THE REPUBLICAN HAS A LARGER CIRCULATION THAN ANY OTHER MORNING PAPER IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

TO-DAY'S ELECTION.

The great duty of every Republican voter to-day, and of every man who has the interest of the District of Columbia at heart, is to support the regular Republican nominees in every district. Why? No one, we suppose, will deny that the welfare of our city is wound up with the Republican party. From the day that the old order of things gave way to the new; from the date of the expiration of Mr. Buchanan's administration, and of the beginning of the administration of Mr. Lincoln, the growth of the city of Washington has been a steady, solid, substantial growth. We shall not attempt to deny that its prosperity is in a great measure due to purely fortuitous causes; that the position of Washington as the capital of the country—a frontier post on the border line of rebellion—contributed in part to its advancement; but independently of all that, of the vast amount of money that was in one way or another expended among us, it is an indisputable fact that with the change in the national administration, with the overthrow of the old Democratic party, came to us the first gleam of the prosperity with which we have since been blessed. It was the policy of the Democracy to keep the capital of the country a mere wayside village, without trade or commerce, an aggregation of boarding-houses, its avenues mere mud puddles, its streets all but impassable. The Democratic theory of government was opposed to a great national capital. It was centralization. It was contrary to the doctrines of Jefferson. It was a blow at State's rights. The Virginia delegation in Congress felt no pride in Washington, because they believed in Richmond—in the State and not in the United States. The Maryland men sought to build up Annapolis or Baltimore. New York looked to Albany; Massachusetts to Boston; Pennsylvania to Philadelphia and Harrisburg, instead of one capital they wanted many capitals. That was the old theory, the old idea, from the execution of which we found Washington thirteen years ago "a city of magnificent distances," the reproach of the American republic, a city of huts and hovels, with here and there a public building of some architectural pretensions, half built, only marking all the more distinct the squalor that surrounded it.

The changes that have been wrought in the last thirteen years—the vast improvements that have been made, are visible upon every hand. Are we not right in setting them down to the credit of the Republican party? We have more than doubled our population; we have quadrupled our wealth; we have advanced from the position of a country village to the front rank, not only among American cities, but among the cities of the world. Already tourists and orators and journalists begin to compare our city with the most charming capital of Europe—great in all that goes to make a city great, beautiful in all that makes a capital beautiful—in its public buildings, its art treasures, its benevolent institutions, its private residences, its charities, its colleges and schools and public institutions. The record stands, and no amount of falsehood and misrepresentation and slander can blot it out. Under the fostering influences of republicanism the former step-daughter of the Union has become its best beloved and most favored child. We have reverted to these points in the history of our civic growth merely to show that when we ask of our citizens to-day their full and earnest support for the candidates of the Republican party, we do so because in the continued success of that party lies the true interest of the city. There is a disposition to regard the election to-day as unimportant and insignificant, and herein is committed a great and grave mistake. We cannot afford to lose a single district. It is true that there is no regularly organized political opposition to the party, but nevertheless the party having put its candidates in the field, and having an overwhelming majority, we must stand by them and see that they are elected. There is, to be sure, no opposition to the Board of Public Works anywhere. In every meeting that has been held the system of public improvements has been indorsed, and there is not to-day a candidate in this city running for office who dares to disapprove of what has been done. But, notwithstanding all this, the Republican candidates are more identified with what has been and what will be done than the other parties in the field, and as such should be supported and sustained. To-night we must send out the news of a Republican victory to all sections of the Union, and wheel into line with Iowa and Ohio and Pennsylvania. The duty of every Republican voter is to cast his vote for the regular Republican candidate in every Legislative district.

THE SUGGESTIONS submitted to public consideration through our columns by the President yesterday, regarding needed reforms in the financial affairs of the country, produced no little excitement in New York and elsewhere, and were undoubtedly responsible for the additional "shrinkage of values" in some of the most prominent fancy stocks. They seemed not only to astonish the speculators and gamblers, but to confirm them very suddenly in the opinion that the Administration, seeking the greatest benefit to the greatest number, has begun a determined war against the fraudulent and rotten pretensions of the stock-gamblers to the control of the financial condition of the country. But this does not embrace all. The national banks are also reached, and the suggestions referred to were evidently intended to awaken discussion regarding the system under which they are now conducted. In short, all the weak points in our financial system receive such earnest attention that interested parties wince under the allusions to them as they would from the shock of a direct attack upon them. The publication was a strategic movement, intended, by a display of shrewd tactics, to develop the strength and power of the common enemy before the meeting of Congress, when the real attack will be made.

