BUSINESS HOURS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

During the coming winter, in order to facilitate business coming before him as much as possible, the President will devote from ten to twelve o'clock each day, except Sunday, to the reception of Senators and Representatives, and from twelve o'clock until two each afternoon, except Tuesdays and Fridays, when, Cabinet meetings being held, he will receive by card. The business hours of his office will be from ten o'clock a. m. to three o'clock p. m.

THE poor old French spoliation claims were defeated for the ten thousandth time in the Senate yesterday. Mr. Cameron endeavored to have a day set for their discussion, but in vain.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL was again up in the House yesterday, and finally referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws. There is no doubt that it will be passed during the present session.

THE ONE-TERM amendment to the Constitution was presented in the Senate yesterday by Mr. Sumner and referred to the Judiciary Committee. There is not much probability that it will be acted upon this session.

IT IS TO BE SINCERELY HOPED that the Paris dispatches this morning, announcing the end of the crisis in France, are correct in every particular, more especially in regard to the crisis; and that there will be no more crises in that country for at least ten days. We are sick and tired of reading about them.

KIND-HEARTED FRIENDS in various parts of the country are still pouring in their petitions asking Congress to pass prohibitory liquor laws in this District. While we are possibly in favor of such a law, we think, now that we have a government of our own, we ought to be allowed to have the control of this question.

IN THE BILL which Mr. Merriam introduced yesterday, allowing the organization of national banks without circulation, should become a law it would be followed by some very important advantages, and would not in the least interfere with the present national banking system. The Treasury Department, it is understood, favors such a measure.

GEN. BANKS shook hands across the bloody chasm yesterday by offering a bill increasing the President's salary after the 4th of March, 1873, to fifty thousand dollars per annum. We do not think we err when we say that the propriety of an increase is conceded by the entire country, irrespective of party. We hope it will become a law before the session closes.

THE credentials of the Hon. O. P. Morton, as Senator from Indiana for the term ending March, 1879, were presented in the Senate yesterday. Mr. Morton was first chosen to the Senate as the successor of Henry S. Lane, and took his seat March 4, 1867. There is no man in either House of Congress who has had a larger share in shaping the legislation of the last six years than Mr. Morton. He has won a foremost if not the foremost place among our public men, and is deservedly popular in every portion of the country.

MR. LYNCH, OF MAINE, introduced a bill yesterday providing that the President shall in future be elected by the people direct; in other words, that the electoral college shall be abolished. The subject has lately been discussed a good deal in the newspaper press, and public opinion seems to be pretty equally divided upon the question. It is safe to say that, although the present method of electing a President is clumsy and in many respects objectionable, the country is hardly prepared for a change—not, at least, until some greater safeguards are taken to protect the purity of the ballot-box.

GEN. CHIPMAN, in the House yesterday, introduced the bill presented by him last session for the endowment of the public schools in this District. It is really difficult to see what objection can be urged against its passage, and we are certain that none will be so soon as it is reported to the House. The District of Columbia is almost the only portion of the Union that has not received aid for educational purposes. Montana has received over four million acres of the public lands; Dakota has received five millions; Nevada, nearly four millions; Oregon, three and a half millions; Nebraska, nearly three millions; Kansas has received public lands worth about one million dollars; Missouri and other States almost as large amounts. Simple justice demands that the District should be put on an equality in this respect with the other portions of the Union. The school tax here is very large, and larger than the people ought really to be called upon to bear.

WANTED—A LEADER.

The following is one of numerous letters that we have received, in regard to the unaccountable action of the House in permitting the Liberal Republicans to remain at the head of important committees:

FREDERICKSBURG, VA., Dec. 7, 1872.

I heartily and cordially congratulate you on your stand ("Wanted a Leader") against the assistant Democrats. We who live here, where a bitter warfare was waged against us, understand how to appreciate your policy, if weak-kneed Republicans in the House of Representatives do not. Is James Brooks running the Republican party now? Don't stop until you accomplish the removal of Banks, Blair and Farnsworth.

Hastily, M. J. G.

So far as Mr. Banks is concerned the action of the House is conclusive; but if Mr. Farnsworth and Mr. Blair will not have the manliness to follow his example, the House ought to be able to find some way to mark its condemnation of their treachery.

THE ERA OF GOOD FEELING.

We hear and read a good deal just now about the era of good feeling and the necessity of forgetting the late canvass and the strife and animosity that it engendered. In the main we agree with these doctrines, and would be only too glad to see all parties united in the support of the Administration for the advancement of the best interests of the country. But where is the evidence that our late opponents are any less bitter against the Administration now than they were two months ago? In the columns of the Chicago Tribune, one of their principal organs, we find the Republican leaders in the Senate denounced as savagely and violently as ever. Mr. Morton and Mr. Chandler and Mr. Cameron are painted as monsters of corruption, who are plotting the destruction of their country. If we turn to the New York Tribune we find that the villainous spirit that breathed through it since the meeting of the Cincinnati Convention finds almost as full and free an expression as ever. The same criticism may be made on all the other journals that were against us in the late campaign. What evidence has Gratz Brown given that he is less opposed to the Republican party now than when he received the Liberal Republican nomination? Where is there any evidence in any section of the country? We find it nowhere excepting among a few politicians, here and there, who follow partisanship for the sake of the plunder. What sort of an era of good feeling is it that Warmoth exhibits in Louisiana, that the Liberals and Democrats of Alabama present to us? It is all very well to say that the Republican party is so strong that it can afford to be magnanimous; but this is the mere sentiment of politics, and a great party never lived, and never can live, on sentiment. When those who deserted from our standard in the late struggle, and did their utmost to destroy the Republican party, shall show some sign that they have repented, it will be time enough to talk about forgiving them. But until they do, true political foresight and wisdom command that we shall not make party lunatics of ourselves.

THE EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

Comptroller Tayler, in his letter to the Secretary of War, which will be found in another column, raises one or two nice questions which will probably require the aid of that universal regulator, Congress, to adjust. In the first place, he rules that two or three classes of persons employed by the Government are not entitled to the additional compensation allowed by the acts of June, 1868, and of May, 1872. It seems that last September the President's interference was invoked in the matter, whereupon he addressed a communication to the Secretary of War, who in turn referred it to the First Comptroller, with a request that he would give the grounds of his action on the subject. In the second place, he raises another question, namely, to what extent the Comptrollers are bound by an opinion of the Attorney General, or whether they are bound at all. The First Comptroller in fact goes further than this, and declares that neither the Department of Justice nor any other Department or officer has any authority whatever to reverse a decision of the Comptroller. Now, this is a pretty row all around, and what is to be the end of it we are certain that we do not know. The easiest way out of the muddle that we can see is for Congress to pass another law, telling the Comptrollers exactly what they intended in their former enactments, and direct the Secretary of War to detail a file of soldiers from Fort Foote to keep the peace between the Comptrollers and the Department of Justice.
