SECRETARY ROBESON VINDICATED.

In our news columns this morning will be found an extended synopsis of the majority report, which was presented in the House of Representatives yesterday, of the committee appointed to investigate into the personal charges preferred by the New York Sun against Secretary Robeson and into his management of the Navy Department. The report in every particular fully sustains the verdict which the people and the press, who read and weighed the evidence presented from day to day, have already rendered a verdict of acquital. We have no desire to go over all the facts in this extraordinary investigation. It will be remembered that it was ordered at the request of the Secretary himself, in answer to slanderous attacks in a disreputable New York journal. The investigation was two-fold in its character: First, into the personal character of the Secretary himself, and second, into his administration of the Navy Department. The latitude allowed in the investigation has never been exceeded even by committees of Congress. Chas. A. Dana was permitted to appear by counsel as a public prosecutor. He brought to Washington with him a notorious and infamous lawyer of New York, thoroughly versed in all the tricks of the tombs' shysters, who left no stone unturned to prove the case of his client.

Testimony that would not be admitted in the lowest police court in the country was introduced; questions that would be ruled out by every tribunal in the land were allowed to be asked; the official records of the Department were placed at their disposal. The investigation was as thorough and complete as it was possible for an investigation to be. Secretary Robeson declined to appear through counsel. He managed his own case, answered every inquiry that was put to him; and furthered the investigation in every way that it was possible for him to do so. The majority of the committee, composed of some of the best and purest men in the House, report that "the accuser totally failed to produce a single witness or any proof whatever tending in the slightest degree to maintain any of the charges that he had made, or to throw even a doubt or suspicion upon the personal character of the Secretary, and not a single fact was adduced which could have any tendency to show any such thing." And, again, "not a particle of testimony out of all the mass suspended to the report has any tendency whatever to show any fraudulent act or design on the part of the Secretary." In another portion of the report, the committee characterizes the accusations "as the most extraordinary libel ever published in this country against a public officer and a shameful perversion of the privileges of the press."

Three accusations in particular were made against the Secretary of the Navy: First, in the matter of the engines for the Tennessee; second, in the payment of the Secor claim, and third, the Corliss case. In reference to the engines of the Tennessee the report acquits the Department and the Secretary of the Navy of all blame; declares that no statute was violated; that the very best thing that could have been done for the Government was done. The action of the Secretary in the Secor claim is fully justified and approved, while the charges in the Corliss matter are stamped as utterly false and unfounded. The report is signed by one of the Democrats on the committee, Mr. Warren. Mr. Archer, the other Democrat, dissents from the report on a purely legal point, but acquits Mr. Robeson of all and every charge of corruption.

The chairman of the committee, Governor Blair, has presented a minority report, which will do him no credit now or hereafter. Throughout the entire investigation his course has been characterized by an unmistakable bearing toward Charles A. Dana and the infamous gang with whom he has surrounded himself. Among this band of spies and informers Mr. Blair has sought for truth and honesty and fair play. He has gone down to the level of these hired slanderers and defamers, who degrade journalism and disgrace humanity. Yesterday he presented the report they would have him present.

If he had consulted Mr. Dana, he could not have pleased him better. Gov. Blair has earned his reward, and we wish him joy of the praise and commendation of the New York Sun. Mr. Robeson stands acquitted of every charge that was made against him. The investigation that it was hoped would show guilt and crime on his part, has resulted only in proving his entire innocence, in demonstrating the signal ability and integrity with which the Navy Department is managed.

THE AMNESTY, CIVIL RIGHTS, AND HABEAS CORPUS MEASURES.

The Senate Tuesday night and yesterday morning passed the amnesty bill, a civil rights bill and a bill extending the time within which the President may suspend the writ of habeas corpus. The amnesty bill has already received the assent of the House, and therefore only awaits the signature of the President to become a law. The only persons exempted from its operation are Senators and Representatives of the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Congresses, officers in the judicial, military and naval service of the United States who entered the service of the Confederacy. The number of these gentlemen is, comparatively speaking, very small; and we regret that the measure was not made to embrace every one in the country. This peddling out of pardons is unwise, unrepublican and un-American.

The civil rights bill is not the one which Mr. Sumner introduced, and for which he has been contending so long, but a substitute offered by Mr. Carpenter, not quite so comprehensive in its character and scope. It excludes schools, churches, cemeteries, &c., and limits the operations of the act to hotels, places of amusements, railroads, steamboats and stages. Owing to the early adjournment and the large number of bills on the calendar ahead of it there is very little hope for its passage in the House during the present session.

The passage of the habeas corpus act has carried joy into the ranks of the Liberal Republicans, who think that it forms a good ground of attack against the Administration. The loyal people of the country, however, who read the horrible story of barbarity and crime that is now a part of the official record of Congress, will not fail to see that some such measure was necessary to insure peace and tranquillity at the South.

