ton served the ejectment notice on young Flannelly, who was at the ranch, and then rode to town.

His father's action seemed to arouse all the evil in the young man's nature, for half an hour later he rode up to the door of his father's house and tying his horse at the gate entered.

The house is a two-story cottage, with a neat garden about it. A sister of the dairyman opened the door. Striding past her without a word the murderer strode up the stairs to the bedroom occupied by Patrick Flannelly. Although it was early the old man had already retired, as was his custom.

Just what happened between father and son no one but the latter knows. It is believed that the subject of the ejectment was the topic of conversation between the men. The position in which the body of the old man was found after the bullets from the son's pistol had robbed it of life would indicate that Patrick Flannelly had sat up in bed and faced the murderer. He may even have devined the murderous intention of his boy and have attempted to get out of bed when the fatal shots struck him, for his body lay across the bed with the head close to the wall and the feet dangling a few inches above the floor.

The men had been talking about fifteen minutes, for at the end of that time the other occupants of the house heard cries and then the pistol shots. They rushed to the old man's room to find him dead with the blood oozing from his wounds. One of the bullets struck him in the forehead, another in the mouth and a third had entered his breast and buried itself in his heart.

Meantime the murderer had rushed from the house, jumped on his horse and galloped down the road leading to his ranch.

The screams of the horror-stricken inmates soon collected a crowd of neighbors. Sheriff McEvoy and the deputies, who were at the jail, a short distance away, heard the shots and hastened to the scene. Hastily collecting a posse he started for the ranch, where he rightly conjectured the murderer had fled.

The ranch where the fight between the officers and Thomas Flannelly took place is situated about two miles from Redwood City on the San Mateo road. The house is a one-story cottage of four rooms and a kitchen. There is a short hallway leading from the front door into the dining-room. To the left of the dining-room is a bedroom which communicates with it by a door. Back of the dining-room is a kitchen, with a door opening out into the back yard. It was in the room off the dining-room that Thomas Flannelly was stationed when he began the fusillade which wounded two of the officers.

The account of the fight was given to-day by Deputy Sheriffs Mansfield and Butts.

Sheriff McEvoy, accompanied by Deputies Mansfield, Butts, Thompson and Barton, arrived at the ranch twenty minutes after the shots that took Patrick Flannelly's life were fired. When they reached the house an Italian employed on the place came out of the kitchen. In response to the Sheriff's question he replied that Flannelly was in the bedroom. The Sheriff then sent two of his men, Thompson and Barton, to watch the window at the back of Flannelly's bedroom to prevent the escape of the murderer that way. Butts, who was armed with a sawed-off double-barreled shotgun, was left to hold the horses and to keep a watch on the front door of the house to frustrate any attempt of the murderer to escape by that avenue. McEvoy and Mansfield went into the kitchen and thence to the dining-room, where a lamp was burning. The officers expected trouble and had their revolvers ready.

The door leading to the bedroom which was occupied by Flannelly was shut, but not locked. The Sheriff was slightly in advance of his deputy. He approached the door and called out:

"Are you in there, Tom? Come out; we want you."

There was no response and the officer repeated in a louder tone.

"Wait a minute," came the answer from the man within.

The officer waited, but as Flannelly did not make his appearance McEvoy kicked open the door. As it flew back against the partition the beams from the lamp threw the officers in bold relief and made them conspicuous objects to the murderer, who, in the semi-darkness of the room, had a great advantage, for while he could see them plainly they could not make out his form, as he sat on the bed, which was at one side and in the far end of the room.

As soon as the door swung open Flannelly fired, the bullet from his Winchester striking McEvoy in the arm and plowing its way through the flesh up to the shoulder. Mansfield, who stood a little to the right of the Sheriff, was also struck by the ball that wounded his superior.

McEvoy dropped his pistol when hit and stepped into the hallway out of range of the murderer's gun and began to grope about the floor for his weapon. Flannelly, who was wrapped in blankets, did not lose any time after the first shot, but kept pumping lead in the direction of the officers. Mansfield was not idle. His pistol spoke simultaneously with the second shot from Flannelly's rifle. Then there ensued a perfect fusillade at short range. The smoke hung in the air, partially obscuring the light from the lamp.

