THE RUMOR is again current that Judge Richardson will soon resign his place as Secretary of the Treasury. This time the reason given for it is that he will accept a position which has been tendered to him in connection with an American Banking-house in Paris.

THE DISTRICT is putting on many cosmopolitan airs, among the most recently adopted of which is the custom of advertising through the "Personal" columns of the press. A reference thereto in the REPUBLICAN will show that this department of our paper is beginning to attract attention.

A CASE OF CHOLERA is reported as having occurred in Georgetown yesterday. There is no occasion for alarm regarding the report, as it has not been ascertained there is any danger of an epidemic. It is well, however, that every precaution should be taken, and especially is it necessary that our people shall carefully guard against the use of vegetables that are not fresh.

THE Washington correspondent of the New York World is at his old trick of manufacturing news about the Administration. One of his latest efforts is a dispatch stating that "President Grant and Col. Mosby have combined to influence the Republican party of Virginia to support Henry A. Wise for Governor." This is untrue. President Grant has, however, "combined to induce the Republican party of Virginia to support" his own nominee at the Lynchburg convention.

PERSONS ignorant of the facts declare that the pardon of the South Carolina Ku-Klux preacher, Elzell, was procured on the ground that he was not a regular member of the Order, but joined it for the purpose of inducing the leaders to abandon their criminal ways. The truth is that Elzell was an exceedingly dangerous man, and clothed with the influence of his sacred calling, did more than any one man in the State to keep the Ku-Klux together. Now that he is released from "Federal" power, it is probable that he will be tried by the State authorities for embezzling Sunday school funds.

CHURCH EXEMPTION.

We yesterday gave space to a lengthy communication in reply to our remarks in Tuesday's issue on the subject of exempting church property from taxation. In the outset let us remark that our correspondent appears to agree with us in regard to the injustice involved in special assessments, which throw the entire burden for improvements in front of a church edifice, or other church property, on the few people who chance to own property on the same square; at least, he suggests that "if this taxation bears more heavily upon some than upon others," as it notoriously does, it should be "generally distributed, and not confined to those who live on the same square where a church is located."

That a clergyman connected with a church which, throughout the greater part of Christendom, has for many centuries enjoyed the support of the State, not in pecuniary matters alone, but even went to the extent of enforcing the acceptance of its doctrines, should incline towards a system which retains some remnant of State patronage, as against one which leaves the church entirely to its own resources, is of course natural enough; and therefore we could not have expected our correspondent to agree with us in the opinion that the exemption of church property from taxation is false in principle. Nevertheless his able and ingenious argument leaves us as firmly convinced of the correctness of our views as we were when we first penned them; and we know many members of Protestant denominations whose acceptance of the great American doctrine of the complete separation of Church and State is so absolute that they would rejoice in the sense of perfect independence which would accompany the payment of their taxes. They would prefer not even to receive protection either from national, State, or municipal governments, without contributing their due proportion to the maintenance of police, courts of justice, and other instrumentalities for guarding the rights and liberties of the citizen. Indeed, this very subject has been considerably discussed by the Baptists, and for aught we know by some other denominations, purely on the ground of principle, and at a time when there was not the slightest outside pressure against the exemption of Church property. Warned by the red history of religious persecution perpetrated through the arm of the State, they have hesitated to accept from the civil power any favor that might afford it even the slightest pretext for interfering in religious affairs; lest the governmental machinery might sometime fall under the control of some strong denomination, and be used for the oppression (or suppression) of weaker sects, or lest it might sometime happen that the enemies of all religion, gaining the upper hand, and accustomed to see the State interfere in religious matters, should use the civil power for the advancement of their own peculiar views.

That the exemption of church property from taxation is contrary to the spirit of the Constitution seems to us very clear. The first amendment to that instrument provides that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion," and by an "establishment of religion" was undoubtedly meant the same as was meant by the same words in the mother country, against the imitation of whose practice in this respect the amendment in question was designed to protect us. In England the "established Church" meant the church supported by taxes, (called tithes,) the collection of which was enforced by the State, as distinguished from the denominations that were obliged to rely upon voluntary contributions.

