National Republican.

VOL. XVI — WASHINGTON, D. C., FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 18, 1876 — NO. 72.

BABCOCK TRIAL.

EVIDENCE OF GENERAL SHERMAN

EXCELLENT CHARACTER OF DEFENDANT

JOYCE'S LETTERS AS POLITICIAN AND EDITOR

RULING ON THE RESERVED TELEGRAMS

HOW JOYCE RECOVERED LETTERS FROM MAIL

INTEREST LETTERS RETURNED BY MAGILL

Singular Testimony of a Letter-Carrier

DEPOSITION OF PRESIDENT GRANT

CLEAR AND FULL HISTORY OF EVENTS

Babcock Did Not Prevent Investigations

WHY ARE REVENUE OFFICERS WATCHED

And Never Treated Like Honest Men?

FULL CONFIDENCE IN DEFENDANT

Upon the resumption of the trial of Gen. Babcock this forenoon, a number of witnesses were upon the stand to testify to the character of the defendant.

Gen. Wm. T. Sherman testified: I have known Gen. O. E. Babcock intimately; I have known him since 1861, but my better knowledge of him dates from the time he brought me a dispatch at Savannah from Gen. Grant; since then I have known him almost constantly. His reputation has been very good; I never heard it questioned until these troubles. I have seen Gen. Babcock a hundred times in the Executive Mansion next to the President's room; it might be called the adjoining room. Those who go to the President's see Gen. Babcock first, and perhaps accomplish the object of their visit without seeing the President at all. Gen. Babcock also opens the letters, distributes them and answers all except the most important. He is a kind of intermediator between

THE PEOPLE AND THE PRESIDENT.

Testimony as to good character was also given by Gen. Jas. H. Simpson, of the corps of engineers; Gen. W. S. Stanton, U. S. A., and Gen. W. H. Seward, commander of this port; Hon. E. A. Borie, ex-Secretary of the Navy.

At this point ex-Governor Fletcher was put upon the stand, and identified several letters from Babcock to Joyce as those placed in his possession a few weeks ago by Mrs. Joyce. Only one of these letters was read at this stage of the trial. It was dated March 17, 1874, and addressed to Joyce, in San Francisco. It is in reply to Joyce's message to Babcock: "Tell Douglass to earl off his scandal bounds, that only blacken the memory of Ford and friends." (Gen. Babcock informs Joyce that there are no charges against Ford, and tells him he believes he (Joyce) was sent to San Francisco because of his high standing in the Commissioner's office.

The defense then introduced two letters from Deputy Commissioner H. C. Rogers to General John McDonald, dated respectively March 6 and March 22, 1875, to show, as counsel said, that as late as the date of these letters there was no suspicion of General McDonald either by Rogers or the Department. The first letter asks in behalf of Rogers that Congressman Clymer that McDonald will find a place as deputy collector in Arkansas or elsewhere for a young man well qualified for such a position, and states that such a favor on the part of McDonald would be a accommodation to a member of the Cabinet. The other letter refers to the

PROBABILITY OF THE APPOINTMENT

of Mr. Douglass to a judgeship of the Court of Claims, and solicits McDonald's influence in his (Rogers') behalf for the place made vacant by the retirement of Douglass. This letter was referred to by Rogers in his testimony.

E. A. Watson, clerk in the Lindell hotel, testified that Hoge was at that hotel in November, 1874.

General J. L. Fullerton, a lawyer of this city, testified to knowing Babcock in the army during the late war and since; knew him in Washington. His reputation was good.

Three gentlemen connected with the post office of this city testified as to the street letter-box system here, stating that it was unusual for valuable letters in the boxes, and that the public had been repeatedly cautioned against doing so. There was no rule or regulation prohibiting it, however.

The defense then introduced several letters from Deputy Collector H. C. Rogers to General John McDonald, dated respectively March 6 and March 22, 1875, to show, as counsel said, that as late as the date of these letters there was no suspicion of General McDonald either by Rogers or the Department. The first letter asks in behalf of Rogers that Congressman Clymer that McDonald will find a place as deputy collector in Arkansas or elsewhere for a young man well qualified for such a position, and states that such a favor on the part of McDonald would be an accommodation to a member of the Cabinet. The other letter refers to the

PROBABILITY OF THE APPOINTMENT

of Mr. Douglass to a judgeship of the Court of Claims, and solicits McDonald's influence in his (Rogers') behalf for the place made vacant by the retirement of Douglass. This letter was referred to by Rogers in his testimony.