Sheriff McEvoy's search for his pistol proving unavailing he shouted to Butts to bring in the shotgun. The deputy hurried to the aid of the Sheriff, but before the shotgun was brought into play Flannelly called out:

"Don't use the shotgun; come and take me."

A Deputy Sheriff rushed into the room and pinioned Flannelly to the bed. He said nothing. An examination showed that he was bleeding from several wounds about the body. Two of the balls had sunk into the large muscles behind the shoulders, a bullet had hit him in the left forearm, and traversing the biceps lodged in the shoulder. The other three missiles had entered his legs at widely different points.

The officers thought that they had accounted for all the bullets, but an examination of the bedclothes brought to light six more leaden missiles which found their way into the bedclothes from the guns of the officers.

In the headboard of the bed were three bullet holes which testified to the marksmanship of the Sheriff and his brave deputy. The holes were in line and about the height of Flannelly's head as he sat in the bed and pumped bullets at the officers.

The officers engaged in the fight were lionized by the people this morning. Sheriff McEvoy's wound is a painful one and he suffered agony all night. He is being attended by Drs. Barnett and Ross, who are in peril that no serious consequences will result. The Sheriff's young wife is constantly by his side, ministering to his comfort. She was married to him last July in San Francisco, and everybody in the town sympathizes with her in the first affliction of her wedded life.

Mansfield's wound gives him but little trouble. He was about as usual to-day, serving legal papers, and regards his injuries as of no more importance than mere scratches.

Patrick Flannelly was well known and respected here. The little rose-embowered cottage was in gloom to-day, and mourning friends pass back and forth to pay their respects to the dead and offer sympathy to the living.

The funeral will take place this morning at 8 o'clock from the family residence. The interment will be at Holy Cross Cemetery.

The deceased leaves a widow and seven children to mourn him. The children are: Mrs. Fahey of San Francisco, Mrs. Joseph Kerr, Mrs. John Kerr, Mrs. M. F. Kavanagh, Miss Millie Flannelly, who recently joined the Sisters of Notre Dame, San Jose, James Flannelly of Palo Alto and the prisoner, Thomas Flannelly.

Coroner Crowe summoned a jury to-day and held an inquest over the remains. The verdict was that the deceased came to his death from gunshot wounds inflicted by Thomas Flannelly with murderous intent.

COZY HOME FOR THE FATHERLESS

Odd Fellows Dedicate Their Orphanage at Gilroy.

Impressive Services Participated in by the Grand Officers.

Well-Appointed Institution Opened to Children of Deceased Members.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

GILROY, Oct. 27.—This day marked an epoch in the history of Gilroy—the dedication of the home for children of deceased members of the Odd Fellows' order, which had honored Gilroy by building the institution within her boundaries.

Less than six months ago the grand officers of the Rebekah assembly of California laid the cornerstone of the new home in a five-acre tract donated by Mrs. Caroline Hoxett of Gilroy. This broad-minded and charitable woman has labored incessantly, and was instrumental in securing for Gilroy the coveted home. As president of the board of trustees she has been ably assisted by the other members of that body—Mrs. Mary E. Donohoe, Mrs. Sarah Wolff, Mrs. Olive Allen and Mrs. Mary F. Thorndike. A beautiful structure now stands as a monument to their noble efforts, and future generations will perpetuate the names of these women and bless the founders of this home.

The home is situated in the northeastern addition to the city. It is an imposing building of two stories and a basement with a central portion and two wings. The central hall leads to the main staircase and the dining-room in the rear. To the left is the parlor, which is neatly furnished. Several Gilroy ladies have contributed hand paintings, while fancy bric-a-brac contributed by various persons gives it a homelike appearance. Opposite is the matron's suite and the office. The matron is Mrs. Buckley of Stockton.

THE CALL correspondent was shown through the entire building by Mrs. C. A. Hoxett and everything was found to be modern and up to date. The chambers are furnished with oak bureaus and chairs, and handsome rugs cover the floors. The bedsteads are of white-enamel iron. The building is heated by a furnace in the basement and lighted with gas manufactured on the grounds. Altogether it is a place any child or parent would be glad to call "home."