AN "OLD CONFEDERATE SOLDIER," writing from Orange county, Va., gives the Fredericksburg Ledger the "cheering news that the Piedmont counties are not behind their sisters of the tide-water district in waking up to the true and practical interests" of the State. The following is an extract from his letter:

"All of our county candidates supported by the Republican party will be elected. Orange and Culpeper will go for Hughes. Kemper will get Madison by a very small majority, though the county is three hundred majority for the Conservatives. I am writing letters to my old comrades in your district to lay aside sectional prejudice and go for the interests of old Virginia."

THE Philadelphia Sunday Times thinks "the advocates of local option seem fatally bent on reviving the 'side-board' system," which obtained in the early days of the present generation, when practically every man's house was a tavern. We do not know how it will affect the side-board trade, but there is no doubt whatever that the "bottle" business will grow into enormous proportions if the prohibitionists succeed in carrying out their

NOW THAT THE QUESTION of cheap transportation is being agitated with the intent, at east, to reach a practical solution of the farmers' problem, the relative interests of different localities and routes which compete with each other for the great grain trade of the Northwest are being discussed. Among the most urgent appeals for consideration in this connection are those from New Orleans, which city naturally joins St. Louis in her opposition to and rivalry with Chicago. The facts as develop show that "it takes but eight cents to carry a bushel of corn from St. Louis to New Orleans, against eighteen cents by water from Chicago to New York. The trans-Atlantic freight is about seven cents greater from New Orleans than from New York, which leaves the two routes as fifteen to eighteen cents a bushel."

The result of this development is an effort to cheapen the cost of ocean transportation from New Orleans. But what is needed, primarily, is the development of the natural resources of the lower Mississippi. When the country bordering on its banks flourishes with well-cultivated fields, and the miraculous fertility of the land is fully utilized, the competition which is certain to follow between freight lines for the carrying trade will settle the question.

THE CONSERVATIVE PRESS OF VIRGINIA has lately discovered that the members of its party in that State are afflicted with the disease known as "political apathy." This affliction is notoriously chronic with the Democracy in every section of the Union just now, and the method of its cure has puzzled the Democratic doctors more than a little. From an unprejudiced standpoint it is diagnosed simply enough with the single word "disgust." To speak plainer, the victims of the disease have become tired of Democratic misrule, and while some of them may not be ready to sever their old party connections, every man of them will neglect to make any exertion for the success of the ticket. It is in vain that the "matrons of Virginia" are appealed to for the purpose of securing their aid and sympathy in efforts to arouse this disgusted element from its apparent apathy. But these appeals serve to show the apprehension which exists in the minds of the Conservative leaders of defeat, and that rather than suffer defeat they are willing to sacrifice even the sacred surroundings, with which they pretend to invest the fair sex, to protect them from the contaminating influences of politics. In other words, they propose to throw the women of the State into the political vortex, and expect them to do work in the pending campaign à la Woodhull and Claflin.

THE DISTRICT is to be honored to-day by a visit from a number of the delegates to the Evangelical Alliance, lately in session in New York. Comprising, as this body will, the representative men of every sect of the Protestant Church throughout Christendom, and representing as they do the progressive spirit of a new era in Christianity, it is proper that they should be received in Washington by the President of a nation which boasts as the foundation of its government a liberality in religion which guarantees freedom and toleration in the exercise of every creed. The principal object of their visit will be accomplished when this reception is held; but the services which will follow in the leading Protestant churches will prove to be of equal importance as the most remarkable religious ceremony ever witnessed at the capital of the nation.

IN ESSEX COUNTY, VA., in which there is a colored majority of more than three hundred, a meeting was held last week at which Mr. Aaron Commodore, "in a very effective and telling speech, pronounced as false and malicious the yarn that has been going the rounds of the Conservative press and commented upon by the public speakers, that the colored people desire mixed schools and social equality." According to the Fredericksburg Ledger it was evident to all of those present that the speaker merely re-echoed the sentiments of all of the colored people of the county. Here is an answer to the Conservative charge that the blacks, where they have the power, aim to exclude the whites from all participation in the control of the affairs of the State.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Review of Current Literature.

"A WONDERFUL WOMAN;" a novel. By MARY AGNES FLEMING. G. W. CARLETON & CO., publishers, New York.

