The Jubilee Music.

Whatever may be the popular prediction with regard to the success or failure of the proposed jubilee, the titles of the music to be sung, which were published yesterday, have removed all doubts as to its character, and made it evident that no sacrifice of quality to quantity will be necessary. Those who are familiar with the jubilee music of 1869 will recognize many of the grand choruses which that occasion introduced to thousands who had never heard of them before. "The Elijah choruses, including the great "Habakkuk" chorus, "See the conquering hero comes," from Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus," the "Gloria," from Mozart's "Twelfth Mass," the "Inflammatus," from Rossini's "Stabat Mater," the prayer from "Moses in Egypt," by the same composer, and the glorious "Hallelujah chorus," from "The Messiah," have all become, as one may say, household songs within the past three years, and will be seen with interest upon the coming programme.

Of the new music we are to have for the first time, we believe, one chorus from Mr. J. K. Paine's new oratorio of "St. Peter;" two are selected from Costa's "Eli," and one from Donizetti's opera of "Polluto." We are especially pleased to notice that Mendelssohn's beautiful part-song, "Farewell to the Forest," which has displayed to peculiar advantage the excellence of the Handel and Haydn Society, is to be attempted by the great chorus, and that another part-song, entirely for male voices, has been added to the programme. It is the intention of the management that these songs shall be sung without instrumental accompaniment—a dangerous venture, even with a small body of singers—the effect, in the event of success, will be of an indescribably delightful character.—Boston Advertiser.

EVERYTHING connected with hanging being interesting we may mention that a story is published in the Atchison (Kansas) Herald, the purport of which is that a murderer being hanged in that neighborhood, was dug up and brought to life by the doctors, assisted by a galvanic battery. The resuscitated gentleman gives the following description of the sensations attendant upon strangulation: "Hanging is rather pleasant than otherwise; for, after the first spasmodic struggle for breath, a delightful tickling sensation followed my veins to the tips of my limbs. Consciousness seemed to lose itself very gradually, and for a time a portion of the brain seemed to retain its vitality. The happiest moment of a lifetime was centered in a dream at that instant. From that moment until I found myself in the hands of science I knew nothing." The Herald promises "further developments next week, but it had better let well enough alone. It cannot beat that "delightful tickling sensation," and that "happiest moment of a lifetime."