E. A. Watson, clerk in the Lindell hotel, testified that Hoge was at that hotel in November, 1874.

General J. L. Fullerton, a lawyer of this city, testified to knowing Babcock in the army during the late war and since; knew him in Washington. His reputation was good.

Three gentlemen connected with the post office of this city testified as to the street letter-box system here, stating that it was unusual for valuable letters in the boxes, and that the public had been repeatedly cautioned against doing so. There was no rule or regulation prohibiting it, however.

The defense then introduced several letters from Deputy Collector H. C. Rogers to General John McDonald, written at different times from 1870 to 1875. Some of them enclosed editorials written by Joyce and published in the St. Joseph (Missouri) Herald, and were designed to show his enthusiasm in political matters. Another, from Little Rock, Ark., expresses Babcock of the election of Powell Clayton to the United States Senate, and says the election would carry Arkansas for Grant; and another inclosed resolutions to the memory of Charles W. Ford, adopted at a public meeting here soon after the death of Ford. Answers to these letters then were produced and read; also two or three others. All of these letters are of a social character, and indicate that the writers addressed Mr. McDonald as a friend; contain no allusions whatever to ring matters or anything connected with revenue affairs.

ON SAN DOMINGO AFFAIRS,

O. E. Babcock, chief clerk of the First Comptroller's office, William H. Jayne, George O. Hopkins, connected with the office of public buildings and grounds, and under Babcock, were then called to identify for the prosecution the signature of Rerdinand S. Rudolph, Speaker at the President's Mansion, to whom the dispatch of April 5, 1875, addressed to Babcock, was traced, but they failed to satisfactorily identify his signature.

THE COURT THEN RULED

on the three dispatches which have been held in reserve two or three days.

The following was admitted:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

Gen. O. E. Babcock, St. Louis: The Secretary of Commissioner ordered anybody place.

The following two were ruled out:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3, 1874.

Jno. A. Joyce, St. Louis: Cannot hear that any one has gone or is going. O. E. BABCOCK.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 5, 1874.

Gen. O. E. Babcock, Washington: Tell McDonald to see Parker, of Colorado, and telegram to Commissioner. Crush out St. Louis enemis. JOYCE.

Regarding the last dispatch, the Court said, although it was admitted to be in the handwriting of Joyce, and that it had been sent over the wires, there was no direct proof that the defendant had received it, or, if he did receive it, that he knew from whom it came, and there was no proof that it was ever answered.

James Magill, letter-carrier, then testified that in the latter part of February, 1874, I was coming down Pine street, near Fifth, when Mr. Joyce accosted me and said there were two letters in the street box, and he asked me if I wished to get back. He pointed to the box, in the southwest corner Fifth and Pine. I asked Colonel Joyce to describe the letters before I opened the box, and he described one addressed to W. O. Avery, Washington, D. C., and marked personal in the corner, and the other was to O. E. Babcock, Washington, D. C., also marked personal. I opened the box, although it was out my district, and searched and found the two, and handed them to Colonel Joyce.

AMONG THE LETTERS,

Mr. Storrs. Did you get a receipt?

Witness. No, sir.

Mr. Storrs. Isn't it customary?

Witness. Yes, it is. I said: "Look here, Colonel, I want a receipt." He said: "If you want to put them in the mail again, I will give you that and see it done."

Mr. Storrs. What did he say?

Witness. He said: "Oh, that's all right," "Hunki dori," or something like that. It's only a blind.

Mr. Storrs. Is it frequent to give letters back?

Witness. No, sir.

Mr. Storrs. You sometimes do it?

Witness. On a business route it is frequent that a letter is put in, and the parties forgot an inclosure, or something like that, and they are returned to them.

Mr. Storrs. Did you report the matter to the post office?

Witness. No, sir.

Mr. Storrs. Why?

Witness. Well, I thought it was so frivolous there wasn't need of saying anything about it.

Mr. Storrs. Did you usually report?

Witness: I usually carried blanks in my satchel which I had parties to sign who wanted letters back, and then I compared the writing.

Mr. Storrs. How did you happen to remember the time this occurred?

Witness. I was house hunting about that time; I had been looking around four or five days for a house; I had just been to the Polytechnic who I had heard had a house; I was on my way down to make a collection. It was my day to collect for seven other carriers.

