FOR DELEGATE TO CONGRESS,
NORTON P. CHIPMAN.

FOR SALE.—A nice lot of old white hats just shipped from Vermont. Apply at the Tribune office, in New York.

THE Louisville Democratic convention adjourned yesterday afternoon. It stands by the nomination of O'Conor and Adams.

THE Tribune has not much to say about Vermont. The lesser Democratic organ, the World, is also strangely silent. How sweet to see brothers, &c.

THE OFFICIAL RETURNS of the late election in North Carolina are in at last. Governor Caldwell has a majority of 1,915, while on the vote for Congressmen the Republican majority is 3,200. The total vote cast was 193,562.

CONGRESSMAN NEGLEY writes to a friend in this city that Western Pennsylvania is in a blaze of enthusiasm for Hartranft, and that the Republican outlook is as bright as possible.

MR. GREELEY has contracted with a book publisher in New York to write a book upon statistics. He had better not begin until after the first Tuesday of November. He will know more about statistics then than he knows now.

KILPATRICK is announced to speak in the Greeley cause, for two weeks, in Pennsylvania. All that is necessary to say to our readers is that this prominent reformer spent three weeks on the stump in Vermont.

IN ANOTHER COLUMN we print a letter written by Gen. Boynton, the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, to which we wish to direct the attention of Mr. Doolittle's friends. That eminent reformer, it seems, was quite as deep in Indian as in cotton speculations.

IN THE TOWN OF MORGAN, VT., there are, according to the returns of the late election, 105 Republicans and 1 Democrat, in Mt. Tabor there are 2 Democrats; in Vernon, 3; in Andover, 5; in Baltimore, 3; in Panton, 8; in Waltham, 8; in Elmore, 16, and in Fairlee, 10. Immense gains for Liberalism.

A GREELEY CORRESPONDENT on Newspaper Row sends a dispatch to his paper saying that the Greeley committee here have received trustworthy information to the effect that the Republicans carried Vermont by frauds similar to those in North Carolina, and that the election will be contested.

SPEAKER BLAINE is making a superb canvass in Maine. Having made certain of his own district, he has now gone to assist his friend, Mr. Hale. The Liberals and Democrats have made desperate efforts to defeat Mr. Blaine, but have failed most lamentably, as the result will show in a few days.

THE Tribune of yesterday has not a word to say about Vermont. It was so sure of gain in that State that on the day of election, fearing we would compare the vote with our vote of 1870, when our majority was only 21,000, it insisted that we should go back to 1868, when our majority reached 37,000, and we have gone back to 1868 and yet the Tribune is not happy.

THE DEMOCRATIC CORRESPONDENT of the Associated Press at Wilmington, Delaware, should be attended to by Mr. Simonton. A few days ago he falsely reported that there were large Democratic gains at the city election. The facts are, that the Republicans have a majority in the city council, and that the Democratic candidate for mayor was elected by scratched tickets, and had only seventy-two majority.

THE VENERABLE PETER COOPER, of New York, Mr. Greeley's old and intimate friend, has written a letter to Gen. Dix congratulating him upon his nomination, and taking ground against the Liberal candidate. Mr. Cooper says: "I am entirely at a loss to account for the infatuation that has induced my esteemed friend, Horace Greeley, to allow himself to be the candidate of a party so at war with all that he has written and said in denunciation of the men and the principles that control them."

WHERE WILL the Tribune stand after Greeley's defeat in November? is a question which newspaper men frequently ask one another just now. It is well known that it has lost nearly three-fourths of its Republican subscribers since the meeting of the Baltimore convention, and that it has gained about the same number of Democratic readers. But when the campaign is over its Democratic friends will drop away, and it certainly cannot regain the confidence of the Republicans whom it betrayed. The shrewd men who own the Tribune will in all probability turn out the present Democratic editors, who are filling its columns with abuse of the Republican party, and put good Republicans in their places. That is the only way in which they can possibly save the Tribune.

