GRATZ BROWN & CO.—THE GREAT GRIEVANCE.

The speech which Mr. Brown made before the so-called Liberal Republican convention at Jefferson city is, considering the character and composition of that extraordinary gathering, one of the most remarkable productions that we have read in some time. Mr. Brown addressed this tagrag and bobtail of an opposition, so well described by one of our correspondents as "the mere left wing of the Democratic party, made up of screbeads, copperheads and possumites," as follows: "When I look abroad over this assembly I see here, there and almost everywhere remnants of the old guard of freedom." This is one of Mr. Brown's jokes. The most prominent men in the convention were General Patrick Donan, the rebel editor of the Caucasian, with the character of whose journal the people are by this time pretty familiar, and the local editor of Mr. Schurz's Westliche Post, whose name we have forgotten, but whose most distinguished services in the cause of freedom was the assistance which he gave his Senatorial chief in elevating General Francis P. Blair, jr., to his present position, at the cost of a defeat to the Republican party of Missouri.

There is another remarkable point in Mr. Brown's speech which shows how far he and his friends have wandered from the Republican fold, namely, the emphatic declaration made by him on the subject of State rights. He inveighs against centralization as loudly and bitterly as the most pronounced secessionist in the country. It is the "central figure and point of attack in the great fight of the future," he thinks, "the centralization of the national Government over all local freedom." We have no desire to go into a discussion of this question further than to say that if there be any one heresy which has been exploded in this country it is that doctrine of State rights, which the late rebels preached and attempted to put in execution to the disruption of the Union. But, independently of that, Mr. Brown's statement is notwithstanding by facts. The tendency of the country and of the Republican party has been for some time, and is now, not toward centralization, but exactly the other way. The Federal Government has relegated the control of the Southern States back to the people. Mr. Brown knows very well that the exceptional cases where the Government and Congress were compelled to interfere for the protection of life and property are purely exceptional, and that it is unfair to regard them or speak of them in any other light.

Mr. Brown, however, made one grave charge against the Administration which entirely justifies the friends of Mr. Schurz in their attempt to break up the party. It is as follows:

"Have we not seen the leading representative of one great element of our population, and certainly of a great element of Republican strength—I allude to our German fellow citizens, who have but a single representative in the Senate of the United States—have we not seen him when he presented his card at the door of the Executive office, and it might be pronounced that one who argued so much respectability and weight matters to present, have it returned to him with the words 'not in,' while Chandler, Cameron, Sherman, Morton and Drake were flitting in and out the doors like scene shifters in a theatre?"

This was really heartrending, and we are not at all surprised that the distinguished Senator from Missouri should resent it. It was cruel to keep him out when Senators Cameron and Chandler and Sherman and Morton and so many others were basking in the sunshine of the Executive presence. It is to be regretted that Governor Brown did not fix the date of this interesting occurrence. For the sake of the historian we trust that he will take the first opportunity to do so. Was it when Mr. Schurz was so zealously looking after the interests of his office-holding brother-in-law? If so, we do not wonder that the President was not at home to him. The story was a weary one, and the President we have no doubt had graver and more important business to attend to than listening to the story of the woes of Mr. Schurz and his relatives. Mr. Lincoln we are assured was pestered by the Missouri Senator in a similar manner. But he was interested in himself at that time, and not in his brother-in-law.

Mr. Brown also says that Mr. Schurz is the representative of the German element in this country. We should like to know when he was charged with so great and important a trust. We have always been under the impression that he was a representative in part of the State of Missouri, but it seems we have been mistaken. We object, however, to Mr. Brown's glorification and exaltation of his friend, on whom he counts for so much assistance in breaking up the party. Mr. Schurz is not the representative of the German element in this country in anything like the degree that General Franz Sigel is. Half the Germans in the country repudiate his leadership. General Franz Sigel, on the contrary, has been singled by his countrymen in New York, and mainly by their votes elevated to one of the best and most remunerative offices in their gift. Mr. Schurz has had no such indorsements from his countrymen, although in more than one State of the Union he has been for years a perpetual candidate for everything that presented itself.

But putting all this aside we are glad to learn from one so competent to know the real cause and secret of the foundation of Mr. Brown's liberal Republican movement. The President referred one day to Mr. Schurz, which made him mad, and made Mr. Brown mad, so mad that their wrath can only be appeased by the utter disruption of Republicanism—of the grand old party that saved the Union, that put an end to slavery, the story of whose deeds fills all the world, and is the brightest chapter of all time.

SENATOR SHERMAN ON AMNESTY.