Delegations of Odd Fellows from Hollister, Watsonville and Santa Cruz arrived on the morning train, and large numbers reached Gilroy at noon. Among the grand officers of the Grand Lodge and Rebekah Assembly present were: A. M. Drew, grand master, of Fresno; Karl C. Brueck, deputy grand master, of Stockton; George T. Shaw, grand secretary, of San Francisco; A. F. Hitchcock, grand chaplain, of Suisun; M. G. Gill, grand marshal, of Red Bluff; N. S. G. Clifford, assistant grand secretary, of San Francisco; Mrs. Minerva Karsner, grand president of Rebekah Assembly; Mrs. Carpenter, grand warder, of Ukiah; Mrs. Donohoe, grand secretary, of San Francisco; Mrs. A. B. Crocker, grand chaplain, of Suisun.

The grand officers were met at the station by a committee, consisting of Victor Bassignano, W. A. Whitehurst, Carl Helstrom and H. T. Mayock, Mrs. D. Rogers and Miss Simenson, and were escorted to the Southern Hotel, where dinner was served.

At 1:45 o'clock a procession, led by the Gilroy band, was formed at Odd Fellows' Hall, in the following order: Gilroy Lodge No. 154, I. O. O. F., and all visiting members of the order from the various lodges in the State; Gilroy Glee Club, Mayor Casey and Common Council of Gilroy, Unity Rebekah Degree Lodge of Gilroy and all visiting members of the order throughout the State, grand officers.

It was a handsome body of men and women with banners floating and in the regalia of the order. On arriving at the home the address of welcome was delivered by Hon. H. D. Van Schaick of Gilroy. It was responded to by Grand Master Drew of Fresno. There was music by the Ariel chorus of the Gilroy Glee Club, and then the dedication ceremony arranged by George T. Shaw, grand secretary of the Grand Lodge, took place. The Knickerbocker quartet of San Francisco and the Gilroy choir rendered odes, and the ceremony closed with an oration by Grand Master Drew.

The ball to-night was largely attended.

FRESNO LOCKS HORNS WITH HUNTINGTON

Written Demand That Streets Be Opened Across the Railway.

Southern Pacific Company Announces That It Will Resist the City Trustees.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

FRESNO, Oct. 27.—The City Trustees held a special meeting this evening and prepared a written demand on the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, that it open all the streets across its tracks which run through the center of the city. The company is requested to give deeds for all the crossings and to open Mariposa street, the city's principal thoroughfare, which is now closed.

The railroad company has signified its intention of resisting any attempt on the part of the city to extend any more streets across its tracks. The particular point of contention is the opening of Mariposa street, a crossing for which would be only a few yards from the passenger depot. The City Trustees think that the main streets should not be obstructed, and the Southern Pacific people say that the crossing would seriously interfere with the switching in the yard.

Both sides have taken determined attitudes in the matter, and an interesting fight is promised. The railroad people say they will bear part of the cost of an overhead bridge, but this the Trustees will not have.

A serious question has been raised as to the city's title to any street crossings—even those that are now open. A certain deed filed by Charles Crocker in 1873 purports to transfer the right of way, but upon investigation the instrument appears to be defective in several respects. The matter will undoubtedly go to the courts.

Public sentiment is about equally divided as to the opening of Mariposa street, but the majority of the Trustees are in favor of the movement.

Found Dead on a Highway.

FRESNO, Oct. 27.—Thomas Ruby, a miner recently from Tuolumne County, and a pioneer of the State, was found dead on a road about two miles north of town this afternoon. An inquest held this evening developed the fact that Ruby had swallowed carbolic acid, presumably with suicidal intent. Ruby was a native of Ireland and in early days was successful at mining in this State.

LOST A SCARFPIN EACH NIGHT.