THE CONVENTION for the nomination of a candidate for Congress in the Second district of Maryland was held two days ago. The contest was very bitter and exciting, the Hon. Stephenson Archer an excellent man, by the way—receiving the nomination on the sixteenth ballot. A delegate named Shaw, in presenting the name of a candidate, gave a statement of facts which is very significant, and shows that the Democracy of Maryland are not united in support of Greeley. Mr. Shaw said that in his county (Carroll) the situation seemed to be deplorable. The name of Horace Greeley failed to inspire the people with any enthusiasm, and unless they obtained the Congress candidate they will be unable to carry their county.

THE West Virginia Democrats are greatly disgusted. The constitution is ratified, and Jacobs, having been elected Governor under it, will hold his office four years.

THE PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

It is less than two months since Mr. Greeley received the Democratic nomination at Baltimore. Since then it cannot be denied that he has lost in strength; that the enthusiasm with which the campaign opened has entirely died away, and that at the present time his prospects are as gloomy as they could well be. The canvass thus far has demonstrated that Liberalism is a sham and a fraud; that the Republican party is substantially undivided. It is true that we have lost a dozen or so of leading Republicans, together with a large number of lesser politicians, but they have failed to carry any one with them into the ranks of the opposition. Mr. Sumner's appeals to the colored men to desert the Republican party have been as the idle wind. Blair, of Michigan, carried no one with him, even in his own State; Banks went solitary and alone from one camp to the other; Farnsworth has not influenced ten votes in Illinois outside of the gang of his personal friends and retainers; Schurz has not been able to make the slightest impression upon the German ranks, while the Democratic leaders have failed most lamentably to deliver the Democratic vote to the ex-editor of the Tribune.

In every election that has been held since last May, when Greeley was nominated at Cincinnati, every appeal to the people has resulted in a Republican victory. First of all, Oregon overturned her Democratic majority and redeemed herself from Democratic rule. North Carolina followed in condemnation of the Liberal platform and the Baltimore bargain. In West Virginia the Greeley men again come out of the battle beaten and discomfited. Vermont has just thundered out, in tones that cannot be mistaken, her repudiation of the measures and the men who are endeavoring to steal into power upon the false pretenses of reform and reconciliation. In addition to these significant reverses we have just witnessed an opposition convention assembled in Kentucky, and nominations made for the Presidency and Vice Presidency.

Now, if we look a little into the future the situation is equally dark and discouraging for Mr. Greeley. Maine votes on the 9th instant, but the battle there is already given up. Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana follow in October, but it is a foregone conclusion that Mr. Greeley cannot carry any one of them. The canvass in Pennsylvania is being conducted under peculiarly disadvantageous circumstances, owing to the treason of some and the disaffection of others, but even with all this in their favor the Liberals can make no impression on the solid phalanx of Republican voters who still stand by the Republican party. New York State was counted upon as certain for Greeley a month ago. To-day it is set down in the doubtful column even by Mr. Greeley himself. Massachusetts, we were assured, would follow the bugle call of Sumner and Banks. Mr. Sumner made the experiment and finds that he cannot carry with him a corporal's guard. Broken down in health and chagrined at his defeat he has left the country, not in all probability to return until Mr. Greeley shall have received the overwhelming condemnation of his countrymen. If we look to the South we find that it is in a better condition to-day, so far as the Republican outlook is concerned, than it has been at any time since the Philadelphia Convention. Extreme Florida is no longer doubtful; the dissensions that threatened to give Louisiana to the Democracy have been healed. Alabama will give her electoral vote to General Grant, as will Arkansas and Mississippi, South Carolina, and in all probability Georgia. North Carolina is assured beyond all doubt in November. If we turn to the Northwest, to Illinois and Wisconsin, and Michigan, or to their sister States, Kansas, Iowa and Minnesota, the situation is equally bright and cheering for the regular Republican party.

