REGENERATION IN JOURNALISM.

A cotemporary, referring to a recent statement in a New York journal in which charges of corruption were preferred against the publisher of a Washington paper, said: "If a Washington newspaper was subsidized, name it. * * The character of the Washington journals is as dear to their owners as the character of New York city papers is to their proprietors." Now, here is a sentiment which we can heartily and wholly indorse. There has been entirely too much unjust and unfounded criticism of the Washington press by the country, and especially by the New York city papers. From time to time we have been compelled to read the most reckless and unfounded charges in the columns of papers which could not, if they were called upon to do so, succeed by any possibility in establishing the truth of their assertions in a court of justice. It is high time that these slanders should be brought to an end, and that the journals of Washington should resolutely stand together in defence of the character and reputation that is, as our immaculate cotemporary says, as dear to them as to anybody else.

We have during the last few years been shocked and scandalized by these painful attacks, and have often wished that we could see some means of arresting them. For instance, only within a few months certain journals in some of our sister cities have dared day after day to indulge in the most reckless abuse of one or two of our city journals. With an utter disregard of truth and common decency they have thrown in our faces charges of bribery and corruption of the most flagrant character. Special correspondents on Newspaper Row have voraciously seized upon stray morsels of evidence, or what purported to be evidence in the Credit Mobilier transactions, charging that ten thousand dollars were paid for some service or another, we forget what. But that is not all. We have been told of corrupt practices in the North and the South—all having their headquarters in Washington offices—stretching away into the Carolinas out to the Northwestern States, and even unto the plains among the Indian tribes and settlements. We have been told about claims and contracts until we are positively sick and tired of them. We have had reports of investigating committees of Congress attempting to prove that the pure and spotless publishers of a Washington newspaper had been paid so many dollars a line for the expression of editorial opinion. All this is exceedingly painful. But it is not all. We have been broadly told that Washington journals have been bought and purchased to subserve all manner of corrupt schemes; to run this man for the Presidency or pull that man down; in fact there is no manner of political wickedness that has not been laid at the doors of the press of this city, and why or wherefore it should be so we have always been at a loss to understand.

It is a great comfort and consolation, however, to know that a determined effort is to be made to repel and repudiate these charges; to introduce a new era in our journalism—an era of purity and regeneration and spotlessness; that in future the wholesale libels upon the press of Washington should not be allowed to go unanswered and unrefuted. In the consciousness of purity and guilelessness we are certain that we shall be able to build up a new name and a new fame; that the wickedness that was hitherto said to have obtained here shall give place to an altogether different condition of affairs, and that the heart-rending stories about this and that wickedness shall give place to sweet legends of virtue and goodness and beneficence. The change is a blessed change indeed. The world is growing better and better every hour. The sinners of to-day become the saints of to-morrow. There is, we are told, joy in heaven when one erring one is converted. How great must be the exultation when a whole officeful of them turn into the narrow pathway to which it was feared they would remain forever strangers.

MR. POOL AND THE REPUBLICAN.

