During the winter, in order to facilitate business coming before him as much as possible, the President will, from ten to twelve o'clock each day, except Sundays, receive Senators and Representatives, and from twelve o'clock until two each afternoon, except Tuesdays and Fridays, when Cabinet meetings being held, he will receive by card. The business hours of his office will be from ten o'clock a. m. to three o'clock p. m.

THE PRINTING OF THE CONGRESS DEBATES.

In the House yesterday the Hon. Mr. Beatty, chairman of the House Joint Committee on Printing, called the previous question upon the resolution of the committee providing for the printing and publication of the debates for the next six years, but the House, desiring that the subject should be fully discussed, as it is proper that it should be, refused to second the demand by a vote of 72 nays to 64 yeas.

We are more convinced than ever that the House is determined that the printing and publication of its debates shall be done at the lowest possible figure. We have been induced to enter into this contest for the printing of the Congressional Globe entirely through the action of Congress. At the last session a majority of members were convinced that the cost of the publication was entirely too high, and passed an act throwing the work open to competition. Among others we competed, and, as the result shows, are the lowest bidder. The committee have unanimously reported in favor of awarding us the contract. We are anxious to do the work, and know that we can perform it at the figures we have presented. Every obligation required by the committee has been complied with, and if we fail in any way our bondsmen are perfectly responsible.

We await the result in entire confidence, for there can be no excuse for giving away nearly one hundred thousand dollars a year of the people's money for the next six years.

BANKRUPT LAW.

The Senate yesterday gave another evidence of its kindly feeling towards the South, especially "Old Virginia," by adopting House bill declaring Lewis' amendment to the bankrupt law constitutional. It will be remembered that the Hon. John F. Lewis, of Virginia, has for the past two years been endeavoring to get a bill securing to the people of his State the $2,500 exemption allowed by their State constitution which was declared unconstitutional by their Democratic Court of Appeals. This action of a Republican Congress ought to satisfy the people of Virginia that the Republican party is the only party from whom they can expect any material aid. The passage of this bill is due to the energy and ability with which Senator Lewis has unceasingly urged it. Few, if any, States have a nobler or truer Senator than Hon. J. F. Lewis. He enjoys the confidence of the Administration.

SENATOR POMEROY.

Each succeeding development in the Pomeroy investigation adds to the belief that he was the victim of a foul conspiracy. The unblushing effrontery of the witnesses against him, who admit that they were guilty of the grossest violations of all the principles of even ordinary decency and manhood, have aroused a decided sympathy in his behalf. It is now understood that proof is forthcoming to show that a clique of gamblers in Kansas had made a pool and wagered $50,000 that Pomeroy would be defeated. Yorke and his delectable crowd of followers were the tools of the gamblers in affecting the success of the gamblers' wager.

SPEAKER BLAINE.

The report of the Poland committee yesterday completely exonerated Mr. Speaker Blaine from all the charges made against him in the credit mobilier transaction. In the late canvass Mr. Blaine's opponents made an unscrupulous use of the slander in his district, but his constituents showed their confidence in his honesty and integrity by giving him a larger majority than he ever before received. They, in common with the Republican party everywhere, will rejoice that that confidence has not been misplaced.

THE CREDIT MOBILIER REPORT.

Judge Poland presented the report of the credit mobilier committee yesterday. In another column we print it almost in its entirety, omitting only the mere technical details and the references to English and American precedents in regard to the jurisdiction of the House over its members. The two principal points in the report are:

First. The acquittal of the members of the House to whom Mr. Ames sold stock; and Second. The recommendation that Mr. Ames and Mr. Brooks be expelled.

In regard to the first proposition the report of the committee will be commended by all fair-minded and unprejudiced persons. There is, of course, a class of people who will denounce it, and impugn the motives of the committee. We shall be told that it is a mere whitewashing document; that those gentlemen should have been condemned and sentence pronounced upon them. From the beginning of the investigation, from the time the charges were first made in the heat and bitterness of the late canvass, the opposition press has constituted itself prosecutor, judge and jury in their cases, and without permitting them to adduce a particle of evidence in their defence has passed summary judgment upon them. To expect that it will alter its course now and allow the calm and judicial verdict of the committee charged with the investigation to influence it in any way is to expect something more than a miracle. They have condemned these men in advance, and they will insist upon their execution. But, as we said, the honest public opinion, to which journals as well as legislatures must ultimately submit, will sustain the report of the committee and indorse its verdict of acquittal. The reputations of men like Mr. Garfield, Mr. Scofield, Mr. Dawes and the other gentlemen are too strong to be swept away by a mere blast of partisan rancor and hostility. The charges against them are upon their very face absurd and ridiculous. It is true they desired to make a little money, but that they bargained to sell their influence in Congress for the absurdly low sum which the evidence shows they were offered or received is not worthy of serious consideration.