Harry Lathrop the Victim of Hotel Thieves in the Bartholdi at New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Harry Lathrop, brother of Mrs. Leland Stanford, came to New York recently and took up his abode at the Bartholdi Hotel, which now is Judge Van Wyck's headquarters. Strange to say each night for a week he found he was minus a scarfpin. Mr. Lathrop has a collection of scarfpins which are famous from the Cliff House to the Palace Hotel for their size and beauty, but he was not equal to this unusual strain, and he allowed the police to inquire into the matter.

This solves a mystery which has puzzled many visitors to the Bartholdi of late. A dozen central office detectives have been observed about the hotel at all hours of the day and night. The thousand or more visitors who called upon Mr. Van Wyck have all passed under close scrutiny of the men from Mulberry street. So numerous and pervasive were the detectives that the hotel servants were on the point of entering an indignant protest when all the officers disappeared as suddenly as they had come.

The manager refused to discuss the cause, but Mr. Lathrop gave the information here related. Possibly the Californian has recovered his scarfpins or possibly he persuaded the detectives that the loss was not worth their efforts, for he said last night:

"Yes, I lost a few of the choicest specimens of my collection of scarfpins, but it is only a trifle—a mere trifle, not worth talking about."

DICKSON'S TRAGIC DEATH RECALLED

Suit Brought by the Administrator of the Suicide's Estate.

Attempt to Break a Contract on the Ground That He Was an Incompetent.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

SAN RAFAEL, Oct. 27.—Witness after witness has gone upon the stand to-day in Judge Angellotti's court and sworn that he believes that George E. Dickson, who ended his life by cutting his throat with a razor in the Central Hotel here last January, was insane some time before he committed the act. The case, which is being tried in the Superior Court, is decidedly interesting. It is brought by William J. Dickson, as administrator of the estate of George E. Dickson, against Amanda Smith and others.

Amanda Smith is a woman of some business ability, and, with a view to making money, conducts a resort at Ross Landing, in Marin County. In October, 1894, she mortgaged her property at Ross to George E. Dickson for $5635, and gave him her promissory note. Things ran along some time when, interest having accrued, Dickson told Mrs. Smith that he wanted money and made a proposition to her in writing that if she would pay $3000 he would accept that in full payment and release her from her obligations to him.

Mrs. Smith, thankful for this easy way of paying a large debt, obtained the necessary $3000, but in the meantime Dickson committed suicide. He drew the keen edge of a razor across his throat and bled to death before aid could reach him.

Then Mrs. Smith went to William J. Dickson, brother of the dead man and administrator of his estate, offered the $3000 and asked to be released from her obligations. The administrator refused to accept that sum, and instituted proceedings against Mrs. Smith to compel her to pay the entire sum, including the accrued interest.

The relatives of the dead man claim he was out of his mind—in fact, had been acting strangely for some time—and consequently he was not capable of entering into a contract with Mrs. Smith. To prove this they are calling numerous witnesses to testify that Dickson acted strange.

The case goes on to-morrow.

HEROIC RESCUE AT SEA.

Twenty-One French Fishermen Picked Up at Midnight by the Crew of a Cunarder.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 27.—The Cunard line steamer Catalonia, Captain Stephens, from Boston October 16 for Liverpool, arrived here this evening, having been delayed by the heavy weather which has prevailed recently in the Atlantic. During a gale on Wednesday last in latitude 41 6 north and longitude 50 5 west the Catalonia sighted the French fishing schooner Vague of St. Malo, dismasted and sinking and signaling for assistance. Captain Stephens took off the crew of the Vague, numbering twenty-one men and boys. He reports that the schooner could not have floated more than a few hours longer, and that her boats would have soon been swamped if the fishermen had succeeded in launching them.

The rescue of the crew of the Vague was a very hazardous proceeding. Two boats manned by volunteers were lowered from the Catalonia in the middle of the night. The sea was running very high at the time and the sky was pitch dark. After a desperate battle with the waves the French fishermen were taken off the sinking schooner and landed safely on board the Cunarder.

BOMB WRECKS HIS HOUSE.

Dastardly Attempt to Murder a Butte County Miner as He Slept.

