☞ Under the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 21, 1871, a Territorial government was organized in the District of Columbia. Its results have thus far fully realized the expectations of its advocates. Under the direction of the Territorial officers, a system of improvements has been inaugurated, by means of which Washington is rapidly becoming a city worthy of the nation's capital. The citizens of the District having voluntarily taxed themselves to a large amount for the purpose of contributing to the adornment of the seat of Government, I recommend liberal appropriations on the part of Congress, in order that the Government may bear its just share of the expense of carrying out a judicious system of improvements.—President Grant's Message.

CONNECTICUT.

The annual election of State officers in Connecticut will be held on the 1st of April. The Republican ticket is headed by Marshall Jewell, the present Governor, and the Democratic by R. D. Hubbard. Both candidates are men of high character and reputation. Governor Jewell's administration during the last year has been eminently wise and judicious, and his renomination is a deserved compliment to his personal and political worth.

Connecticut has been for years one of the doubtful States. Since the war the Republicans have, as a general thing, carried it, but the majorities have never been as large as could be desired. Last year, it will be remembered, the result was for several days in doubt, so close was the vote. In a total vote of nearly ninety-five thousand Governor Jewell's majority was only one hundred and three. The Republicans of Connecticut have, however, a manifest advantage this year, which we expect will be made apparent at the end of the canvass. The nearness of Connecticut to New York has been politically unfortunate for that State.

While Tammany was in the ascendancy in the empire city, the Democracy of Connecticut had in that organization a bold and unscrupulous ally. Just before election day organized bands of roughs and repeaters were colonized in her cities and villages. The Democratic managers had only to send the orders, and voters were ready furnished. All this has been changed this year. The Greenwich club-house is abandoned and deserted; the Blossom club will not bloom in Connecticut this spring or summer. The yachts of the Tammany chieftains, whose sails whitened the Sound, have sailed away with their owners forever, and the places that once knew them, shall know them no more forever. The honest farmers and citizens of Connecticut, whose votes have been so often neutralized in the past by the rowdies, blacklegs and pugilists, who, trained to the bugle-call of the Tammany leaders, are cowering in the dark corners of New York, while the bold outlaws who led them are trembling at the prospect of the jail and the penitentiary, will have full opportunity to vote unmolested and give full expression to their wishes.

But it is useless to disguise the fact that the Republicans of Connecticut have, on the other hand, to contend this year against disadvantages and drawbacks which have not obtained or had a place in past campaigns. Republicanism is divided against itself. For the last twelve months certain leaders in the Republican party have been making a fierce and relentless war against the Republican administration of President Grant, and it is not surprising, while it is a matter of regret, that the most effective arguments in favor of Democracy that are now made in Connecticut are those which have recently fallen from the lips of leading Republican Senators, or been made in the columns of leading Republican journals. They have endeavored to read and break the party in pieces merely to gratify personal spite and animosity, or to subserve unholy personal ambitions and aspirations. National conventions in opposition to the party have been called and supported; bolts have been encouraged, and all manner of possible and impossible alliances advocated.

We have faith, however, in the honest, unselfish patriotism and Republicanism of the people of Connecticut. We believe that they will follow the noble example of New Hampshire, and teach the false leaders, who are endeavoring to rend the party to their own purposes, the lesson that they seem incapable of learning, that the Republican party cannot be made the mere football of any man or clique of men, merely to subserve their own purposes. The contest in Connecticut has nothing whatever to do with the intestine quarrels of the party, except in so far as they endanger the party's national unity. A Republican ticket has been put in the field; it is the duty of every Republican to work for its success. The New York World, in its issue yesterday, advises the "Liberal Republicans," which is the polite name for the opponents of President Grant, to vote with the Democracy, and help make the Cincinnati convention a success. This is too thin. In Connecticut it is not a question of Philadelphia or of Cincinnati, but of the triumph of Republican principles against Democratic principles, of Republican honor, honesty and loyalty against Democratic dishonor, dishonesty and disloyalty.

THE WISCONSIN LEGISLATURE, misinformed or misapprehending, has, by joint resolution, requested Congress to examine into the terms of the purchase by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company of the Lake Superior and Mississippi road, connecting Duluth with St. Paul, and "especially to inquire whether said contract of purchase is conditioned on the defeat in Congress of the bill to renew the grant of land to the State of Wisconsin in aid of the construction of the railroad from the St. Croix river or lake to Lake Superior." The secretary of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, an officer presumed to be perfectly informed upon that point, assures us that the Northern Pacific has not purchased, nor contracted to purchase, the Lake Superior and Mississippi road, and that no negotiation for such a purchase is either pending or proposed.—Tribune.

