Italy in 1765—Avignon.

My first desire was for the fountain of Vancluse. I saw it yesterday. I know not why I say yesterday, for it seems to me that I still see it to-day.

I fancy I still see, escaping from the midst of a chain of mountains, as from the depth of a vast funnel, a river, which rises and rises and suddenly overflows, with an impetuosity, with a thunder, with an ebullition, with a foam, with a fall, which neither the pencil of a poet, nor that of a painter, can ever represent. It is the fountain of Vancluse. A moment after, this river becomes calm, like a happy nature, at first hurried away by vivacity, and suddenly moderated by kindness. Then it changes its silvery waves to waves of azure, and spreads, and rolls, and abandons them on an emerald carpet; but soon it separates into a multitude of little brooks, to run across a charming valley. Coming forth from the valley, these brooks reunite and part again at the same instant by a hundred different routes, to refresh, fecundate, and embellish, under the name of the Sorgue, the delightful country of Avignon.

The picture drawn by Delille of this beautiful scene is very correct. I have verified all the verses; they tell the truth, like prose, which is not common either to travelers or poets. Nevertheless, these verses cannot give a perfect idea of the place; they give but a remembrance of it. I do not find in the verses either so much foam, so much noise, or so many murmurs as the fountain offers me. We see not there these black rocks, which form so admirable a contrast with the snow of the waves that break upon them; lastly, the poet has not spread forth in his verses this brilliant carpet of emerald where the Naiad reposes.

Vancluse presents at the same time a most exquisite picture and a most singular phenomenon. But I will say with the poet:

"These waters, this sky, this valley impart,
Less than Laura and Petrarch, a joy to my heart."

The remembrance of Petrarch and Laura, animates the landscape; it adorns, enchants it. I sought traces of these lovers over all the rocks. It was here, then, said I, that they came and sat together; that Petrarch was so animated; that he shed so many tears; that he uttered those immortal sighs which are heard even now. I sat on the declivity of a rock, and there, during an hour, surrendered myself to the sound of these waters—to the verdure of his grass; to the azure of this beautiful ky; to the youth-time of spring and the memory of Laura. There, I called—I reassembled round my heart—all the objects which are dear to it. I represented to myself all my children wandering over this grass, running along this shore, and striking the echoes with envy, and my heart with a thousand cries of happiness and joy.

Before going away I wished to know if, as Delille assures us—

"Sweet name of Laura fond Echo remembers."

I would not displease the poet, but the ingrate has forgotten one half of it.

Adieu, charming fountain of Vancluse. We scarcely know the places where Alexander gained his battles. We shall recognize forever the scenes where Laura and Petrarch have loved. The murmurs of thy waves, oh Vancluse, and the verses of the songs of the gardens and the months, [see the 3d Chant des Jardins, 7th of the Mois,] will tell them to every eye.

THE COURTS.

EQUITY COURT—Chief Justice Cartter and Judge Olin.—The court met at 10 o'clock, and the greater part of its session was spent in considering case No. 816, Pierce vs. J. R. Young's executor.

This was an action by Mrs. E. S. Pierce for the specific performance of a function enjoined by the will of Young for her benefit. It appeared that Young made a will on the 21st of November, 1864, in which he directed that his executors should sell twelve hundred dollars of Washington City stock, and dispose of the same in the purchase of a house, in Baltimore or elsewhere, as Mrs. Young should, in writing, direct, and hold the said house for her benefit, either by permitting her to occupy it, or otherwise to receive its rents, during her life; the property after her death, or the stock or its proceeds in case she died before it had been invested for her benefit, to go to the children of Mrs. P. R. Fendall and Mrs. Roberta Brown. On the 20th of February, 1865, Young purchased, for $2,900, a house in Baltimore, and had the same conveyed to himself as trustee, for the benefit of Mrs. Young during her life, to go after her death to her son Robt. Bond, and afterwards to other parties. Mrs. Young accordingly took possession of the property in Baltimore; and now, upon the death of Young, sues to compel his executors to sell the city stock and purchase another house, as, she claims, is directed by the will.

Mr. Brent appeared for Mrs. Young, and contended that every gift was in its nature a seperate and substantive act. He knew that his opponents contended that the last gift by deed was an ademption or satisfaction of the first gift as proposed in the will, but argued that the law held such satisfaction to be made only when the actual or constructive parental relation subsisted between the parties; or the second gift was of the same specific object or for the same specific purpose as the first gift, and both gifts equally certain and independent of contingencies. In this case the object of the first gift was to secure a revenue for Mrs. Young during her life, and to provide for the Pendalls and Browns in the event of her death, or the failure of the devise to her. The object of the second gift was to increase her revenue and provide, at her death, for Robert Bond and others. The one gift depended upon the contingencies that the debts of the estate did not exhaust the specific stock from which the legacy was to be drawn, and upon her written election of the city in which the house should be purchased; distinguishing between the two gifts, and showing the testator's intention that both should go into operation.