LOOKING FOR A MAN

The cross-examination of this witness was long, sharp and searching. He stated he had been mail carrier five years; never gave letters to Colonel Joyce at any other time. It was a frequent thing to return letters on business routes; recollected circumstances particularly, because it was old his beat; had opened boxes frequently on business streets, and returned letters, but could not recollect the names of any persons for whom he had done it. When pressed very hard witness said he had returned a letter to George W. Fishback; had returned them to

MANY BUSINESS HOUSES

on Main street, but could not swear to any particular firm. He was repeatedly pressed to recollect the name of anybody else for whom he had taken letters out of boxes, but could not remember one. He carried blank receipts; had receipts with him when he gave letters to Joyce; but Joyce refused to give him a receipt, saying, "Oh, that's all right," "hunky dory," or something of that sort; "it's only a blind." It occurred on the last day of February, 1875, about 1 o'clock p. m. I did not tell the postmaster about it, nor any one else about the office; mentioned the matter first last Saturday night to his wife. I had been reading in the papers the testimony of Mr. Everest about putting letters in the letter-box, and recollected he had given Joyce just such letters. I ruminated over the matter, and while there told his wife. The next evening, (Sunday,) after going off duty, went to the Lindell hotel, saw General Babcock, told him the circumstance, and Babcock sent him to Judge Porter, to whom he

REPEATED HIS STORY.

He gave full details of the matter to no one but Storrs and Porter outside of his own family. No one had been to see him about it before he went to the Lindell hotel. He consulted with no one but his wife. He repeated the addresses of the letters given to Joyce as General O. E. Babcock and Colonel W. O. Avery. He would not admit he had talked about the matter to anybody, except some letter carriers at the post office to-day. Colonel Dyer pressed him very hard, but he would not acknowledge he had any intercourse or conversation with any other than those mentioned above. The witness then went into a long account of his various occupations since he had lived in this city, but gave nothing more bearing on the case. It was understood the prosecution will offer testimony in rebuttal of this

EVIDENCE TO-MORROW.

Mr. Storrs then asked for the deposition of the President, which was produced by the clerk, and it was read by Judge Porter. As several objections had been made to questions and answers, Judge Dillon during the noon recess looked it over and marked the objections overruled or sustained, leaving the deposition, however, it is said, very much in the same form as it was originally. This document, so far as is now known, was surreptitiously obtained last night and published this morning. It is said no blame can attach to counsel for the publication. It was on file in the office of the clerk of the court, but whether it was procured from that office, or whether a copy had been made which fell into the hands of some

ENTERPRISING REPORTER

is not now known. After reading the deposition Mr. Storrs offered recommendations in favor of the appointment of General McDonald as supervisor of this district, but the Court ruled them out, and the defense closed their case. Adjourned.

THE PRESIDENT'S DEPOSITION.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 17.—The following is the President's deposition as filed in the United States Circuit Court to-day, and read in court:

In the Circuit Court of the United States, Eastern district of Missouri, The United States vs. Orville E. Babcock. Transcript of stenographer's notes of the deposition of U. S. Grant, for the defendant, taken at Washington, February, 1876. Direct examination by Mr. Cook.

Question. How long have you known Gen. Babcock, and how intimately? Answer. I have known him since 1863. We first met during the Vicksburg campaign in that year. Since March, 1864, I have known him intimately.

Q. Please state what were the several capacities he has been employed, and what positions he has held since 1863? A. From about March, 1864, to the 4th of March, 1869, he was aide-de-camp on my military staff. Since that time, up to the time of his indictment, he has been acting as my private secretary, and in addition to that, for several years, he has been Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds.

Q. As your private secretary, please state what were his general duties. A. His general duties were to carry all communications from the President to Congress; to have direction and supervision over all of the correspondence, particularly of official correspondence, and in his capacity of private secretary he received my mails, opened my letters and made them up for me to read, and then he gave directions to the Department without reference to me, and such as required any dictation or answer from me he submitted to me.

Q. What relations with you were confidential? A. Very.

Q. Do you know whether, during the period of time that General Babcock has been your private secretary, he has been from time to time applied to by persons throughout the country to lay their special matters before you, or before the various Departments? (Counsel for the prosecution objected to the question as irrelevant and incompetent to the issues in the case.) A. That was the frequent, you might say almost daily occurrence.