We have received a communication from one A. E. Redstone, a mail agent on one of our Southern roads, who signs himself "President of the National Labor Council," which is too lengthy for publication in our crowded columns. In fairness to the writer, however, we explain that the burden of his letter is a charge that our criticisms of Ex-Senator Pool (Mr. Redstone calls them "assaults") have been prompted by a desire on our part to punish that person for having voted in the Senate against the bill to give the printing of the Congressional debates to the proprietor of the REPUBLICAN. This is untrue, and only deserves a contradiction because it possibly may attract attention in quarters where the truth is not known. We measured Mr. Pool long ago and found him to be, intellectually and morally, a very diminutive individual. We regretted that the Republicans of North Carolina were weak enough to allow themselves to be deceived by him, but so long as his incapacity and thorough selfishness produced no serious results we were satisfied to remain quiet. When his mismanagement of last summer's election became apparent, however, and certain other matters in connection therewith came to our knowledge, we felt impelled to bear with his pretensions no longer. After his defeat, which was simply disgraceful, he came to us to seek our aid in support of his claims for a certain position very near the President. In fact, he asked us to help him into a Cabinet position. Of course we refused. The present Cabinet suits us very well, and certainly such a failure as Mr. Pool would not suit us better. If we had been in the habit of tendering advice regarding appointments, which we were and are not, we would have recommended that he be not appointed. But our refusal incensed him to such an extent that he threatened dire vengeance. He possibly "stopped" his paper—such people as a rule do not like the REPUBLICAN—and he certainly did vote against our bill. Other Republicans, better men than he ever dreamed of being, and men for whom we have the warmest admiration and respect, did the same thing. All this did not kill us. We still live as Mr. Pool knows. Here is the history of our connection with Mr. Pool in a nutshell, and so small in compass that the ex-agents of certain railroad monopolies, whose agencies expired when the new Senators from North Carolina took their seats, may find room to copy it in the columns of their own newspapers. We are content with this answer to Mr. Redstone's charge, and believing him to be an honest man we think it will satisfy him also. It will prove to him, at least, that Mr. Pool has not given him all of his confidence, and possibly open the eyes of himself and friends to the truth of our charge that Mr. Pool is an office-hunter by trade, and a most unscrupulous one at that.

One of the Best Papers Outside of New York.

[From the N. Y. Post of the 29th ult.]

Of the merits of the REPUBLICAN's claims for the printing of the Congressional debates we do not speak advisedly. We remember, at the time, we hoped it would secure the contract, because it is one of the best newspapers out of New York.

THE NORFOLK ELECTION.

We have received several communications from friends in Virginia referring to the recent municipal elections in that State, which we regret we cannot find room for in our limited space. We cannot forbear some allusion, however, to facts, which have been vouched for by competent and trustworthy gentlemen, connected with the Norfolk election. One writer beseeches us to "call attention to and denounce the Democratic party for its intimidation of Republican voters and its outrages at the polls." While we are willing to respond to this request we fear that simple denunciation will be of no avail, as the Democratic or sham Conservative sensibilities are not to be reached by mere denunciation. Other writers give us accounts of brutal assaults at the polls, "led on by policemen, the paid firemen of the city, and other bullies in the employ of the Conservatives," and say that the ballot-boxes at several of the polls were stuffed, on the discovery of which enough Republican or People's tickets were taken out to make the number of votes tally with the poll-list; "colored voters were arrested and lodged in jail on mere pretences to prevent them from voting;" "some were arrested on the ground that they were not citizens, when it was well known that they were, and when the mayor acknowledged that they were next morning," and that "Mr. Gardner, a Republican, was set upon and beaten by a crowd of roughs, including one of the harbor masters of the city, in the presence of a police commissioner, merely because he (Gardner) had truthfully exposed the source of a dastardly attack with a stone upon Mr. John F. Desendorf, a leading Republican, and appraiser of customs for the port." These brief extracts show the tenor of several communications, and at the same time also show the utter disregard by the Conservative whites of the rights which belong to the poorest voter, and which it should be the proudest effort of the intelligent classes to protect. In other words, we have here a convincing exposure of the shameful methods by which the Conservatives seek to obtain control of the State, and a most damning answer to their boasted friendship for the poorer classes. If they expect to win the support or confidence of the blacks under such circumstances they are sadly mistaken. But that is not their object. They may protest that it is with all the emphasis that a "high-toned Southern gentleman, incapable of a lie" can command. We know better, and the blacks know better. Their real motive is to combine the blacks by such provocations as these in exclusive organizations against the old white leaders. When this is done they raise the cry of "a war of races," and by appealing to the prejudices of their more ignorant white brethren they succeed in retaining the party division of color, the disruption of which is threatened at each succeeding election where intelligent discussion is allowed. In short the Conservative supremacy in Virginia can only be maintained by fraud and violence, or by arousing those prejudices of the human heart which revolt against the first principles of freedom, and which only find gratification in acts of tyrannical oppression.