Hon. John Sherman yesterday declared himself unreservedly for amnesty toward our Southern brethren. He stated he but represented the popular feeling throughout the West, and especially in his own great State of Ohio. The bold and generous utterances of Senator Sherman will be copied throughout the country, as well as his statement that the civil rights bill was meant to sustain the rights of native born colored men, and that proper safeguards should be adopted to keep the heathen black and inferior races from full participance in American citizenship until properly naturalized. Mr. Sherman's reference to the President's message favoring amnesty as the best policy for the country to adopt, and that all the world knew that he had proven this, was very good. It is time that the will of the people, expressed so frequently by the members of the House of Representatives, was regarded by the Senate. Already severe criticism appears in the most outspoken Republican journals of the country, and it is dangerous for any Senator to put himself on record in opposition to amnesty at this time.

THE American Historical Record settles the question regarding the Confederate States seal. A design was adopted, the seal was made in England, and received in Richmond a few days before General Lee thought it prudent to vacate Richmond. It was never used on an official document.

ONE VIEW OF IT.

Certain believers in the Malthusian theory state that "England has too many people," and that a foreign war is needed just now in order to prevent revolution and a general overturning of the Government. We do not believe in the above inhuman doctrine, but we think that blundering management, a selfish aristocracy and false ideas of political economy have brought about a condition of affairs so threatening that the aristocracy of England feel the necessity of something to relieve the popular mind of its discontent or another French catastrophe may be possible. The truth is that similar neglect has brought England to the position France occupied prior to the war with Germany.

Discontent among the working classes threatens the dynasty, and no manufactured sympathy for "His Royal Highness" at Sandringham, or mourning of Her Majesty, can keep down the disgust of intelligent workingmen at the useless extravagance and foolish display of royalty. Too many people have heard the thoughts of Dilke and Cobden to be satisfied with sentimental appeals to a fictitious loyalty. The spurious feeling attempted by Government organs and writers, goes for nothing, and, in the opinion of many thinking Englishmen, the attempt to cover crimes of mismanagement by the smoke of "American impudence," will go for nothing. The aristocratic party is on its last legs when it resorts to such too transparent subterfuges. The people of England are too well informed to be longer misgoverned or remain in abject subjection to obsolete ideas. An attempted war with America would result in the destruction of monarchy and the establishment of a republican form of government for the British empire.

Notwithstanding the cruel selfishness of England's conduct to our country when we were in distress, and her equally scoundrelly behavior in seeking to dodge the payment of just claims, we are disposed to be patient and to bide our time. It speaks well for the temper of our people that they have permitted peaceful means to be used in obtaining satisfaction. It may be that other means may be equally popular at a proper time.

ANOTHER VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE.

The Knoxville Daily Chronicle thinks that the South is entitled to the Vice Presidency, and presents the name of the Hon. Horace Maynard as candidate, whom it believes that section of the Union, and indeed the country generally, would be proud to honor. This makes the eighth candidate for that high position. As several of our readers have doubtless forgotten some of the gentlemen who have been mentioned in connection with the Vice Presidency, we give the names of all the candidates as follows: Gen. John M. Harlan, of Kentucky; ex-Governor Dennison, the Hon. Henry Wilson, the Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, John W. Forney, the Hon. James G. Blaine, Mr. Colfax, and now Mr. Maynard. Mr. Greeley, too, has been mentioned, but his friends have come to the conclusion that he is less fitted for the Vice Presidency than for even the Presidency, and have judiciously withdrawn his name.

All of the gentlemen above named, with the exception of the Tribune farmer, would make superb Vice Presidents, and under other circumstances we should be proud to support any one of them for the second place in the gift of the people. But Mr. Colfax's claims are so prominent, and he is so manifestly the popular choice, that we cannot do otherwise than urge his renomination with all the fire we can command. Mr. Maynard deserves every honor that the party could confer on him, and so does Mr. Kelley and Mr. Wilson; but they are all young men, and can afford to wait for some time to come. The present position of parties is so peculiar, the enemies are so numerous without the camp, and the disaffected within, that we must do nothing to endanger our success in the great battle that is approaching. With Grant and Colfax our triumph is certain. Let us have the old ticket and the old commanders, and we shall march to victory next November as certainly as we did four years ago.

THAT SAME OLD COON.