We showed in our former article that the exemption of churches from taxation inevitably involved the payment of taxes on their account by citizens, who might be members of other churches than those for which they were compelled to pay, or perhaps of no church at all, and in either case were subjected to involuntary contributions for the support of religion, which is the essential feature of an "establishment" of religion. The difference between our case and that of England is that here the support is partial instead of total, and embraces all sects instead of one. The exemption of Christian churches from taxation is the partial establishment of Christianity in America, instead of the total establishment of Episcopalianism as in England. If the Jewish synagogue is also exempted, this partial "establishment" is made to cover a still broader ground; but the vicious, dangerous and un-American principle of compelling citizens—some citizens at least—to contribute to the support of religions in which they do not believe is always present.

Our correspondent argues that "the temple of religion and its adjuncts have always, by a common instinct of mankind, been considered as something sacred," and that the taxing of church property would tend to direct the popular mind "of that reverence for sacred things which is the securest foundation of public order." Nothing could be further from our purpose than to instigate any assault upon the Church or upon any of its just rights or privileges; but we stand firmly by the great American doctrine—a doctrine which is in perfect harmony with that religion whose founder declared that His Kingdom was not of this world—that it is no legitimate function of the State to compel a single citizen to contribute one iota, against his will, towards the support of any religion; and this for the reason, among others, that religion lies wholly outside of the realm of demonstration, and that in matters of faith no man should be compelled to aid, even to the smallest extent, in maintaining or propagating an opinion which he does not conscientiously hold. If the principles of religion have not in them the necessary vitality to win their way by appealing directly to the minds of men, no aid or favoritism which the State can offer would long avail to maintain them. If they do possess such vitality even the opposition of the State would be powerless to crush them. As to the danger of divesting the popular mind of a "reverence for things sacred" by taking away from the Church all involuntary support, and allowing it to depend upon the moral power of its doctrines over men's minds, as it did in the days of Christ and the Apostles, we could scarcely have believed that a clergyman would be willing to present the faith he represents in the pitiful aspect of a petitioner for the help of the State to invest it with an extrinsic dignity. Surely, a religion divine in its origin and its teachings possesses within itself all that is necessary to command the profoundest reverence of mankind, independent of any aid derived from human governments.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL NOTES.

GUIZOT is now the Nestor of the French Academy.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS will soon resume his literary labors.

ASHBURY, the yachtsman, expects to revisit this country in August.

SENATOR BROWNLOW is to take editorial charge of the Knoxville Whig.

JOAQUIN MILLER is reported as growing "sad, grave and despondent."

J. PROCTOR KNOTT will spread the American eagle on the Fourth of July.

SEVERAL members of the British Parliament will be in Saratoga in August.

CHAS. READE is writing a novel to redress the abuses of the mercantile marine.

MISS NEILSON, the actress, goes to Europe July 9, and returns to America in September.

THE Cleveland Plain Dealer floats the name of George H. Pendleton for Governor of Ohio.

A RETIRED merchant of Philadelphia recently lost $800,000 in an iron manufacturing speculation.

MISS ADA HILBITT, of Chicago, has been admitted to practice law in the Supreme Court of Illinois.

THE trainer of Mr. Merry's horse Doncaster is said to have gained about £8,000 by the result of the Derby.

JOHN G. SAXE is rapidly verging toward sixty, and yet he is the same jovial, good fellow as at twenty-five.

JOHN B. WELLES, United States commissioner, formerly Governor of California, is dying in New Orleans.

MR. LONGFELLOW and Mr. W. Cullen Bryant have been elected members of the Russian Academy of Science.

THE house formerly owned and occupied by Alice and Phœbe Cary has been purchased by Dr. Emily Blackwell.

SPEAKING of the Massachusetts Legislature the Boston Transcriber says: "No work and all pay makes Jack a dull boy."

IT is reported that one hundred and fifty thousand dollars have already been expended to keep Stokes from the gallows.