CHICO, Oct. 27.—A dastardly attempt to murder J. J. Saunders, who lives on Butte Creek, was made last night while Saunders, in company with two other miners, was sleeping in a cabin a short distance above Diamondville, near a claim which they work. After the miners had gone to bed some one opened a window and threw a giant-powder bomb into the room. When the bomb fell on the floor it awakened one of the miners, and on seeing the lighted fuse he quickly awakened his companions. The men had barely time to dash from the building when the bomb exploded, completely demolishing the house. No one seems to know why the outrage was committed, and there is no clew to the guilty ones.

THE MARION CONDEMNED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27. — The old United States ship Marion, so well known on the Pacific Coast and especially at Mare Island, has been condemned. The naval board appointed to examine her reports that she is not worth repairing. She will be turned over to the California naval militia and will be stationed at San Diego.

CAUGHT WHILE PLANTING OPIUM

Guards at San Quentin Penitentiary Make a Capture.

O'Brien Attempts to Smuggle a Drug Into the Prison.

Had Been Released but a Few Days Ago After Serving Time for Burglary.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

SAN QUENTIN, Oct. 27.—While attempting to smuggle a pound of opium into the prison early this morning Michael O'Brien, an ex-convict, was detected by guards and placed under arrest. To-day, before Justice of the Peace George Rodden in San Rafael, Sergeant Edward V. Ellis of San Quentin swore to a warrant for O'Brien's arrest upon a charge of "carrying and taking into the grounds of the State Prison at San Quentin written and other communications without the consent or permission of the Warden or other officers having permission to give it."

O'Brien was brought to San Rafael from the prison this morning in handcuffs and given up to the Marin County officials. He was taken before Justice Rodden, where he pleaded guilty, and this afternoon was sentenced to 120 days' imprisonment in the County Jail.

It appears from the records of the prison that O'Brien was released from San Quentin penitentiary only last Thursday, having served a term for burglary. In the letter which he attempted to get into the prison with the opium he stated that he had purchased the "dope" with the money which had been given him when he quit the penal institution. It is a rule that when a prisoner who has been confined in the penitentiary is released he is given $5 in money. It was this sum that O'Brien used with which to purchased the opium.

It was about 1 o'clock this morning when the guards patrolling the prison grounds noticed an object moving in the yard surrounding the Warden's house on the hill overlooking the front of the prison.

An investigation was instituted, and resulted in Guard Quigley placing O'Brien under arrest. As the guard approached he noticed O'Brien tear up a letter and throw the pieces to the wind. O'Brien was not quick enough to do away with all the evidence, and a search of his person revealed twelve envelopes containing opium in a powder, and also a letter which was to the effect that ten of the envelopes were for some convict on the inside of the prison, while the "lifter" or the man who took it to him should have two for his trouble.

O'Brien's purpose was to bury the opium at an agreed-upon spot in the Warden's front yard, where the convict who worked in the garden would find it, and, concealing it upon his person, carry it inside the walls of the penitentiary.

MILITARY LAW IN ALASKA OPPOSED

Washington's Governor Sends a Communication to McKinley.

Asks for a Reconsideration of the Order Making St. Michael a Reservation.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

TACOMA, Oct. 27.—A special to the Ledger from Olympia, Wash., says: Governor Rogers cut from the Tacoma Ledger an editorial on "Bayonets Behind a Monopoly," on the operations of P. B. Weare in the proposed establishment of a military reservation in Alaska, which would have the effect of barring citizens of this State who might wish to engage in business there. He also clipped from the Oregonian a communication from a United States army officer, in which the injurious character of such an order was fully set forth. The Governor inclosed these in a letter and accompanied it by the following communication to the President:

Hon. William McKinley, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.—HONORED SIR: As the Governor of the State of Washington, I have the honor to request that you will cause the complaint made in the accompanying clipping, taken from the Tacoma Ledger, of October 27, 1897, to be investigated. It is a matter of common report and general opinion in this State that the allegations here made rest upon solid foundation.

May I ask, my dear sir, that if these statements are found to be true you will take such action as will prevent the carrying out of an injudicious and unjust policy?

I am, my dear sir, yours sincerely,

J. R. ROGERS, Governor.

NEW DIVORCE LAW WILL BE TESTED

Fresno Lover Brings Suit to Obtain a Marriage License.

