THE POLAR VOYAGE.

We surrender the greater portion of our space this morning to Secretary Robeson's report of the examination of the portion of the Polaris crew rescued from the "Ice-floe," and a very full abstract of the testimony of Capt. Tyson, Mr. Myers and the Esquimaux.

The report is a paper of rare value as viewed from a scientific standpoint, embracing, as it does, a clearly written compendium of Capt. Hall's voyage, and a lucid statement of the success which had been reached previous to his death. It shows that American enterprise has accomplished most fortunate results in reaching a higher latitude than the eye of civilized man ever gazed upon before, and that an inlet exists in latitude 81 deg. 57 min. north, which may be, in fact, a strait leading to Francis Joseph sound, which was discovered by the Germania and Hansa expedition. If this surmise is correct the northern limits or boundary of Greenland have undoubtedly been ascertained, and the presumption that open water exists beyond this point suggests the probability that the north passage was seen by our hardy explorers.

But this astounding fact does not comprehend all the success of the result, as it is shown that the Polaris is stored with treasures and novelties, consisting of specimens of animal and vegetable life of the polar region, which are invaluable to the scientist, and which, when recovered and placed in some proper receptacle, will remain for ages to come a lasting illustration of the skill and daring of the present period.

Again, the deviation and dip of the needle, which have vexed the mariners of every country on the face of the globe, receive a partial elucidation, and the effect of the electric currents which control the mariner's compass is thereby rendered more explicable.

Added to these are astronomical discoveries which are strange as they are important, and meteorological data on which to base further investigations into a science which is yet in its infancy.

The effect of cold upon animal life as well as vegetable may also be ascertained, even to the meagre date which we present this morning, showing that while mammals of lesser size are able to exist, no fish are to be found in the waters of the mysterious region.

The calm and dispassionate character of the examination into the circumstances connected with Captain Hall's death is worthy of the gravity of the subject, and the deductions, while they may not satisfy many anxious and suspicious minds, will serve to clear away much of the mystery with which it has been surrounded. And there is a pathetic feature connected with it, to be found in the unselfish devotion of Joe and Hannah to their friend in the hour of his fatal need, which will serve to perpetuate grateful memories of them so long as the record of this great achievement shall last.

The mystery surrounding the separation of the ice-floe heroes from the Polaris is not satisfactorily cleared away; but the cautious manner in which the ex parte testimony is treated commends itself to the favor of every unprejudiced mind.

Secretary Robeson was careful to associate with him in the conduct of the examination gentlemen who were not only competent to aid him, but whose verdict will meet with little less confidence than his own carefully-formed opinions, and his determination to fit out a vessel, as already announced in the REPUBLICAN, will be hailed with warm approval.

The announcement of this determination in his letter to the President carries with it the impress of unhesitating energy, which will find a responsive throb wherever any sympathy for the imperiled crew exists. Referring to the necessity of employing a sailing vessel, and particularly to the purchase of the Tigress, he says: "A vessel of this fleet, sailing as they do under a foreign register, can only be used for the purpose of an expedition organized and sailing under our own flag, by being purchased and put in commission by the Navy Department, in accordance with the feelings of our people, and whatever responsibility is incurred by this act of imperative public duty and national humanity, I am neither authorized to evade nor unwilling to meet."

The preservation of Capt. Hall's private papers appears to have been miraculous, and the unflinching fidelity with which Joe clung to them during dangers which would have daunted the bravest is simply heroic. When the box containing them was opened, a number of private letters were found, including the latest dispatches to Capt. Hall from the Navy Department, but a closer examination revealed a secret apartment, in which the dispatch to Secretary Robeson was discovered.

THE Lynchburg (Va.) Press, one of the most active and capable Republican journals in the South, exposes the little game of the Virginia Conservatives in their efforts to create dissension in the ranks of the Republican party, and at the same time delivers a well-deserved lecture to certain members of the party "who are anxious to create a breach, hoping to find themselves in the majority." This is the kind of talk we like to hear, and we hope that it will be continued until the selfish, office-seeking barnacles, with which our progress is impeded, are sloughed off. It looks very much as if there were many professed Republicans in Virginia who care more for the spoils than the principles of the party, and we must get rid of them.

AND NOW we discover why the irrepressible Woltz, who acts as secretary of the Republican State Central Committee of Virginia, has such gloomy forebodings regarding the future of the party in that State; also, why he is so "terribly down" on Col. Mosby. The reason is that he tried to get the appointment to be postmaster of Richmond in place of Miss Van Lew, and that he tried and failed to get Mosby's indorsement therefor.

THE House of Delegates last night did just as they should have done in the maintenance of their rights, by laying the bill of Mr. Thompson on the table by a nearly unanimous vote. It was a proper rebuke of an attempt on the part of the autocrats of the Council to rob the popular branch of their powers under the law.

☞ ATTENTION.

Spring is coming with its lovely breezes and pleasant weather, but its sudden changes may cause more or less sickening, yet easily overcome or prevented if necessary precautions are taken in time. There is more than one-third of the people whose system needs more to be invigorated by some medicine which will purify the blood, and give to the organs of digestion health to keep them from worm days so prostrating and weakening. Hundreds could testify to the great benefit derived from Hop Bitters, and those who do not pay attention to the first symptoms become really sick and afflicted with some of the numerous diseases which are the result of all kinds, especially what is called spring fever, billious headaches, dyspepsia, &c. A great many persons do take the hop bitters as a tonic, or they could not call enough the attention of the public on the great importance of selecting the proper remedy. The best properties of hops are combined in this, and no other medicine always harmless and prepared with care and a perfect knowledge of the properties of hops, is offered to the public. THE AMERICAN HOP BITTERS are superior to all cordials of the kind. They are not a drink, but a medicine, and if any medicine can be of benefit without the Medical Academy's approval, as the best tonic, restorer and purifier. ap8-tf SOLD EVERYWHERE.