Mr. Davidge, in opposition, said that the intent of the testator was the measure of the duty of the executor. The intendment of law came in to forward the true will of the testator, and the law held that if, after having provided by will for the execution of a certain settlement after his death, the testator should choose to anticipate his posthumous design, and become his own executor, that such execution fulfilled, the directions of the will which thenceforth became of no effect. In this case Young wished to provide a home or its equivalent for Mrs. Pierce after his death; but taking other councils, choose afterwards to provide her with a home while he lived, and thus by anticipating the provisions of his will rendered them inoperative.

Chief Justice Cartter pronounced the opinion of the Court. The sole question was whether the testator had satisfied his will. The evidence was that he had. The case was this: a man made a will in 1862 by which he gave his mistress a house or its proceeds, signifying his wish that the house should be in Baltimore. Three years afterwards he proceeded to execute his own will, and dedicated to her use the property he had contemplated buying with the stock left in his will. No intention to duplicate the gift anywhere appears There is nothing to embarrass a rational and natural deduction. He had provided in lue verbis for a certain purpose. If in a transaction before his death that purpose is preserved, and the purpose is a single one, its execution is to be deemed a satisfaction of the legacy. This cause presented that simple case. The variation as to the ultimate devisees was of no importance. The original purpose was kept intact. So far as he deviated to increase the amount of his bounty it makes the conclusion more manifest that he intended to satisfy the provisions of the will. The will has been executed. Bill of complainant is dismissed.

The following orders were also directed to be entered:

994. McClellan vs. Gregory et al. Order postponing hearing of application for injunction.

812. Ward vs. Clark et al. Decree appointing W. F. Mattingly trustee to sell, &c.

881. Barnes vs. Barnes. Order for final ratification of trustees of sale and auditor's report.

The court then adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock.

GEORGETOWN MATTERS.

PRIMARY SCHOOL No. 4.—The examination of this school commenced yesterday at 2 o'clock p. m., and occupied the afternoon in interesting exercises. The school is taught by Mrs. M. J. Edmonston, and aggregates sixty female scholars of the ages of seven to thirteen years. The examination was conducted by Mr. Joseph Libbey, in the presence of Messrs. Wm. C. Magee, H. J. Wilson, Wm. T. Dunlop, and T. A. Newman, of the Board of School Guardians, and Hon. C. D. Welch, Mayor of Georgetown. Reading and spelling, arithmetic and geography, and vocal music comprised the exercises, and the scholars acquitted themselves in these several branches with credit and satisfaction to the examiner and his confrères. Anthony Hyde, Esq., presided at the pianoforte, and the vocal efforts of the children were of that character of excellence which stamped Mr. J. H. Daniels, the musical tutor, a man in the right place. The guardians paid a flattering tribute to the teacher, Mrs. Edmonston, for through her indomitable zeal and close application to duty parents may be grateful for the advancement of their children in the first rudiments of practical education. This afternoon the male grammer school No. 1, (Miss Emma Reed, teacher,) will be examined.

ARREST OF A THIEF.—Officer Sherwood arrested a man named Henry Brown, charged with stealing a watch and chain, the property of Mr. S. P. Roe. The watch and chain were taken from the pocket of Mr. Roe at the Delmonico Hotel, Eleventh street, on the 2d inst., and was subsequently "spouted." Detective J. W. Coomes was selected to "work up" the case, and succeeded in finding the stolen property at "my uncle's," and the description of the person who pawned it. The detective then notified the police of Georgetown of the matter, and the sequel is the arrest of Brown as the guilty party, who was delivered yesterday to Detective Coomes, who took him, handcuffed, to Washington, where Justice Tucker committed him to jail.

FISTIANA.—Another brutal exhibition transpired at the classical Arlington Heights on Sunday afternoon. A match had previously been made between two "light weights" named Baily and John Moran, of Foggy Bottom, the "mill" to come off at the time and place above stated. The rules of the prize ring were ignored on this occasion, and the men went to it with a will, pummelling each other for one long hour, when neither of the combatants having secured the advantage, friends interposed, and declared the battle drawn. There was some money staked on the result, but the holders refused delivering it up until otherwise ordered.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.—On Sunday morning, about one o'clock, an entrance to the residence of Mr. Peter Berry, on Bridge street, between High and Congress, was effected by burglars, and their operations through the house awakening Mr. Berry, that gentleman hastily donned his clothes, and went in quest of the police. He soon returned with the officers, but indiscreetly lighting the gas in the house, the thieves scampered off by the rear entrance, without effecting the object of their visit.