This is a decidedly unhealthy novel. We arose from its examination in a stifled, gasping, fevered state, as if just emerging from a pent-up, ill-ventilated apartment. There is nothing particularly marked or noticeably new, either in the conception of the story or the unfolding of incidents. Such is the extravagance of the plot, the wild profusion and overpowering warmth of language, that an air of travesty is thrown over the whole. So that whatever emotion is attempted to be described—love, pity, remorse, anger, or malice—we feel equally the burlesque element predominates. The initial chapter introduces us to Sir John Dangerfield, Baronet, late colonel in the "Honorable East India Company's service," who has just come into possession of £8,000 a year—and to Katherine, the "Wonderful Woman," presumptive heiress to this portly estate. A dark, terrible secret is here vaguely suggested, which is further developed by the appearance of a Mrs. Vavasor, an adventuress, who, holding the key to this mystery, is the little villain and strategist of the story. Katherine, impulsive and undisciplined, falls in love with an intriguing, penniless tenor-singer, Gaston Dantree. The wedding night arrives. The secret, much to the comfort of the reader's mind, is, at last, made known. Katherine is not the Baronet's daughter—only a stray, nameless waif—hence entitled to no entailment. Most agonizing events ensue. Dantree is kicked down the stairs, and ends his days as a lunatic; the Baronet is seized with a fit, and expires; Peter Dangerfield, an ugly, sneaking next-of-kin fellow, enters as heir-at-law, and Katherine starts out upon a vagabond life most torturing to fellow. Coming to America she turns actress, makes a fortune, returns to Sussex and devotes herself solely to revenge, frightens and harasses Peter, the heir, by all sorts of unfeminine tricks and unnatural impositions until detected, and a little weary of her queer ways she turns saint by way of variety. Tracing her course through the five-hundredth page we next find her in the midst of the plodding drudgery of a governess' life, having lost all her wealth. Here the fluctuations of fortune again beset her, and Sir Arthur Tregenna, Bart., makes her his happy bride. So ends our tale.

"LYNDE WEISS;" an Autobiography. By GEO. H. THROOP. CLAXTON, REMSEN & HAFFELFINGER, publishers, Philadelphia.

A disjointed, delirously-told story, directed, principally, to the recital of childish trespasses and their consequences. Lynde Weiss, the hero, is made to tell his own history, in which mean injustices and paternal floggings figure at every turning. We find no salutary lessons inculcated for boy or man; nothing outside of the stupid and common-place. The style is impotuous and immature, showing great crudeness and incapacity for the attempted work. The following conversation between Lynde and Ann West, the housekeeper, may be taken as an example of the many: "Lynde!" "Eh!" Lynde!" "Um!" "Lynde!" "Hello!" "Come!" "Eh!" "Lynde!" "Hello!" "Lynde!" "Yes!" "Oh! go to mischief!" Six hideous, distorted illustrations are scattered through the pages, adding nothing in the way of embellishment, but much to the general intelligence.

[OFFICIAL.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, October 10, 1873.

General Orders No. 102.

The President of the United States commands it to be made known that all soldiers who have deserted their colors, and who shall on or before the first day of January, 1874, surrender themselves at any military station, shall receive a full pardon, only forfeiting the pay and allowances due them at the time of desertion; and shall be restored to duty without trial or punishment on condition that they faithfully serve through the term of their enlistment.

By order of the Secretary of War.
E. D. TOWNSEND, Adjutant General.

[Circular.] NAVY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, October 6, 1873.

Executive officers of ships of war of the navy are not to issue orders in writing, or otherwise, for the general duties of the ship on which they are serving.

Such orders are to proceed from the commanding officer only, and are to be issued by him.

Commanding officers of ships are to correspond with their commander or chief, or with the Navy Department or appropriate bureau, in relation to matters of detail pertaining to their command, and are not to forward letters from their subordinates on such subjects.

This circular is called for because of instances of orders for general observance issued by executive officers, and approved by the commanding officer, that have come to the notice of the Department, and also because of the receipt of letters from equipment, engineer and other officers addressed to the Department, and forwarded by commanding officers, on matters which pertain to the responsibilities of the latter alone. WILLIAM REYNOLDS,
Acting Secretary of the Navy.

DYEING AND SCOURING.

JUST AS WE EXPECTED.

Such a rush of LADIES AND GENTS' APPAREL to be CLEANED and DYED has not been seen for some times. With every facility and a full corps of skilled workmen we are at it still with a determination to do it good and to clean it all out on time or dye in the effort; not that we are tired of living, but because by dyeing we expect to live, while we know not how to live except we dye.