We copy the foregoing from the New York Tribune, which paper, with accustomed inconsistency, has at times advocated and at others opposed the Bayfield and St. Croix land grant. Perhaps Mr. Greeley, since he has become the mouthpiece of railroad secretaries, will inform us whether or not the Northern Pacific road has contracted for a lease of the Lake Superior and Mississippi road, contingent on the defeat of the St. Croix bill! In fairness to both parties we denounce this deception as unworthy of a great paper like the Tribune, and hope Mr. Greeley will explain the difference between the actual purchase of a railroad and a nine hundred and ninety-nine years' lease.

THE Washington REPUBLICAN gives a number of extracts from the Radical press under the head "More Guns for Grant." The editor certainly doesn't mean to refer to the guns sold by Grant to France during the German war.—Relief Exchange.

No. We mean the guns that thundered at Shiloh, Vicksburg, Donelson, the Wilderness and Richmond.

THE SCOTT-GARRETT contest over the railroad depot was transferred from the committee to the House yesterday, with what result will be seen in our regular report of the proceedings.

THE GROWTH OF PROTECTION.

The national or the protective idea grows more popular with the progress of enlightenment among the masses. In the South, where but a short time since theories of war with the life of the republic were cherished, we now behold a great change.

The patriotism of the old-time Virginians is being revived by their sons, and the sins of secession will speedily be wiped out by the enthusiasm of a revived nationality. Not long since the hals old Henry A. Wise delivered a lecture in this city, in which he spoke for his people when he declared his return to the faith of his youth. Not only in Virginia, but the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama, do we see awakened belief in the sacred old doctrines of Henry Clay and Daniel Webster. "The American system" is to take a new lease of life, and protection for American industry is the key-note for the coming campaign.

Senator Sherman declared in the Senate last week that the true policy of the Government was to free from taxation all articles of production or manufacture on American soil, and insist that imported articles of luxury, and such as come into competition with our own manufactures, pay for the expenses of the Government. Every thinking citizen agrees with Mr. Sherman, and will, we are certain, act upon that belief in the coming campaign.

A Virginia newspaper very properly rebukes the opposition for continually prating about the "centralization" of the government, and other played-out and passed-away issues, when such great practical truths as internal improvement and home development press upon every intelligent mind in the South. We like this indication, and are glad to see our Georgia and Arkansas cotemporaries rebuking in fit terms the ignorance and folly of those old State's right and free-trade Bourbons who talk as if slave labor still existed. The rich mineral lands of the seaboard and Southwestern States have too long been neglected to gratify the whims and selfishness of slaveholders.

British agents, whether in Congress or out of it, will find it hard to convice any considerable body of our voters that the mechanical interests of the republic are not of the utmost value, and that no progress is worth having that is not based upon home development and the prosperity and growth of the country. Many so-called liberals or revenue reformers imagine that a large body of agriculturists have been deluded into the belief that their products are being taxed for the benefit of the manufacturing and mechanical classes without any corresponding benefit. Never were men more mistaken. The Northwest is united to a man against any change of policy that will interfere with their wool-growing interests, and the farmers are fully wedded to the belief that markets can be created near home for the consumption of food and products by assisting the mechanic in his efforts to manufacture. All the Western States are alive to the immense value of the coal and iron fields now being sought out and rapidly developed. Not a State West or South but feels the inestimable value of those great interests once only known to Pennsylvania or New York. The cry has gone forth that Cincinnati convention conspirators must not touch the tariff, and since the New Hampshire election, the more sensible of Democrats declare that even free-trade dogmas must be abandoned, or "Grant will surely win." The recent conference in this city developed this fact, and also the inherent weakness of free trade. In one short year the country sees the chief apostles of "reform" changing front, and before the Presidential election we will hear men once loudly attacking protection passing by the subject, or declaring or explaining their position as always half way in favor of home industry.

One Western "reform" organ argues that it is of "vital importance" that Chicago, as well as Buffalo and Cleveland, build shipyards for iron vessels; that the coal and iron of the West must be utilized, and that capital will seek investment in new and profitable ways, should the tariff tinkers let well enough alone. Recent votes in the House of Representatives show that the leaven is working with good results. Let the Committee of Ways and Means be warned in time, and not trifle with interests as strong in one section as another.

HON. O. D. CONGER, of Mich., brought down the House with some very amusing and taking allusions relating to our genial friend, Sunset Cox, who had been speaking in opposition to him in the discussion on the St. Croix railroad bill. Mr. Conger said:

"The gentleman says he did talk against the bill, but I thought he did not. He has no regard for those poor people in that region of country. He ought to know them. He caught in his travels through other lands to have known what the poor suffer. I have read his glowing description of the poverty of Spain and Algeria. I have read it with pride that he could write so well and describe so well the sufferings, wants, and necessities of the people that dwell in foreign lands. I have laughed with him at his description of the donkey-riders and mule-riders there in that region where they have no railroads and no means of communication better than they had a hundred years ago. I have smiled at his pleasant descriptions; and if he should travel through the swamps of northern Wisconsin, he would thank God even for a little donkey that could get him through the wilderness. [Laughter.]