It is no wonder after all that as the political barometer stands now Mr. Greeley seems likely to carry a less number of States than Horatio Seymour did in 1868. The fact is, the people are disgusted with the entire campaign so far as the opposition is concerned. Liberalism is an utter fraud and a sham. It represents no principle; it stands for no idea; from first to last it is a transparent political trick. "To beat Grant" is its sole aim and object. It is moved and directed by a set of seedy adventurers, whose only purpose is to get into office. There are, to be sure, a few eminent men in the movement like Mr. Sumner, but the great majority is made up of as contemptible a set of political gypsies as is to be found in any country. To expect reform at their hands is the height of folly; to entrust the Government to their control would be downright insanity. The mistake these men are making is in supposing that the people, who have made during the last ten years such tremendous sacrifices for the country, are now indifferent or insensible to its future. They imagine that calumny and slander and detraction and party raffianism can blind the people to the real issues of the campaign, and that by assuming the garb of virtue they can induce the country to trust them. Every election that has taken place and that will take place from now until November will teach them how absurd and foolish are their expectations.

THE REGISTRATION.

It is the duty of every Republican voter in the District of Columbia to register as such, and we desire to call the attention of the thousands of our friends to the necessity which exists for them to exercise the right given them by law and usage. The election which occurs here on the 8th day of October next will be one of more than usual interest. The Republicans of the District have nominated as their candidate the gentleman who has so ably represented them for the past two years, who is an avowed friend and supporter of the present administration, both national and local, and it is desirable that the returns from the election should demonstrate to the country the fact that the people of this District are so well satisfied with the record he has made that they are willing to trust him for two years more.

There is no question about the election of General Chipman and the election of a large majority of the Republican delegates to the Legislative Assembly, but it is important that the majorities rolled up should be so great as to prove to the nation that the Republicans of this locality have full faith in General Grant, and take no stock in any movement to disrupt the party. To this end a full registration is necessary, and we urge upon all to attend to the matter at once.

The board of registration are now holding a daily session in each Legislative district, having concluded their labors in the Eighth district yesterday. To-day the Ninth district will be visited, and the opportunity given the voters to qualify for the exercise of the franchise.

IN THE HURRY AND EXCITEMENT of the Presidential campaign a resolution, unanimously adopted by the late Republican convention in Massachusetts, favoring female suffrage, has not received that share of public attention to which it is entitled. It is as follows:

"Resolved, That we heartily approve of the recognition of the rights of woman contained in the fourteenth clause of the national Republican platform, that the Republican party of Massachusetts, as the representative of liberty and progress, is in favor of extending suffrage on equal terms to all American citizens, irrespective of sex, and will hail the day when the educated intellect and enlightened conscience of woman find direct expression at the ballot-box."

This resolution is now one of the planks in the Republican platform of Massachusetts, and as such is an issue of the campaign in that State. It is, of course, an immense victory for the female suffragists, and the initial point of what may yet become a most important movement. Nearly all of the old anti slavery leaders in Massachusetts are in favor of allowing women to vote. Among them are Garrison, Phillips, Stanton and Alcott. In the Church we find clergymen of the eminence of Bishop Haven, James Freeman Clarke, W. H. H. Murray and Dr. Jacob Manning. Among the lawyers it counts as its advocates George F. Hoar, Ingersoll Bowditch and Samuel E. Sewall, and in political circles Messrs. Butler, Wilson, Claflin, Loring, Rice and Boutwell. Thomas W. Higginson, Emerson and Whittier also stand upon the same platform. The cause of female suffrage has suffered very much from the Woodhulls, the Claflins, the Tiltons and other disreputable mountebanks and charlatans. If they can be only driven into the obscurity they deserve there is a fair prospect that the question will be fairly and candidly considered by the respectable portion of the people of the country.

WANTED, at the Patriot office, a dictionary, or some one who will undertake to teach its editor the difference in meaning between "terse" and "brief."

THE SPIRIT OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The Three Classes of the Democracy.

[From the Boston Journal.]