PREMIUMS DISTRIBUTED.—A number of the parents and friends of the pupils of Mr. Julius Soper's Academy assembled at the school-rooms a few days ago to witness an exhibition by the children and the annual distribution of premiums. The exercises consisted of dialogues, addresses, &c., after which a number of premiums were distributed. Among those present were Professor Yarnall, of the National Observatory; J. Henry Wilson, esq., of the Board of Guardians of our Public Schools; F. A. Techfaly, esq., H. H. Herr, esq., Francis Wheatly, esq., and many others.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.—The market generally rules flat. There is but little disposition on the part of millers to enter the market at prevailing rates for grain, owing to the anticipated abundant yield and the limited shipping demand for flour. The offerings comprised only 200 bushels new white wheat, which was disposed of at private sale, but understood to be $3 per bushel. There was no inquiry for flour, except for retail wants by the dray-load; and corn and oats were entirely neglected.

BROKE HIS LEG.—On Sunday evening, Augustus Banam, a sailor on board the schr. Sarah J. Hoyt, of Stanford, awaiting a load of coal at one of the wharves, while wrestling in a friendly manner with a companion, slipped, and fell through the hold, unfortunately breaking his leg. The sufferer was conveyed yesterday afternoon to Providence hospital for medical treatment.

THE OUTLET LOCK.—Messrs. Maynard & Deeter, contractors for repairing and opening the outlet lock at Rock Creek, have commenced work, a portion of the Government coal, which impeded the work, having been removed. The time specified for the completion of the work is the 1st of September, but the contractors expect to finish the job sometime in August. The contract price to put the lock in order is $8,500.

RUNAWAY.—A horse attached to a light buggy ran away on Sunday evening, dashing down Bridge street at a fearful speed. It was fortunate that no one was in the vehicle at the time, else a serious accident might have occurred, as the horse and buggy was only brought to a standstill by coming in contact with car 17 on the bridge.

FROM NEW YORK.—The fine steamer John Gibson, Captain H. C. Fuller, of the Merchants' Line, will arrive this morning with a full cargo of assorted freight for District merchants. This line has just perfected arrangements by which freight can be shipped through from this port to Boston at the lowest rates.

THE CANAL.—The canal presented a rather lively appearance yesterday, the number of boats registering at the collector's office amounting to thirty-six, averaging 107 tons of coal each, consigned to the American, Consolidation, Cumberland, Borden, Central, and Hampshire coal companies.

WITHOUT LICENSE.—Officer Lambie yesterday afternoon arrested D. O'Conner, who he discovered peddling books along the wharves without the proper license. He was taken to Justice Buckey's office, and his case being a peculiar one, and promising to take out the required license, the justice dismissed him.

SCHOONERS AGROUND.—Captain Wilson, of the steamer Kennebec, who arrived here yesterday, reports that two schooners are aground, one at "Kettle Bottom" and the other at "Matthias' Point" bars.

PAID HIS FINE.—James Cleveland, the man so severely beaten by Baker, in College Woods, on the 4th, appeared before Justice Buckey yesterday evening, and paid a fine of $5.50 for engaging in a prize fight.

PORT OF GEORGETOWN.—Entered, steamer New York, Robinson, from Philadelphia. Entered and cleared, steamer Kennebec, Wilson, from and for Baltimore.

THERE cometh glad tidings of joy to all,
To young and to old, to great and to small;
The beauty which once was so precious and rare,
Is free for all, and all may be fair,
By the use of
CHANTILLAR'S WHITE LIQUID ENAMEL,
For Improving and Beautifying the Complexion.
The most valuable and perfect preparation in use for giving the skin a beautiful pearl-like tint, that is only found in youth. It quickly removes Tan, Freckles, Pimples, Blotches, Moth Patches, Sallowness, Eruptions, and all impurities of the skin, kindly healing the same, leaving the skin white and clear as alabaster. Its use cannot be detected by the closest scrutiny, and being a vegetable preparation, is perfectly harmless. It is the only article of the kind used by the French, and is considered by the Parisian as indispensable to a perfect toilet. Upwards of 80,000 bottles were sold during the past year, a sufficient guarantee of its efficacy. Price only 75 cents. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of an order, by