"His sympathy is not all-embracing. I know the gentleman loves the human race, and yet it was but a few days ago in the House that one of his venerable Virginia friends, who lives on the other side of the Blue Ridge, came here to see him and looked around this House, and looked up in that gallery at the shadows clustering there, and talked with him about the present situation of this House compared with what it was fifteen years ago, when his venerable friend met him here. And they talked about the situation of the people who have got in here since then. His old friend said that it was different now from what it was when he used to come here and found gentlemen in Congress, and gentlemen riding in the streets, and gentlemen holding office under the Government, when the white race controlled things here. And how faithfully he depicted the beautiful old days that are past; and he said: 'Now there is a darkey in the Senate, or was, or has been.' He said to my friend here: 'Now there are negroes in the House.' [Laughter.] He said: 'Now negroes sit around the gallery; they never did so when I used to come here to see and meet the first families of Virginia in the Halls of Congress.'

"Oh, sir, I went with my sympathizing friend and his friend out into the rotunda, and he sat down on a seat before that picture of Washington surrendering his sword, and his old friend, overcome with grief from what he had seen here, sat down and looked at the Father of his Country, and said, addressing Washington, 'Oh, my father, what would your friends and relatives, the first families of Virginia, your father and my father did, George. [Laughter.] But it is no use our staying in Washington any longer. Another race has come, respectable people are driven out, the first families are gone, George. [Laughter.] There are negroes in the street cars, negroes in the Senate, negroes in the House, negroes in the galleries, darkness everywhere, George.' [Laughter.] I will not say that my friend from New York [Mr. Cox] sympathized with him, but the tears were trembling in his eyes as he looked up to the painting, and my friend, looking on, heard him say in that doleful voice, 'George, this is no place for respectable people; go up, George, go up, and take your place between the Saviour and Mary McDaniel.' [Laughter.] and so the gentleman and his New York friend went sorrowing on their way. He sympathizes with the old families of Virginia, but he does not sympathize with the poor settlers of Wisconsin, or he would vote for this bill. [Laughter.] He had better 'go up.'"

WE ARE GLAD to learn that the movement to erect a statue to Horace Greeley is likely to be successful. The New York Times says, in reference to the project:

"The subscription list bears the names of many persons who closely resemble him in character, and the amount already subscribed has reached a respectable sum. Senator Fenton has sent a hundred dollars—so has A. Oakey Hall. Among other distinguished subscribers are Ben Manierre, (Hank Smith is short of funds just now,) a good many Tammany men—and, indeed, most of the persons who subscribed to the Tweed statue some time ago."

It seems to us that the gentlemen who have undertaken the work are not pushing it with the vigor and earnestness that should characterize the effort. For instance, no appeal, so far as we know, has been made to the South. Mr. Greeley has thousands of admirers in that portion of our country, who, if the subject was properly laid before them, would be happy to contribute. Mr. Jefferson Davis is under great and lasting obligations to Mr. Greeley; but blanams does not appear among the long list of subscribers. If the illustrious candidate for the Presidency is to have a statue it should be national in its character, and not confined to a class or a section. We move that the South be canvassed, and afforded an opportunity to do her share, and that Mr. Davis be appointed a committee of one to dire the Southern heart on the subject.

THE Majilitous leave for California on April 8, under engagement to John E. McCullough.

PENNSYLVANIA is beginning to discuss the propriety and advisability of removing her State capitol from Harrisburg to Philadelphia. A bill has been introduced in the Legislature authorizing the appointment of a commission to consist of two senators and three representatives, "whose duty it shall be to obtain bids for suitable designs and plans for new capitol buildings," the entire cost not to exceed five millions of dollars. The accommodations at Harrisburg are notoriously insufficient, and any change could not but be a change for the better.

THE New York Herald hopes that President Grant will give close attention to Mexico and establish a protectorate over it. "He can add no greener laurel to his fame or make any nobler contribution to the civilization of the world."

THE PIRATE OF THE PRESS is likely to have enough to attend to in Philadelphia without coming to Washington. A New York dispatch says that a couple of libel suits have been brought against him by two of his victims in Philadelphia.

MR. BARNEY WILLIAMS, we are informed, intends returning to this country early in April. His health has been bad during his absence, and he has not found that relief in foreign travel which he had anticipated.

PERSONAL.

— Count Von Beust, Austrian ambassador at London, is a confirmed invalid.

— Blind Tom cares for seven of his impecunious relatives.

— Paul Morphy, the great chess player, keeps a grocery store in New Orleans.

