AN EXTRA REPUBLICAN TO-DAY.

We have made arrangements to place upon the streets to-day, shortly after the presentation of the President's message to Congress, an EXTRA REPUBLICAN, containing the message in full as well as the annual reports of several of the Secretaries and other interesting news matter. The reading public may therefore look out for our lively newsboys about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

MR. TRUMBULL's resignation of the chairmanship of the Judiciary Commitee will be in order to-day.

THE resignation of Austin Blair, as chairman of the Committee on Claims, will be accepted by the House.

THE GREAT QUESTION this week—what is the House of Representatives going to do about the Liberal Republican chairmen of committees? What does Mr. Blaine think?

"THE SUDDEN BREAKING DOWN of Mr. Greeley's physical constitution was doubtless the result of the strain of a political canvass, combined with the fatigue incurred in attendance upon the dying bed of his wife."

Is the bed dead yet, and what did it die of?

"THE HOG OF THE PERIOD" is thus described by the Cincinnati Times, which is an authority on hogs: "The perfect hog must have a small, short head, a heavy jowl and a short, thick neck. His ears must be small, thin, and tolerably erect. No objections to their drooping slightly forward." This is sufficient. Some splendid specimens of the animal are running around town now.

TO JUDGMENT, John D. Farnsworth. You betrayed the Republican party. You maligned and assailed the Administration with all your characteristic meanness. The verdict of your constituents and of the country is that you are guilty. For once show some manliness by resigning your position as chairman of the Post Office Committee.

THE COUNTRY is indebted to the editor of the New York World for the information that there is a huge job in the delivery of letters, because in Baltimore the average compensation paid to carriers averages one cent, whereas in New Orleans it averages five and three fourths. It does not seem to have struck the astute mind of our cotemporary that the rate of wages may be higher in one city than in the other, or that Baltimore may receive more letters than New Orleans. Where is the World's arithmetic man?

GEN. BANER, what are you going to do? Will you resign your chairmanship of the Foreign Affairs Committee?

Mr. Blaine, in the middle of a Congress, Henry Clay, when he was Speaker of the House of Representatives, removed the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs on the express ground that he was not in sympathy with the Administration, and that the President was entitled to have his foreign policy correctly presented on the floor of the House.

WE ARE TOLD by the correspondent of that great journal, the Philadelphia City Item, that "the salary question seems to be awakening a deep interest among the Department officials." This is right. The salary question everywhere generally awakens a a deep interest.

But, seriously, we hope that Congress will condescend to bring its great intellect to bear on the subject this winter. All our officials are too poorly paid, and there ought to be an increase all around. We commend it to the consideration of the House Committee on Civil Service Reform, to the Hon. William D. Kelley and the Hon. Samuel Hooper, who stand at the head of that important body.

GENERAL PORTER has concluded to accept the position of vice president of the Pullman car company, which was tendered him some time ago. In General Porter the army loses an excellent officer, the President a most able and efficient secretary, and the Republican party one of its best and ablest workers. During the last three years and a half he has done good service to the republic, and the best wishes of thousands of people will follow him into his new avocation.

The President has decided to make General Babcock his successor as his immediate confidential friend and assistant. As to his choice, there will everywhere be only one opinion, that of unqualified approval.

THE LAST SESSION of the Forty-second Congress will begin to-day at noon. We are extremely glad to see the faces of our Representatives again on our new beautiful avenues and streets, and we hope they are duly grateful to the Board of Public Works, who have done so much during the last nine months for their comfort, to make their stay with us pleasanter and more agreeable. We would say to them that we have expended a good deal of money, but as we are certain they will all readily acknowledge we have spent it well and judiciously. Washington is to-day one of the most beautiful cities in the world so far as her highways go. She is no longer a by-word and a scorn among the cities of the Union, and has begun to be really worthy of her position as the capital of the republic. It is to be hoped that our all wise national guardians will take these things into consideration, and give us the help which country dealers they should give toward making Washington in every respect a first-class city. Congress undertook to do so in the beginning, but failed most lamentably in the work. When Washington was founded the intention was that it should be built up by the General Government. It took entire charge of our avenues, and exercised entire jurisdiction over them. As years rolled on it halted in the furrow and turned backward and left incomplete the work that it had begun. Now, let Congress come up to the work and do what it should long ago have done. The principal population of Washington is composed of a mere salaried class. Is the General Government going to insist that its poorly paid officials shall build up out of their slender resources, and from their poor compensation, the metropolis of the country? Let Congress treat Washington as France treats Paris, as Austria treats Vienna, as Prussia treats Berlin, as England treats London.

ALABAMA.

Dispatches received yesterday announce the intelligence that Senator Spencer was nominated for re-election to the Senate by the unanimous vote of the caucus of Republican members of the Legislature. This is equivalent to an election; for the Republicans have a majority of at least ten legally elected members of the Assembly, and is a merited tribute to the personal worth and eminent political services of Senator Spencer.