MR. SOTHERN will pay a brief visit to England in August next, and return again to New York after a stay abroad of a few days only.

A. T. STEWART, of New York, is so far recovered in health as to travel short distances, but has not yet attempted to resume business hours.

MADAME LUCCA is now living in Kingston, R. I., and has declared her intention of becoming a citizen and permanent resident of this country.

THE announcement that Father Hyacinthe is not naturally as well as theologically what his title indicates is now said to be only a little premature.

THE countenance of the Shah of Persia is said to indicate a man of stern courage, immovable resolution, and irresistible masterfulness.

WILKIE COLLINS' entertainments here will consist of the reading of an original story in two parts. It is now thought that he will make his first appearance in Boston.

DR. H. M. BANNEY succeeds Dr. Hanney as superintendent of the Iowa asylum for the insane at Mt. Pleasant. Dr. B. has been first assistant physician in the institution for the past eight years.

ACCORDING to the good old Jewish custom, on the late Passover, Baron de Rothschild, of Paris, opened his doors to all comers, and the table was served for the mendicant as well as for the man of wealth.

HENRY B. DAWSON, in the Historical Magazine, says that while it is true the celebrated Standish was not the same Myles, if there is any weight in numbers, of equal merit, the testimony is certainly overwhelming in favor of Miles.

OSCR FOLGER, of Detroit, Mich., has invented a firing machine which is successful in every particular except that it fails to the ground too soon. His first experience with it, from the top of a barn, deprived him of consciousness for only fifteen minutes.

MAX STEITHEIMER, the resident partner of the well-known banking firm of J. & W. Seligman, of New York city, died at Frankfort on Saxony, on the 8th. He was United States consul at Singapore under the administrations of Presidents Pierce and Buchanan.

JOHN BRIGHT is said to value the gold-headed cane bequeathed to him by Abraham Lincoln for his active defence of the United States during the rebellion beyond any of the presents and testimonials he has received from his numerous admirers and friends.

TAGLIONI, the celebrated dancseuse, who is now giving dancing lessons in London, pays this compliment to American girls: "The American young ladies please me most because they are very pretty and quick to learn. They are naturally more graceful than the French, and their readiness in seizing ideas please me."

R. H. PARE, the sculptor, who is at present pursuing his profession at Florence, Italy, has recently sold his marble statue of "Sunshine" to Mr. Jacob T. Walworth, of Milwaukee. His statue, "The Gardener's Daughter," has been purchased by Mr. B. F. Romaine, of New York.

JOHN RUSKIN is regarded as the champion grumbler of Europe, and he is fully entitled to wear the belt. He never writes now-a-days but to find fault with something. He would object to the verdure of the earth and the blue of the sky as monotonous. The most objectionable thing in Ruskin is his existence.

DURAZZO is reported to have said that, if not made premier of England the coming autumn, he will visit the United States and go round the globe from San Francisco by way of Siberia and China. Having been so often on every side of public questions, he naturally feels a curiosity to be on more than one side of the world.

THE New York Graphic has it from the very highest authority, "That Plymouth church will take no steps towards investigating the charges against Mr. Beecher, nor toward calling Mr. Bowen to account for anything he may have said concerning his pastor. And, furthermore, we have the best authority for saying that neither Mr. Beecher, Mr. Bowen nor Mr. Tilton will take any further notice of the disagreeable scandal that has been set afoot, and with which their names are more or less directly associated. So far as they are concerned the whole matter will be ignored, and buried in silence and regret."

THE Prince of Satsuma, who is a terrible hater of foreigners, recently visited Yeddo, where he had not been for many years, creating a great sensation, which gave rise to reports that he intended to inaugurate a revolution. To show his antipathy to progress he made his officers remove all chairs, tables, sofas, &c., from the steamer that brought him, and lay mats instead. On arriving at Yokohama he refused to ride to Yeddo on the cars, but had himself carried in the old way, by the coolies, in a bamboo chair. His men were all dressed in the old style, with their heavy tin swords, old banners, lances, &c., and thus they swarmed into the city, frowning defiance at everything foreign.