COLONEL THOMAS A. SCOTT presides over twenty-six railroad corporations, from which he draws the handsome salary of $170,000 per annum, and yet he is not happy. He now aspires to the control of the great Erie road, and finds in the field against him his constant foe, John W. Garrett. The scene of the battle between these two gentlemen is transferred from the committee rooms of the Capitol to Wall street, and instead of Senators and Representatives marshaled on opposing sides, we have immense railroad companies, millionaires and an army of bankers and brokers. The contest seems likely to be the greatest ever fought in the railroad world, and will command the attention not only of America but of Europe.

MR. GREELEY'S ACCEPTANCE.

Mr. Greeley has at last formally accepted the nomination of the Cincinnati convention in a rather lengthy letter, which we laid before our readers yesterday. As a piece of composition it is superior to any political paper that has been printed in some time, with, perhaps, the exception of the address with which the Cincinnati managers prefaced their resolutions. It is written in the usual terse and vigorous style of the editor of the Tribune, every word carefully selected, every idea so clearly expressed that a misconception of his meaning and intent is out of the question. Although Mr. Greeley, in the very beginning of his letter, takes occasion to commend the Cincinnati platform for the style in which it is written, as well as for the sentiments it contains, it must be evident to every one that he has dealt it a most unkind cut in brushing it entirely aside, and substituting a platform of his own in its stead. Whether he intended to treat it in this rude and unceremonious manner we have no means of telling; that he has practically done so is obvious to all.

Looking from a political standpoint at the Cincinnati platform, and at Mr. Greeley's revised, corrected, and, as no doubt the author himself thinks, improved edition of it, we believe that the majority of the people will, even before the campaign has fairly opened, not to say closed, come to the conclusion that both are utter failures. The passage of the amnesty bill yesterday morning by the Senate cuts the very life and soul out of it. The passage of the civil rights bill, upon which, by the way, Mr. Greeley, following the example of his Cincinnati advisers, is strangely silent, cannot but have a depressing influence on the Liberal Republican fortunes. Mr. Greeley commends the platform upon which he has decided to stand as "a platform which, casting behind it the wreck and rubbish of worn-out, contentious and by-gone feuds, embodies in fit and few words the needs and aspirations of to-day." The platform upon which he has just placed himself is already antiquated, so far as the main and only vital idea in it is concerned. There is no longer any controversy about amnesty. All parties are united upon it. It will be embodied in the law of the land and have been forgotten long before the ex-rebel leaders will have an opportunity to show their gratitude for Mr. Greeley by voting for him. Amnesty was the foundation-stone of the Liberal Republican fabric. Its removal brings down the entire structure about the heads of its architects.

There is, however, one significant point in Mr. Greeley's letter, or platform, which is not to be found in that constructed for him at Cincinnati. The tenth of the Cincinnati resolutions reads as follows: "We are opposed to all further grants of land to railroad or other corporations. The public domain should be held sacred to actual settlers." To which Mr. Greeley adds: "The premature construction of which (railroads) is annually plunging us into deeper and deeper abysses of foreign indebtedness." The leading business interests of the country will not look with very much favor on a candidate for the Presidency who solemnly avows principles like these, who serves notice upon our great railroad men that they must build no more roads until they have the money to do it themselves; that they must not borrow at four or five per cent. in Europe, even when by so doing they can in a short time double the value of their investments, develop the resources of States and Territories as large as whole nations, and thereby help diminish the national burdens of taxation. The difficulty is that they cannot borrow money enough in Europe or elsewhere. If Mr. Greeley can succeed in persuading them to the contrary, we shall be very much mistaken.

SOUTHERN POLITICS.

If anything is stranger in the whole history of political caprice than the absurdity of Governor Warmoth, of Louisiana, supporting Horace Greeley for President of the United States, it is the systematic opposition evinced against Governor Clayton, the Ku-Klux hangman of Arkansas and intense Republican Senator from that State, by a delegation of Liberals and Liberal allies who have all winter been hanging around the lobbies and corridors of the Capitol.

The mere fact of the present Governor of Louisiana coming forward to the support of the honest sage of Chappaqua, or the fact that the disappointed but ambitious Liberals of Arkansas should oppose a bold and uncompromising supporter of the Administration, is not at all surprising in itself, but only when we take into consideration the other facts connected therewith.

If Warmoth had not been so often denounced as the most notorious of all the carpet-bag vampires that fed upon the life-blood of the South by the very party who now evoke his aid, and had he not been singled out by the eloquent and indignant Horace as the very embodiment of meanness and rascality in his chapter on carpet-bag rule, (and for which, provided it were true, it must be remembered, the President was in no way responsible,) and had not he, the aforesaid Horace, evoked against him, the aforesaid Warmoth, the virtuous wrath of the American people, we might account for Warmoth's support of Greeley upon some hypothesis known to the laws of politics; but as it is we are forced to consider it unaccountably strange.