There are three classes of Democrats embarked in the present campaign—first, those who heart, lip "accept the situation," as it is called, that is, in good faith abide by the last constitutional amendments and rejoice in the extension of equal rights to all; secondly, those who have been reluctantly driven by the force of events, and the apparent hopelessness of any resistance, into a nominal acquiescence in the fruits of reconstruction; and, thirdly, those who are not only yet saddened with what has been done by the Republican party during the last dozen years, but are determined to undo it at the first opportunity. The first class is relatively very small. Its record in the conventions and other authorized expressions of the party is hardly traceable. It is obvious that if it had had any strength it would have put up a pure Democratic representative for the Presidency, and thus visibly proved what to-day rests only in the assertions of Mr. Sumner and a few interested recruits, that the Democratic party had substantially changed its position on the vital issues before the country.

They were not able to do anything of the kind, and therefore it remained for the other two classes of the Democracy to take control of the party. The lead at first fell upon those whose strongest conviction was that the Republican policy was impregnable—that, incorporated in the Constitution, imbedded in acceptable legislation, made a part of the very progress of the country, it could not be reversed, at present at least, and had better be assented to as the means of getting into power. This was the class of men who contrived at the Cincinnati movement and accepted Greeley as the best thing that could be done under the circumstances. The third class of Democrats, the downright reactionists, were divided. At the South they were generally for Greeley; at the North they hesitated or objected, but at last fell in with the scheme, and are now among its heartiest supporters. The two latter classes go together, and they constitute substantially the Democratic party of to-day; and the reactionists or mischief-makers, forming the positive wing of the organization, are really the controlling force, whose policy is to be feared in the case of success.

Greeley's Financial Lunacy.

[From Senator Carpenter's Cincinnati Speech.]

But, gentlemen, apart from all these questions, nothing could affect the business interests of this country more seriously, disastrously, than the election of Horace Greeley. Here we are a new country, a young and growing people. Our capital is our muscle and our brain, with this sentiment for our possession, with all the opportunities we have to advance our civilization and improve our condition. There are our capital to-day, and these, more than to any other source, we owe to the Administration of General Grant. [Applause.]

Elect Horace Greeley President of the United States on the 5th day of November, and before he can be inaugurated you will see a financial panic, a crash. In this country that will arrest all the projects of improvement and progress, arrest all its railroads that are in process of completion, and the general business of the country. Why! Because you will annihilate the confidence in the Government; you will strike down the public credit; you will pull down up and your securities down. There is no intelligent business man in the country who does not know this. Even the nomination of Horace Greeley affected the public credit. The first report that North Carolina had gone for Greeley affected the public credit. Carry it out, and elect him, and the country would be entombatically ruined before Horace Greeley could get into the White House. [Laughter.]

No, I am not a particle afraid of it. But I have been, I think, over most of the Northern States east of the Mississippi, and I know something about those west of it, and I assure you, gentlemen, that I am just preparing up for the sake of having something to talk about. [Laughter.] I have not the slightest fear. And, above all things, do not suppose I am going to insult your business men of Cincinnati, the great commercial metropolis of the great State in the arch of the Union, by supposing you are going to vote for Greeley [laughter and applause]; but we must suppose something or we would not have anything to talk about.

Greeley's Disreputable Supporters.

[From the New York World before the Baltimore convention.]

Mr. Blair is of the opinion that the strength of the Administration lies wholly in the want of faith in the Democratic leaders, which is felt by the "Northern people," and he thinks the only way by which our party can convince a number of Republicans sufficient to defeat Grant, is that we are honest and faithful in our new departure in to adopt Mr. Greeley as our leader. Mr. Blair personally (which is kind of him) does not doubt our fidelity in this relation, but the "Northern people" do, and their doubts, he thinks, can only be overcome in the made suggested. Mr. Blair will not easily get believers or any such stuff. The "Northern people" who are Republicans are not idiots either; and the notion that Democratic leaders is not to be strengthened by the sudden promotion to leadership of such a convert as Mr. Greeley, backed as he notoriously is by the power which is stigmatized, and was known in the past as "Tammany." The people know that the problem of politics is a problem of votes; that the Democrats are to furnish the ballots to elect Mr. Greeley, and that although the President may fail far below the standard of his supporters, he will not ascend above it. It is mere idiocy to assert that Republicans will form a favorable opinion of the honesty of Democratic leaders only in case they at Baltimore make unexpected and unexpectant Mr. Greeley the figure-head of their ship. The evidence of their insincerity and duplicity then would be clear enough. They would not fail to ask how honest Democrats would adopt as a leader one who has been foremost in fabricating and vindicating the Congressional measures of Grantism, and has not professed repentance of his errors and asked forgiveness. They would say that either Greeley had misled the Democrats, or there was a common conspiracy of political fraud.