The so-called Liberal Republicans have adopted the State rights dogma as one of their planks for their permanent platform, and this because unobjectionable to the Southern Democracy. Now the change of name does not change the principles of these possum passive gentlemen, and we respectfully ask the leaders in the movement if they think they can humbug anybody by such claptrap? It is the same old coon of State sovereignty and power of States to secede from the Union at will, and which we had thought the late war had settled finally and forever. Possibly a few weak Republicans may be deluded into following the liberals in the South if amnesty is longer delayed, but it will only be in consequence of personal feeling controlling our councils instead of an enlarged statesmanship. Let the Senate do its duty and so kill off the possums and passivists now seeking to divide our party in the South and Southwest.

THE BLUE BOOK.

We have received from the compiler and publisher, Mr. J. Disturnell, 17 South Sixth street, Philadelphia, a copy of his "United States Register, or Blue Book, for 1872." As a work of reference the Blue Book is most valuable, containing as it does carefully prepared and systematically arranged political and statistical information of great interest to the general public. It embraces the names, rank, &c., of the principal civil and military officers of the Government. The data are so admirably arranged that it is but a moment's work to obtain the information desired. To political people the value of such a work is at once apparent.

A PLOT of land in London, opposite the Mansion house, the public residence of the Lord Mayor, a locality well-known to all who have visited England, is said to have been recently let at a ground-rent almost equal to one pound per square foot per annum, which represents a capitalized value of about a million and a half sterling per acre, or $500,000.

PERSONAL.

— The remains of General Anderson will be sent to New York in a few days.

— Wm. Florence, the comedian, denies that he is a bondsman of Tom Fields.

— Hon. A. A. Sargent, of California, is stopping at No. 1313 M street northwest.

— Cardinal Antonelli is sick, but there is nothing in his complaint to excite apprehension.

— Knoxville, Illinois, pays its taxes to Collector Lucy Stevens.

— It is reported that Marie has married the young and beautiful Lady Harriet Beaufort.

— The heirs of John Bidwell have brought suit to recover real estate in New Orleans, confiscated during the war.

— A dispatch from Paris says President Thiers was shot at on Monday, but was not hurt. The assassin escaped.

— It is stated that Lieut. Charles F. Humphreys, 4th artillery, has found a bride among the maidens of Smithville, Tex. The happy woman is immensely wealthy and owns several banks.

— Dr. S. G. Howe and Mrs. Howe, with a party of ladies and gentlemen, will sail from New York on the Tybee next week, for San Domingo to spend the winter.

— A dispatch from Florence says an accident happened Monday night to a train on the railway near Perugia. Ristori, the celebrated tragedienne, who was a passenger, received some injuries.

— Mr. Erastus Hopkins, for some years a Presbyterian clergyman, and president of the Connecticut River Railroad Company during the period of its construction, died recently at Northampton, Mass.

— It is now conceded, since ex-Governor English, of Connecticut, persists in refusing to allow his name to be used, that the Democratic candidate for Governor will be Hon. R. D. Hubbard, of Hartford.

— Tom Nast has added many choice sketches to his collection of notabilities, and several Senators who have acted in opposition to the Administration will soon be so happy as to appear before a laughing world retaining their bickers.

— Gen. Wm. H. Taylor, of the Texas State Senate, is stopping at the Metropolitan hotel with his young and beautiful bride. He has about completed an extensive bridal tour, and will shortly return to Texas, bearing with him the best wishes of his numerous friends for himself and wife.

— Miss Emma Abbott, says a New York paper, well known as the soprano of Mr. Chapin's church, is creating quite a musical sensation in that city. Miss Abbott sang before a critical audience at Mr. Daly's on Friday evening, and sang again at Mr. Greeley's birthday reception, at Mrs. Johnson's, on Saturday evening. She is a protege of Miss Kellogg, and her voice is pronounced as sweet as either Kellogg's or Nilsson's. It is certainly sweet enough to always thrill her audience. Miss Abbott goes to Milan in May, to complete her musical education, when she will appear as a prima donna in opera.

UNITED STATES COAST SURVEY—NOTICE TO MARINERS. COAST SURVEY OFFICE, January 31, 1872. ATLANTIC COAST, EAST COAST OF FLORIDA. St. Lucie Shoal—Fatseen from a recent dispatch from Capt. John E. Hall, U. S. Navy, commanding Steamer Fish, United States navy, commanding Steamer Fish:

"Shoal between Indian River Inlet and St. Lucie Inlet was suddenly seen upon this vessel, and running over a portion of it found seventeen feet on it, then suddenly deepened into ten feet or less. It moves there in much shoaler water than it, but do not think the shoal extends to the shore. This shoal lies about half way between Indian River and St. Lucie Inlets, and its outer edge, with seventeen feet water upon it, is nearly six miles from the shore."