THE POOR CHILDREN OF THE DISTRICT.

The proper employment and education of children is a subject for grave consideration, and one which should be brought to the attention of our law-makers, both local and national, without delay. In many of the Northern States there are laws providing that children under fourteen years of age shall not be compelled or required to work the entire year round, but shall have opportunities to attend school at least three months out of the twelve. Massachusetts has a compulsory law of school attendance, which, however, is almost wholly neglected—a fact which probably demonstrates its injustice. All of these provisions are, of course, intended to be applicable only to those who, it is natural to expect, will either profit by our public school system and "rise in the world," or remain as they were brought into it, dependent upon the employment of others in manual capacities. It is hardly fair to say that our criminals are recruited from this class, as we know that many of them are men and women of education, and some of them of natural refinement. Nevertheless it is true that the majority of the prisoners confined in our jails are ignorant people, born of ignorant parents, and it is an acknowledged truism that vice and ignorance go hand in hand. The simplicity of ignorance and its innocence are the rare exceptions, only to be found in the primitive surroundings of the country districts. Hence it is that lawmakers, while hesitating or neglecting to legislate upon this important topic, are guilty of a crime against posterity, and one which their own children will deeply and earnestly regret. We have in Washington a peculiar population, apparently pledged by the customs of centuries to menial employment. The rapidity with which some of them have surmounted these customs gives evidence that others, with proper opportunities and under favorable circumstances, may do the same. It is a lamentable fact that many of them are ambitionless, and that our streets are filled with their vagrant offspring. Bright and intelligent as newsboys or bootblacks and house servants, they do not necessarily become criminals, but they are very apt to, and when they do they are of the most troublesome character. And what is true of them is also true of their white fellow-citizens. We cannot conscientiously advocate any system for the correction of this glaring evil which would take from the parents one jot or title of lawful and proper control of their children; but we insist that the future safety of the community demands some action for its repression. Let the proper committees of our Legislature take hold of the matter at once, and in the meantime we suggest to the theorizing humanitarians, who abound so plentifully, that here is a subject for practical work. He is the best citizen who provides to the best of his capacity for the good of his fellow-men, and what greater reward is there on earth than the satisfaction of having earned the title of "best citizen?"

AARON BURR's remains rest under an elegant monument near the school of his boyhood, at Princeton, New Jersey. Mount Vernon, the tomb of the Father of his Country, is in sad repair. The bones of the martyred Lincoln are exposed to the ravages of the weather at Springfield, Illinois, and his tomb is crumbling in pieces. Not a stone has been added to the national Washington monument for nearly a quarter of a century. Jefferson and Monroe sleep with the simplest tablets to mark their last resting-places. A shaft to the memory of John C. Calhoun stands in the most aristocratic cemetery in Charleston, South Carolina. So long as we can point to these remembrances of those eminent patriots, Burr and Calhoun, who shall say that republics are ungrateful or that ours is a country of "stub-tail monuments?"

FEARS ARE ENTERTAINED that the epizootic will soon reappear. It is stated that several horses in New York have already exhibited symptoms which threaten a renewed development of this terrible disease. It is strange that, in view of our recent sad experience from its ravages, our veterinary surgeons have failed to discover a certain or even partially effective preventive, and we are compelled to sit quiet in view of its probable reappearance, utterly powerless for even the slightest precaution. Perhaps this is because our veterinary surgeons are not properly qualified. We know that they are able to cure our thoroughbreds, racers and even draft horses of the ordinary ills which horse flesh is heir to, but they have certainly failed in their efforts to subdue the epizootic.