Wants to Wed a Woman Separated From Her Husband Within the Year.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

FRESNO, Oct. 27.—Eli Vandement today made application to the County Clerk for a license to marry Mrs. May Morgan of Kingsburg. When informed that the bride-elect was divorced from her former husband last February Deputy Clerk Williams refused to issue the license. He did this after consulting District Attorney Snow. Williams based his action on the law passed by the last Legislature—prohibiting a divorced person from marrying again within a year after the order of separation.

Vandement at once began a suit in the Superior Court for a writ of mandate to compel the County Clerk to issue the license. Vandement would have no delays, either, and as every one concerned was only too glad to accommodate the man Judge Riley set the hearing of the case for to-morrow.

It appears likely that Vandement will obtain his license, as almost all lawyers are of the opinion that the new law, which was passed in April, does not apply to this case, as it would amount practically to ex-post facto law. District Attorney Snow gave no opinion, and he and Deputy Clerk Williams merely decided to have a test case and settle the question.

The new act, which has caused so much annoyance to couples matrimonially inclined, has given rise to a number of legal complications in various counties, and test cases are pending all over the State.

Of course if Vandement and Mrs. Morgan fail to obtain the license the tugboat route is open to them. Vandement is the man who was arrested for robbing the safe in the Casino saloon of several hundred dollars recently. His case is still pending in the Justices' Court. Mrs. Morgan is well known, having resided in Fresno and Kingsburg for a number of years.

VERDICT FOR MISS McLEAN.

Her Damage Suit Against Mrs. McKenzie Resulted in an Award of $1500.

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 27.—The McLean-McKenzie slander case came to an end this evening. Judge Torrance awarded the handsome plaintiff a judgment of damages in the sum of $1500. He was very severe in his rebuke of Mrs. McKenzie, who, he said, had besmirched the name of a young girl whose reputation had been unsullied. He referred to the testimony about Miss McLean and a girl companion wearing trousers and walking on the streets at night, chasing a young girl, etc. This was nothing more than an innocent lark, which Mrs. McKenzie had taken up and magnified. Judge Torrance said he thought the plaintiff was fully entitled to $1,000 cash for the injury to her reputation and her feelings.

One of the witnesses to-day was the Rev. P. E. Kipp, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Miss McLean is a member. He testified that Miss McLean called on him some months ago and told him she intended to bring suit against Mrs. McKenzie; that her uncle told her there was $10,000 in it for her, and she intended to reach out for it. He attempted to dissuade her, but she refused to listen to any compromise.

Ben Scates, a young man, testified that Miss McLean told him of having visited Kansas City once and lived at a hotel for four days with a young man and his wife for the purpose of carrying out a ruse to bring certain persons to terms. The witness intimated that Miss McLean told the story to prove her acuteness in financial affairs.

SCHARF DISMISSED FROM THE SERVICE

The Puget Sound Chinese Inspector Not Permitted to Resign.

Appealed in Vain to Secretary Gage to Be Retained in His Position.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

PORT TOWNSEND, Oct. 27.—According to a letter received here by a customs official, the records of the Treasury Department show that Chinese Inspector Thomas J. Scharf, who has been giving the public his views on the gross irregularities about Chinese admission and who claims to have resigned because of his disgust over the lack of enforcement of the laws, was not permited to resign, but was dismissed from the service. Assistant Secretary Howell read Scharf's interviews and then gave out the following statement:

"The District Attorney at New York recommended Mr. Scharf's removal, and he was notified that his services would be dispensed with on October 15. He then wrote a long letter to Secretary Gage, protesting against his removal, and asserting that he had been hampered in his work by antagonistic railroad influences, which were responsible for the corruption mentioned by him in his interviews in connection with the Chinese exclusion act. When the department was determined to dispense with his services he asked permission to resign. He said in his letter:

I was recommended by Senator Gorman, but cannot now claim his support, because during the Bryan campaign I supported Mr. McKinley and did all in my power in a quiet way to secure his election.