In regard to the second proposition of the report there will, we apprehend, be a difference of opinion, not only in the House, but in the country. The judgment visited upon Mr. Ames and Mr. Brooks is simply terrific, and we are [illegible] certain that it is entirely deserved [illegible] by the testimony. The strongest evidence against Mr. Ames is the evidence in his own letters and in the reported conversations with members of the credit mobilier company. There is strong presumptive proof that in offering stock to members of Congress, and in endeavoring to induce them to invest in the credit mobilier, he intended to strengthen the Union Pacific railroad interest in Congress, but where is the proof of the bribery? It is a presumption, and only a presumption. We do not know Mr. Ames; have never spoken to him, and have not been asked by any one, directly or indirectly, to say a word in his favor; but we can conceive a condition of affairs in which Mr. Ames' conduct in this whole matter is far from being as reprehensible as the committee have made it to appear. The case of Mr. James Brooks is peculiarly unfortunate. He evidently feels that the committee have not treated him fairly, and have condemned him without a due consideration of all the testimony in his favor. The whole subject is now before the House, and we have confidence enough in that body to feel that it will not yield, on the one hand, to the clamors of a prejudiced press, falsely called public opinion, or, on the other, to partisan feelings and animosities, which in this case are entirely out of place.

IT IS TO BE HOPED that the Committee on Appropriations will not fail to recommend an appropriation for the Anacostia bridge. Washington is in a great measure dependent for its market produce upon the section of country upon the other side of the Eastern branch, and travel over the present bridge is positively dangerous to life.

IN the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was partially considered in the House yesterday, favorable action was taken upon several District appropriations, the items of which will be found in our regular Congress report.

SECRETARY BOUTWELL says that he expects to remain in office until his term expires, March 4 next, and that the report to his resignation is not true.

President and Mrs. Grant dined with Speaker Blaine and family on Monday evening.

The Misses Poore's reception is always enjoyable, and among the most largely attended of the week.

Miss Georgie Boutwell will receive for her mother, Mrs. Secretary Boutwell, to-day, at No. 813 Twelfth street.

Mrs. Cresswell, assisted by lady friends, will continue her reception to-day at her elegant residence, No. 1829 I street.

Mrs. Attorney General Williams holds another of her delightful receptions to-day at her residence, No. 1812 I street.

Mrs. ex-Senator Howell received yesterday, and was favored with the calls of a large number of the elite of the capital.

Mrs. Dr. Bliss, assisted by her daughter, Miss Bling, and guest, Miss Seyfert, were at home to a large number of callers yesterday.

Mrs. Secretary Delano, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. John S. Delano, holds her weekly reception at No. 1200 K street to-day.

Mrs. Col. McCoy and daughter, assisted by their guests, were at home yesterday, and the recipients of a large number of callers.

Mrs. Senator Cole, Mrs. Cresswell, Mrs. Hallet Kilbourn, Madame Boulignay and Judge Embry were among the pleasant people we met calling yesterday.

Mrs. Judge Embry, assisted by lady friends, will receive to-day at her new and handsome home on I street. Mrs. Embry is one of the most entertaining ladies in society, and her receptions are always very enjoyable.

Mrs. D. C. Cox's reception was one of the pleasantest we attended yesterday. The lady entertains in an unaffected manner, and her conversation is always enjoyable. She was very prettily attired, and received many calls from the leaders of society at the capital.

Mr. James Davis and Miss Missouri Ricketts will be married on Thursday evening next. The ceremony will take place at the residence of the bride's parents, on I street, at 9:30, when the happy couple will leave on the late train for a trip through some of the Southern States.

Mrs. Judge Fisher, assisted by her daughters, the Misses Fisher, and by the amiable Mrs. Chas. Fisher, entertained a large number of people at her reception yesterday. The family of Judge Fisher constitutes one of the pleasantest circles to visit, either in this or the adjacent city.

A number of our society ladies went to the Capitol yesterday morning to witness the excitement, and the length of the proceedings prevented their return in time to receive callers. Among them were Mrs. Judge Boardman Smith, Miss Nellie Smith, Mrs. and Miss Weister, and Mrs. and Miss Beck.

The ladies of the Metropolitan hotel have issued cards for a hop on Monday evening next. Dancing will take place in the dining-room, and a fine orchestra has been engaged for the occasion. The previous hops given at the Metropolitan have been very pleasant, and that of Monday evening next will doubtless prove equally enjoyable.

Probably the largest reception held yesterday was that of Mrs. Hutchinson, in her new and elegant residence on K street. The extensive parlors were filled during the afternoon by the elite of the city, among the visitors being a large number of young people drawn together by the attraction of dancing. Weber's orchestra was stationed in the hall, and discoursed delicious dancing music, while in the reception room was spread a generous refreshment table, at which the guests were refreshed after Terpsichorean exercise. Mrs. Hutchinson received her friends just inside the front parlor entrance, and extended to all who came a graceful and cordial welcome. The hostess is becoming a great favorite in Washington society, a majority of whom appear to regret that the lady's receptions are brought to a close, just as she and they are becoming so fully appreciated. Mrs. Hutchinson was attired in a rich and stylish costume tailor silk, elaborately trimmed with Honiton lace. She was assisted by a bevy of beautiful young ladies, among those being her sister, Miss Anna C. Hale, Miss Cole, Miss Whiting, Miss Gray and Miss Georgie Kilbourn.