A "STERLING ORGAN."—Words of commendation from a political opponent are rare indeed, and especially from such an ardent supporter of the opposition as the Staunton (Va.) Vindicator. We therefore appreciate the kindly spirit which prompted the following compliment extracted from its columns:

"Really it is a pity that that sterling organ, the Washington REPUBLICAN, has not a large circulation in Virginia among the whites. There is no palaver about it, and it says right out what it wants and what it would do if it had power."

The Republican an Independent Journal.

[From the Sunday Gazette.]

The DAILY REPUBLICAN of Wednesday has an incisive and forcible editorial on independent journalism, illustrated with pertinent comparisons relative to the New York Herald and Tribune, responsive to the Capital.

THE Alta California has the following sensible remarks upon the Louisiana question: "How absurd, how unjust to blame the President for doing that which his critics and chief, under the Constitution, obliged him to do, and which not to have done would have been a violation of both. He did only what the exigencies of the case seemed to require, and used, though the only means within his power, and as quietly and unobtrusively as possible. It was not his business to question the wisdom of Durell's decision, but it was his duty to act in accordance with it, however much he may have doubted its law or its wisdom. There are others, many of them, and Republicans at that, who do not believe that he decided properly. But it stands, and is a legal interpretation and decision until overturned by higher legal and judicial authority. Had President Grant done otherwise than he did do, how the politicians, who now blame him for what he did, would have accused him of overruling the Constitution and laws and courts, of placing his own will above legal decisions, and as turning the Government into a despotism. Why cannot Democrats and Republicans divest themselves of party prejudice, and discuss this and other questions upon a basis of facts, truth and reason? We do not for a moment believe that either of the political parties desire to ruin the country, nor that any member of either would intentionally do so."

THE St. Louis Democrat wants a "national hangman." We put in nomination and shall support, to the best of our ability, J. B. McCullough, managing editor of the Democrat, for the position. During the last four or five jerks "Mack" has "executed" more politicians than any other man in the country.

THE New York World and the Chicago Tribune are endeavoring to forecast the political future, particularly so far as the Democracy is concerned. Strange to say neither has a word to say about Cincinnati and Baltimore.

Don Piatt Promises to be Good.

[From the Capital.]

The daily REPUBLICAN says it did not refer to such papers as the New York Herald in its denunciation of independent journals. It meant not that sort of independent journals, but another sort. We are glad to be enlightened. There seems to be, then, several sorts of independent journals, and the bad ones are those opposed steadily to the Administration and the REPUBLICAN. To be a good, independent journal you must distribute praise and blame equally, and not be very strong in either. In one issue, for example, you may say Brother Harlan is a depraved imbecile, and in the next you will assert that there is a tradition afloat that some time in the dim past Brother Harlan was an innocent preacher of the Gospel. But if one steadily and persistently asserts that old Harlan is wicked and not to be entitled, then one seems to be independent. Well, we will try to practice on this knowledge. We want to be a good, independent journal, we do.

☞ ATTENTION. Spring is coming with its lovely breeze and charming weather, but is bringing also many diseases more or less alarming, yet easily overcome or prevented if necessary precautions are taken in time. There is no season in the year when the whole system needs more to be invigorated by some medicine which will purify the blood and give to the organs the strength to throw off the effects of the warm days so prostrating and weakening. Biliousness and sometimes chills follow this general debility, and those who do not pay attention to the first symptoms become really sick and affected with some of these pernicious diseases, such as fevers of all kinds, especially what is called spring fever, bilious headaches, diphteria, &c. A great many persons do take the precaution we speak of; but we would not call one to the attention of the public on the great importance of selecting the proper remedy. The body requires not only a stimulant, but above all a medicine, always harmless, and powerful to cure and a perfect knowledge of the human system; for this reason Dr. L. O. BERTRAM'S LONG-LIFE BITTERS are adapted to all cases of this kind. They are prescribed also in Europe, where no patent-medicine can be sold without the Medical Academy's approval, as the best tonic, regulator and purifier. apr-tf SOLD EVERYWHERE.