If, in the other case, the little batch of Liberals, who seem to be of no particular use at home, and who have so much money and time to spend, and so small a constituency to subserve, had confined their operations within their own ranks, instead of importuning Senators against whom they will naturally be arrayed in the coming campaign, it would have given to their case at least the merit of consistency.

Governor Clayton, it will be remembered, in the dark days of Ku-Klux terror prior to the election of '68, was the only Governor at the South who completely annihilated the Ku-Klux organizations in his State without the aid of Federal bayonets. It is true that one or two of the party who have lent their aid to this opposition faction have heretofore been ranked as staunch Republicans; but if Governor Clayton does not choose to farm out his patronage to the tenants of the great farmer of Chappaqua, what right has any Republican to be offended.

If anything more is wanting to show the political animus in either case it is only necessary to observe in what manner it effects the Democracy. In the case of Warmoth, before the Cincinnati nomination, it would be extravagant to suppose that he was on speaking terms with scarcely a Democrat in the State; now he is even favorably mentioned in Democratic newspapers. As to the Liberal faction opposed to Senator Clayton, it is but necessary to state that they have now accorded to them the hearty sympathy of every Democrat in Congress. Politics makes strange bed-fellows.

THE New York World has a true appreciation of what the really important questions of the day are, and expresses it tersely and elegantly as follows:

"But behind and beneath these special causes of special strikes is the larger universal impulse which, throughout the civilized world, is determining the advent, through peace or war, for good or ill, as may be, of a great radical change in the relations, not of labor with capital exactly—for to use that phrase is to convey an idea at once inadequate and inaccurate—but of the laboring classes with the employing, directing and accumulating classes. It is the dim consciousness—one can hardly call it the perception—of this impulse, of its tremendous power, of its terrible and as yet unformulated scope, which in truth accounts for the little interest taken by thinking men, not in Europe only but in America, in the political questions of our day. The space which these questions occupy in the public eye is felt by thinking men to be out of all proportion to their real importance in connection with the real movement and tendency of our times. It is as it was in the France of the last century, when the court of Versailles and the intrigues and combinations of the king's ministers continued to fill the gazettes and to make the talk of the salons while the future of France and of civilization was working itself out by the light of tallow candles and obscure and smoky clubs."

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.—We would call the attention of delegates elected to the Philadelphia Convention, who have not as yet secured quarters during its session, to our advertising columns of to-day, where will be found to rent very desirable quarters. For further information apply at the Imperial hotel.

THE PRESIDENT OF WILLIAM AND MARY COLLEGE, and the brother of the late Gen. Ewell—Col. Benjamin S. Ewell—has written a letter favoring the re-election of President Grant. He says that the same reasons that influenced him in 1868 to support Gen. Grant influence him now, namely, his confidence in Gen. Grant, which originated in the generous terms given by him at Appomattox to the soldiers of the Confederacy. He believes that Gen. Grant has honestly endeavored to relieve the Southern people to the extent of his ability under the law; and that, if he has not accomplished all that was hoped for or expected, it is because it was impossible. Col. Ewell is further of the opinion that Gen. Grant has done more to heal the wounds of the war than any other man in the Republican party. The closing paragraph in his able and eloquent letter is as follows:

"Of the reasons you of the North have for supporting Gen. Grant perhaps I ought not to speak, yet I will say that if military successes ever merit civil rewards, then is Gen. Grant entitled to all you can give.

"Excepting the important victory at Gettysburg, he was the leader in almost every triumph of the Union arms. Fort Donelson, Vicksburg, with vast stores and upward of 30,000 prisoners, Chattanooga and Missionary Ridge, and the finale at Appomattox court-house, attest this. Though the end was reached by fearful losses, by the wearing out by attrition of the Southern armies, yet such losses were required to discourage and overcome such a people. It was the duty made of ending the war; for had the morale and organization of the Confederate armies not been thus destroyed, war would now exist. That our country has been spared from so continued a calamity all should rejoice; and trusting I have not worn out your patience, I remain yours sincerely."

The words of one so true and devoted to his section are entitled to great weight in the present political crisis.

THE POLITICAL PROSPECT IN CALIFORNIA. A California exchange says:

"The inforcement of Greeley by the Democracy will as demoralize that party in this State that Grant will be safe for from eight to ten thousand majority, and the prospect is good for two Republican Congressmen. Mr. Sargent goes into the Senate, and the rival candidates for the succession to him as a member of the House are Judge Davis and Nathan Porter. Cushing will succeed himself. Hospital will be nominated in one of the districts into which the one he now represents has been divided, and George Ohlton, now a State Senator, is likely to be the Republican nominee for the San Francisco district."