— Planche, the well known English playwright, is 18 years of age, but lives hale and hearty in busy London.

— It is believed that the Wesleyan fund of Yale college will reach the desired half million, as it is increasing rapidly.

— The Crown Prince of Prussia and Bismarck are great beer drinkers. Von Moltke is a teetotaller.

— Two female students at Leipsic recently had a fencing duel, in which one lost an eye and the other a part of her nose.

— It is stated that the story of Charles Dickens' life will be told again in his son's periodical, All the Year Round, his family being not at all satisfied with Mr. Forster's version.

— A Philadelphia woman, who had broken her leg, was so modest that she would not permit the surgeon to set it, and, there being no female doctor around, mortification ensued, which resulted in death.

— One of the participants in the celebration at London of the anniversary of Tom Paine's birthday was an old knife-grinder, named Treslove, who was frequently fined and imprisoned in other days for selling the "Age of Reason."

— After Father Taylor, the Boston pulpit eccentricity, had lost the use of one arm by paralysis, he was met by a friend who inquired how he was: "Famously," the sailor preacher replied, "sailing to heaven with one arm!"

— During the journeyings in Europe of the Emperor of Brazil he has spent $900,000, and, having touched that figure, now goes home to economize and utilize, if possible, some of the new and useful things that have fallen under his observation.

— Mr. William Everett, son of Edward Everett, has gone to live in the Holmes house at Cambridge, and thither taken his father's library. Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in it, and General Warren rested there on his way to Breed's Hill, where he was killed.

— At the first victory for freedom over the Democracy of New Hamshire, in 1845, Whittier wrote:

"God bless New Hampshire! From her granite peaks
Once more the voice of Stark and Langdon speaks."

— Jean Ingelow is described as a buxom, fine-looking woman, somewhat near her forties. She has an abundance of auburn hair, which she winds in a graceful fashion of her own about her well-shaped head, bright eyes, and a lovely changing color, which comes and goes in her cheeks at the slightest provocation.

— Dr. Cronhyatekha, the Indian for whose education the Prince of Wales made provision, while on his tour in Canada, has proved himself well worthy of his royal benefactor. He has distinguished himself in the university, become a master of the science of medicine, and a learned and eloquent speaker. He is directing his abilities toward the improvement and advancement of his own people, the "Six Nations," of Brant.

— Nilsson was popular in Syracuse. No doubt about it. Among the out-of-town people who came to hear her was a bevy of girls from Wells' female college at Aurora. Only those who were in the class of vocal music were allowed to be of the party. They decided to be, and were presented to the warbler. As they took leave of the object of their admiration they were affected to tears. One pretty girl, evidently "far gone," was heard to exclaim, "I can't see Nilsson, but I kissed her trunk."

JOHN F. COOK, Register D. C. mh20-eod6t

☞ MEDICAL SCHOOL FOR NURSES.—Dr. Jenkins will lecture at Columbian College, Dr. J. Harry Thompson and Dr. F. A. Ashford will deliver a course of lectures at Columbia Hospital to female only, commencing on the 1st of January, 1872, and continuing each Tuesday and Thursday during January, February and March.

It will embrace the instruction necessary in Anatomy, Physiology, Midwifery and Hygiene, to qualify a woman to discharge intelligently all the duties of a nurse.

At the close of the course those students who intend to follow nursing as a profession will have the opportunity of entering the hospital as probationary nurses for three months; at the end of that time they will receive a certificate of their services and qualifications.

The lectures will commence at 4 p. m., and continue for one hour.

Tickets can be obtained of Dr. J. H. Thompson, 1318 Massachusetts avenue; Dr. F. A. Ashford, 1336 New York avenue, or of the matron at the hospital, corner of Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue. ds20-tf

For Sale or Rent.

FOR SALE—A SPLENDID CITY RESIDENCE, corner of Vermont avenue and I street northwest, most substantial manner, with Connecticut brown-stone front, three stories high, and three-story back building, with a spacious basement underneath the whole building, which is sub-divided into kitchen, washroom, furnace-room, coal cellar, pantry, closets, &c.; all fitted up with modern conveniences. In the upper rooms there are two bath-rooms, with water closets, hot and cold water, &c. The rooms are all high ceilinged, well arranged and well ventilated, seven sleeping apartments, gaslaid throughout and other convenient closets. In the parlor there is an elegant new mantel and some choice and desirable pieces of furniture, which will go with the house. There is also a vacant lot, adjoining, fifty feet wide, but the house and the lot is separate and will be sold separately if desired; both lots run back to a wide, paved alley. The house upon which this residence fronts is one of the most beautiful in Washington. The house is well secured, and moved with economy. Price of the whole property cheap; less than any similarly located in Washington, and more advantageous. THIS IS A RARE CHANCE. Inquire of
