantine vessel Omaha, by Dr. Blue, United States Quarantine Officer. Dr. Chalmers, State Quarantine Officer, gave the vessel a free pratique to the port. She will probably be permitted to dock either to-day or to-morrow.

The chief engineer, James P. McLean, died June 4 at Acajutla. There was no physician present to diagnose his case, but the physician of the port said the cause of death was yellow fever. Captain Russell puts forth the claim that the death was due entirely to rheumatism of the stomach.

Richard Blennerhassett, a messboy, died June 13 at San Jose de Guatemala. The physicians at that port refused to go aboard the ship and she was quarantined without any doctor being present. Dr. Blue says that he was informed that the boy Blennerhassett, who was first taken ill at Panama, turned the color of a lemon prior to his death. There were eight cabin and one steerage passenger aboard the ship.

A Swede named John Anderson was arrested on East street by Officer McGreevy yesterday and booked at the Harbor Police station on a charge of grand larceny. A scarfpin, which he is alleged to have taken from a ferry-boat passenger, was discovered on him and taken as evidence.

Broke His Leg.

Percy Drew, an employe at the Pacific Rolling Mills, was sitting on a pile of iron bars yesterday afternoon when he slipped and one of the bars rolled down, striking him on his right leg and breaking it. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital in the patrol wagon, where his injured leg was treated.

SWALLOWED LAUDANUM.

Charles Rapp, a Young Man, Has a Narrow Escape From Death.

Charles Rapp, a young man 21 years of age, swallowed a dose of laudanum Saturday night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Spencer, 202 Ellis street.

He was taken to Kelly's drugstore, 102 Eddy street, and Dr. Lustig was summoned. The usual remedies were applied and the young man was soon pronounced out of danger.

It was reported that he had been grieving over the death of his brother-in-law, W. E. Spencer of the Davy Crockett saloon, to whom he was very much attached, and swallowed the poison in a fit of despondency. He and his friends, however, say that the laudanum was taken by mistake.

Green Meadows, Los Angeles Co., Feb. 10, 1897.
DR. A. T. SANDEN,
Dear Sir—After having a good deal of experience with drugs and cheap electric belts I have at last been cured by your grand appliance. I bought it for impotency, and though I am 72 years old, it has had an amazing good effect that way. I had also been a sufferer ever since I was in the Mexican war from a pain in my back, cold feet and a poor general circulation. I now feel warm as toast; my feet are warm all the time, and I have not had the pain in my back since I got the belt. My general health is much improved, and I feel good. My wife is nearly cured of her rheumatism by it, and we are proud of our Sanden Belt. I can tell you I will be glad to vouch for it to anybody.
Yours truly, JOHN FAIN.