"In reply to this letter Mr. Scharf was informed that it was his duty to inform the department of corrupt practices on the part of railroads or others, and he was requested to send such information, together with an application to resign. He sent the application but nothing more, and he was dismissed on October 15."

Colville Arrives at Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—Inspectors Michael Shields and William Burke of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation arrived this afternoon from San Francisco having in custody John H. Colville, who was arrested in that city charged with embezzling $1600 from the Frank Locke Company. Colville left their employ on September 20 and the next day a complaint was made against him. Then it was learned that he had gone to San Francisco. Colville admitted to the officers that the charge was true, but said he went to San Francisco to earn a living and to get on his feet again. He has $100 in the bank and a note for $750, which he will offer in part payment. He had but $100 when he went to San Francisco and it cost him $300 to get there. He lost the money speculating. He will be arraigned in court to-morrow.

HOW PULLMAN'S MONEY WILL GO

Will of the Palace-Car Magnate Filed for Probate.

Two Married Daughters Get the Bulk of the Vast Estate.

Twin Sons Will Not Starve—Legacies for Faithful Employes and Charitable Institutions.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—The will of the late George M. Pullman was filed in the Probate Court to-day. Norman B. Ream and Robert T. Lincoln are named as executors, his widow not being appointed because of his wish to relieve her from the labors, cares and responsibilities of the position.

The total value of the estate is shown by the petition for letters testamentary to be $7,600,000. Of this amount $6,800,000 is personal property and $800,000 realty. Attorney Runnels, who prepared the will, said these figures are a conservative but fair estimate of the value of the estate.

The bulk of the estate goes to the two daughters—Mrs. Frank O. Lowden of Chicago and Mrs. Frank J. Carolan of San Francisco—who receive $1,000,000 each and also the residuary estate, the amount of which is now unknown except to the executors. The homestead at Prairie avenue and Eighteenth street, the construction of which cost $300,000, the furniture, pictures, etc., are devised to his widow for life, and she is also to receive $50,000 for the first year and thereafter during her life the income of $1,250,000.

Castle Rest, on one of the Thousand Islands, is given to his daughter Florence (Mrs. Lowden), with the furniture, for life. She is requested to keep Castle Rest open from July 26 to August 14 for the accommodation of all the descendants of the testator's parents and is authorized to designate in her will who shall have the property after her death. The sum of $100,000 is left in trust for its maintenance.

The sum of $2,000,000 is left in trust for the daughters until they are 35 years old, when each is to receive $500,000, to become hers absolutely, the other $1,000,000 to be still held in trust, the income going to them. If either daughter leaves issue the sum held in trust is to become absolutely the property of such issue. In case of the death of either daughter, leaving no issue but leaving a husband, one-half of the property then held in trust for such daughter is to be absolutely the property of such husband, the other half becoming a part of the residuary estate.

The eighth provision of the will is as follows:

Inasmuch as neither of my sons has developed such a sense of responsibility as in my judgment is requisite for the wise use of large property and considerable sums of money, I am painfully compelled, as I have explicitly stated to them, to limit my testamentary provisions for their benefits to trusts producing only such incomes as I deem reasonable for their support. Accordingly I direct that out of the remainder of my estate, after satisfying the provisions hereinbefore made for my wife and daughters and with respect to said Island and Castle Rest, my executors shall set apart bonds, stocks and notes or other securities in two portions, each of such estimated value as will in the judgment of my executors yield an annual income of $3000; and I give and bequeath such portions separately to the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank in trust to receive the income and profits of each portion and of all property substituted therefor, and to apply the net income and profits from the time of my death of one of said portions to the use of my son, George M. Pullman Jr., during his life, and of the other said portion to the use of my son, Walter Sanger Pullman, during his life; and upon the death of either son, leaving issue of a marriage, the property then held in trust hereunder for each son shall become absolutely the property of such issue in equal shares, the child or children of any deceased child of such son to take the share the parent would have taken if living; otherwise such property shall then become a part of my residuary estate.

To my brothers, Royal Henry Pullman and Joh M. Pullman, and my sisters, Helen Pullman West and Emma Pullman Fluhrer, are bequeathed $50,000 apiece.