Governor Lewis, it appears, has thrown a wet blanket upon the hopes and aspirations of the revolutionary body, claiming to be the Legislature of Alabama, by informing that august assemblage in effect, that it was practically without a quorum, inasmuch as seats were occupied by persons not elected to fill them, mere interlopers, whose authority to act as legislators could not be recognized by law. It follows, therefore, that the Secession-Democratic farce now being played at Montgomery, will soon be ended, and the legally elected Legislature permitted to assume its legitimate and proper functions.

THE NORTH CAROLINA SENATORIAL CONTEST.

The Senatorial contest in North Carolina will no doubt be decided this week. The Legislature, which has a majority of Democrats, balloted for three candidates last week, Messrs. Merrimon and Vance, Democrats, and the present Senator, Pool, Republican. In the caucus of the Legislature, in which Vance was chosen as the available man, eighteen Democrats, friends of Judge Merrimon, bolted, and cast their votes for him. The first vote stood as follows: Vance 78, Pool 79, Merrimon 18; the next Vance 75, Pool 71, and Merrimon 29; the third ballot Vance 73, Pool 71, Merrimon 33.

To the people of North Carolina the importance of the contest cannot be overestimated. That Senator Pool has served his constituents faithfully, and with fidelity and ability, and has been of invaluable service to the country at large, no one will deny. That his re-election will be hailed with pleasure by the Administration and the country at large nearly all will admit. Mr. Pool is the acknowledged leader of the people's representatives from the South, and wields an influence that is felt. North Carolina is a Republican State, and its representatives at Washington should be in accord with the great principles of that party and of the Administration at Washington.

If the Legislature of North Carolina, in the choice of Senator for the next six years, will cast aside all partisan feeling, and consult their State's best interests, they will elect Mr. Pool to serve them the ensuing term. The present indications are that Mr. Pool will be elected. If such be the case, we shall heartily congratulate the country on the result.

AMNESTY FOR POLITICAL OFFENCES.

A few days prior to the announcement of the death of Mr. Greeley, the veteran and able editor, but poor and unfortunate statesman, the Philadelphia Press contained the following plaintive appeal in behalf of universal amnesty for his late attempt to destroy the Republican party. It was contained in a Washington letter written by Colonel Forney, the able veteran editor of that journal:

"And now that the veteran editor of the Tribune clearly indicates that he is still a Republican, why keep up the war upon him? It cannot hurt him. It cannot help Grant. It may please the small people who have captured a newspaper here and there; but it is the most pitiful of little spites. I hope it will not stir the great old editor to any more anger. He did not steal anything, or commit forgery, nor even murder, and he should stand by his guns."

Mr. Greeley now sleeps the sleep from which there is no waking, and his faults and offences should, as far as possible, be borne to the tomb with his mortal remains. There should be no war kept up on him or his memory. But it is not ungenerous in this connection to criticise the motive which prompted the above appeal. Mr. Greeley conspired with the enemies of the Republican party to accomplish its overthrow, and, with that, the transfer of power in the nation from its hands to those of a party which, in part, if not altogether, had sympathized with the cause of the late rebellion more than with that of the Union in the hour of its terrible trial. In a lesser degree, but with no less apparent bitterness of feeling, the veteran editor of the Press emulated the spirit and action of Mr. Greeley, during the late political campaign, when he attempted to throw the executive power of the government of Pennsylvania into the hands of Mr. Buckalew and the Democratic party. Both these schemes failed of success, for the reason that the sovereign people were true to themselves, their principles, and their country. Neither, however, would have failed if Mr. Greeley or Colonel Forney could have had their way.

Now comes up the question of forgiveness, at the instance of the veteran editor of the Press. Col. Forney, no doubt, thinks if amnesty can be secured for Mr. Greeley, it will be amnesty for Col. Forney and his Press. But Mr. Greeley has passed to his final account, where neither prejudice, passion nor injustice awaits him. He will be judged righteously. The veteran editor of the Press is spared a while longer to meet the judgment of his fellow-men, and it will be strange if they forget and forgive, without works on his part, the stern integrity of the Republicans of Pennsylvania the executive head of that great State would have been given over to the enemies of Republican principles, under an inspiration from him alike disloyal to principle and usage and unpropitious to the public welfare.

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

In another column we print a dispatch from Baltimore in regard to the Electoral College. We are told that numerous telegrams have been received in that city urging that the Electors cast their votes for Mr. Hendricks. To that we offer this suggestion: Why should not the Democrats who have been elected vote for General Grant, and make the election unanimous?

"SENATOR PRATT returned a week ago, and has been attending chiefly to private business."—Tribune Washington dispatch.

It will be a good thing for the country if he continues to attend to his private business for the balance of his life. We think it would be a good thing for himself, too.

Nothing connected with our home, its health, comfort and happiness can justly command more important consideration than the quality and vitality of the air, the element upon which chiefly depends the existence of those most dear to us, our wives and children, who spend the greater part of their lives within doors. Hence, the artificial heat which may make that air impure becomes a subject of paramount consideration. The following are a few of the many buildings where our apparatus is in use: Howard University, Corcoran Art Gallery, Masonic Temple, Supreme Court room, Congressional Library and Rotunda of United States Capitol, Washington School, Freedman's Bank, Patent Office, J.
