

The length of the County Levy list, which appears in the present issue of our paper, has compelled us to postpone until our next publication of several communications that would have otherwise appeared, as also many advertisements and much of our usual editorial doings. The levy list for the present year is the fullest and fairest that we remember to have seen, the requirements of the law in regard to publication having been strictly complied with, thus enabling the tax-payer to see at a glance upon each dollar of the public money has been paid and for what.

PERSONAL.—The Editors of the Port Tobacco Times, Marlboro' Gazette and Prince Georges will please except our thanks for the kind and friendly manner in which they have noticed the compliment recently paid us by the Governor of the State. The good opinion of our brothers of the Peninsula press has always been a special object of ambition with us, and we shall ever study to merit ourselves as to retain and deserve it.

DECLINATIONS.—We are authorized to return the thanks of Mr. John Parsons to the friends who presented his name for the Legislature through the columns of the Beacon as a candidate for the Legislature, as also for the kind and complimentary manner in which the presentation was made, and to state, that he respectfully declines to be a candidate for that position, being satisfied that he can be more useful to the people of the county in a different position. George T. Burroughs, though grateful for the compliment conveyed by the notice in the Beacon naming him as a candidate for a seat in the Board of County Commissioners, respectfully declines to allow his name to be used in that connection.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—We send forth our best wishes for the future of the fair bride who so kindly remembered us on the occasion of a recent wedding in our town. Health, happiness, all the blessings that wait upon wifely duty faithfully discharged, peace and never fading love be hers!

The "RIVERSIDE MAGAZINE" for July comes with a midsummer table of contents: "Stimulating and Cream" somebody has called it. The cover, and equally appetizing dishes are found displayed within. "Snipe Shooting" will be the first course taken by many youngsters, who will gaze at Gaston Fay's frontispiece with ardent desire to be in that salt marsh. "A Tale of the Sunset Sea" is one of those pictured fairy poems by Miss Bishop, which readers of the "Riverside" have learned to look for. Mr. Stockton comes with further adventures of the droll fairy Ting-a-ling; the sketch of "Joan of Arc" is concluded; Mr. Benjamin tells "How a Sail Boat is built and rigged," preparatory to telling how it is managed; "Papa's Story" contains more of the inimitable pictures for children; Nellie Eyster describes an historic block-house on Lake Erie; Hans Andersen slips in with his latest, freshest story, and the number makes a fine show with its two dozen pictures, large and small. An important announcement is made respecting the next number. Published by Hurd and Houghton, New York. $2.50 a year.

Point Lookout,
June 23rd, 1869.

The wind is blowing pleasantly here. I tell you, and why shouldn't it blow for people who don't blow themselves? The trees look so fresh and shady, and the green grass lies underneath so softly inviting for a lay pillow, green bunnies. The white cottages nestle cozily together, and the dark cool grove casts its broad shadow upon the blue waters folding smoothly its rills upon the level beach. No dust, no flies; warm enough to make the breeze more refreshing, and temper the water for a delightful bath. Children dote, pond'd here and there in gleeful sports; no black ink blots of romps and slinks to mar the lengthened sentence of pleasant thought, or delicious languor. No tax-bills or assessors; no dun, or friend to borrow; nor scolding wife, nor envious swain, to interrupt the sweet, still, harmless of rest and reverie, or the more cheerful abandon of taste and inclination.

the thing, you know. The Ladies' show man, they're too busy about crowning tolets to mind us.
Certainly we can't anytime you say the word, we will get up one of those kind of Pic-nics under the canopy of that old grove, and there is the large hall, you know, for dancing afterwards; and, if you wish it, you can have the fish, crabs, and oysters, as they come dripping from the water, roasted right on the shore. I tell you, my jolly and amiable lover of good things, we can furnish you from an old's fin trimmed with turtle eggs, to a sheep-head stuffed with oyster crabs, after a full brass blast. If there is anything under the Beacon's light better than here found, turn your slide, and throw the "glim" in it.
How many poor fellows are fretting in their city dens for the fresh inhalation of a little old salt air, while we, poor as a church mouse, take it all in as naturally as if other people didn't have to pay for it. But, sir, the very temperature of things here creates this state of feeling, and one grows so contentedly oblivious, that he is about as conscious of its advantage as a beast shell on a dead limb is of the focus. If a little extra excitement should be required after awhile, its earliest thing in the world to get up a regular old-time Tournament, which could be headed by a grand review of the Maryland Greys by Major Crane, when beauty would lead its witching smile, and valorous Knights contest the palm; or, if you want to blow little financial bubbles you might get up another fair to "bust" (some private banker, and that too under the inspiration of the grave yard close at hand.) Every, and anything, to lighten up the summer idleness; and should you grow tired of one place, shady roads, you'll find the fair ones of "Lan-town" but positively with the understanding that you are to get out of the buggy first, and keep that bull dog off. A very nice drive you'll have, too, let me tell you, the country picturesquely dotted over with old fashioned quaint looking, comfortable farm houses, peeping out from shady yards, and teeming fields of ripening grain, where hospitable hands are ready to shake yours cordially, bright smiles, and brighter eyes, to welcome you with an unpretending pleasure that melts at once as naturally as if you had been one of them. No mistake about it; I've turned in a good many times, by-roads, and cross paths, of this crooked world, but for genuine, simple hospitality that takes your hat, pushes the arm-chair for you nearer the fire, and makes you feel comfortable all over, old St. Mary's can't be beaten; and around each fire-side, or in season, in the cool portico of every house, the chances are you'll find one—sometimes a boy—of the sweetest, prettiest, dearest little heart palpating to acknowledge that though they lost, you paraded, they are continually redeeming their reputation and making us another. God bless them, and as their gladness footsteps tread their eyes may nothing but pleasure and peace re-echo through the corridors of their hearts, and the sunlight of happiness light up perpetually the inner temple of their beings. May no heart-depressing cares leave the leader imprint of their gloomy presence through its days, weeks and months, but as they close the chapter of each concluding year may they do so as happily, sweetly, and serenely, as the flowers do their petals at the close of day—only to open with the morrow's sun blessed with renewed beauty, fragrance, and hope. Confound this old goose quill I say, and the old foggy seated behind it—find I've unconsciously grown double-breastedly pathetic. Pardon monsieur! want do so any more.

Providence has certainly very richly supplied this section of the country with natural advantages, and what has kept it in its rather antediluvian torpor, passeth the comprehension of "yours very respectfully." Creeks traversing its length, and breadth, filled with the richest marketable luxuries, rivers, winding their deep channels through fertile lands which, at little cost of labor or expenditure most productively; dense forests of desirable timber in every variety for agricultural, and mechanical purposes; with the broad Chesapeake sweeping its two shores to the sea, there is nothing to retard its progress by the development of unsurpassed resources but lack of energy. Steam engines with freighted trains should be thundering through the country; steamers plying from harbor to harbor of thriving towns, and the rich lands lying now unutilized teeming with blooming growth, and abundant wild. This will, must come to pass, and that soon, and by the magic power of steam. Clear your overgrown forests, drain your lands, ventilate the miasmal atmosphere with a little sea breeze, and you will be blessed, gentlemen, with the "garden spot" of Maryland, and the happy riddance of those cold blooded pests—chills, and blood relations—mosquitoes.