Who Are the Reformers?

[From the St. Louis Globe.]

What kind of people are these men who are preaching up the great reform which is to displace the present Administration, and inaugurate a new era of rule by the Tammany ring? They are not numerous; one can count them on the fingers of one's hands. There is Banks of the Red river expedition, and other famous "treats," when Gen. Grant laid out cold during the war, and whose effervescing patriotism in the present campaign in Maine so gets the better of him at Portland that he is obliged to lay by long enough to cannot keep his apothecary to the great disgust of the Maine Liberals. What a mercy it would be for them if some Stonewall Jackson could sweep along that way and relieve the General of his supplies. But the public understand Mr. Banks' reformation pretty well; so let us see about another of these new lights. There is Gen. Kilpatrick, another gallant warrior of the reform army, who has been doing battle for the Tammany cause in Vermont and Maine. This hired soldier, who is fighting the battles of the hybrid party at two hundred dollars a speech, has a record which shines forth brilliantly on the reform path, and suggests a pretty little inference as to what kind of proceeding would mark the career of his employers should they get into power.

Gen. Grant's Character and Services.

[From Senator Morton's New Albany Speech.]

He is a man of exemplary life as a husband and father. His military achievements and services to his country are above valuation, and have made his name one of the most famous in history. He is the great sacrificer. His success in the civil administration has earned the respect of all the world. Who is it proposed he shall be set aside for? Horace Greeley, a man whose whole history shows his antipathy to the Republican party, a man made up of crotchets and hobbies and political gimcracks, and who rides his hobbies to death. His urged the instant resumption of specie payments when it would certainly and speedily have brought on repeated bankruptcy, and favors this absurd fiat policy yet. He would retire the greenbacks, which would surely bring on a crisis.

Senator Morton passed to the tariff question, the attitude of Greeley upon it, and the changeable pretenses of his supporters; argued that the contest was really between two parties: that the Democracy had taken up Greeley, believing he would serve their ends; that their success would be a revival of violence and terror in the South, which already is seen in Missouri, and to-day's dispatches show it in North Carolina.

The National Finances.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Thoughtful and observant men examine the present financial condition of the country with a view to applying a practical test to the question whether President Grant's administration should be continued in power, or be superseded by the suspicious financiers and reactionary politicians to whom Greeley's election would give place. They behold the business interests of the country in a prosperous condition, internal improvements rapidly and profitably developed under the beneficial aid of the general Government, the public taxes and burdens reduced some seven hundred and twenty millions since the close of the war, twelve millions of public debt paid off during the same period, the national credit now established upon a firm basis in the money markets of the world, and public securities equal in value to gold. The result of this examination into the state of the material interests of the nation naturally prompts prudent and conservative men to favor the re-election of Gen. Grant and the continuation of the Republican policy, rather than run the risk of any doubtful experiments by Mr. Greeley and his present associates.

Who is Blanton Duncan?

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

It is stoutly insisted that Mr. Duncan is a man of no political influence. We do not presume to judge of this matter, but if the representation be true, it is only the more remarkable that the call to which only his name was attached should have awakened so general a response.

The Effect of Greeley's Speeches.

[From the St. Louis Globe.]

Like Andrew Johnson, Mr. Greeley never made a speech in his life that survived the following sundown without some adventitious aid; nevertheless, the infatuated drawler is firmly convinced that he is a superior orator, and can never perceive an unscripted platform without an irresistible disposition to climb upon it and spout.