Q. In what manner, so far as you have observed with reference to the public interests, has General Babcock discharged his duties as your private secretary? (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution as immaterial and irrelevant.) A. I have always regarded him as efficient and most faithful.

Q. Are you acquainted with the general reputation of Gen. Babcock in the city where he has lived, among his associates in the army and elsewhere for honesty and integrity? A. I suppose that I might say that I have been acquainted with his reputation everywhere he has been and where he is known, where he has lived; elsewhere, I do not know anything about it. But I supposed myself to be acquainted with the reputation of Gen. Babcock in this city. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, state, if you please, what his general reputation is and has been. A. I have always supposed it to be good, it twelve years intimate association has not given me an opportunity of judging what other people think of him. I certainly had a good opportunity not only of knowing his character myself, but of knowing the opinion of others.

Q. And from these opportunities, what has been his reputation? A. Good.

Q. Were you acquainted with C. W. Ford, of St. Louis, in his lifetime, and what position did he hold at the time of his death? A. I was intimately acquainted with Mr. Ford, here, in the State of New York. When I was a lieutenant in the army he was there then with his family living in the same town where I was stationed. Then from 1854 to 1860 we were both living in St. Louis county, and our relations were intimate from 1854 up to the time of his death. He was connected with the United States Express Company in St. Louis, and from 1869, but I will not be sure about that, to his death he was collector of internal revenue of the first collection district of Missouri.

Q. State what, if any, applications were made at the time of his decease as to the appointment of his successor? (Objected to by the counsel for the prosecution as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent. A. It will be impossible for me to remember all of the applications that were made for the place. I do remember, however, of General Babcock bringing me a dispatch that was addressed to him from John A. Joyce, practically applying for the place. (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution unless the telegram is produced.)

Q. Have you that dispatch? A. I have not.

Q. Do you know where it is personally? A. No. I suppose it could be found. I think very likely either General Babcock's counsel or the District Attorney at St. Louis has it.

Q. Do you remember any other communications with regard to the appointment of Mr. Ford's successor emanating from his sureties? (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. When General Babcock showed me that dispatch from John A. Joyce I said to him that Mr. Ford having died suddenly and away from home I should be guided largely in selecting his successor by the recommendations or wishes of his bondsmen; that I thought they were entitled at least to approval of the appointment of the man who should succeed to the duties of the office. (Answer objected to by counsel for the prosecution on the ground that it is incompetent for the witness to state conversations between himself and the defendant of the nature of it.)

Q. What did you ultimately decide to do with reference to the appointment, and to whom, if to any one, did you decide to leave the naming of his successor? (Objected by the counsel for the prosecution as irrelevant and incompetent.) A. That was answered in my answer to the previous question.

Q. Whom did the bondsmen actually recommend? (Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.) A. Constantine Maguire.

Q. And on whose recommendation exclusively was he appointed? A. I had relied upon those recommendation exclusively; he was well recommended, and satisfactory to the bondsmen of Mr. Ford. (Counsel objected to by counsel for the prosecution, unless the recommendations, if in writing, are produced.)

Q. Did Gen. Babcock ever in any way, directly or indirectly, use any request or seek to influence the appointment of Mr. Maguire? (Objected to as exchange a word with you on the subject which indicated that he desired his appointment? (Objected to as incompetent, irrelevancy and incompetency. The witness cannot state conversations between himself and defendant.) A. I do not think he ever did; I do not think he was aware of the existence of Constantine Maguire before his recommendation.

Q. Did you inform General Babcock that you intended to telegraph the name of Ford's successor to his bondsmen, and did you request him so to notify those parties? (Objected to on the ground of irrelevancy and incompetency. The question is answered in a previous answer.)

Q. It embraces, perhaps, this addition. Did you request him to notify the parties? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. That part I don't remember. It was what I expected or thought of that this ever would become a matter of investigation, and therefore my memory would not be accurate.

Q. Are the telegrams now shown you the ones received in relation to the appointment of Mr. Maguire? (Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and because the papers do not purport to be originals.) A. I have no doubt that these are the dispatches, or copies of the dispatches, that I received; or, if not, telegrams similar in tenor to those that were received.

The papers were marked exhibits Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

Q. There is a letter, Mr. President, connected with these telegrams, dated January 4, 1876, from D. D. Pratt, Commissioner. Will you be kind enough to explain how that letter was received by you, and what connection it had with the telegrams? (Objected to as immaterial, irrevelant and incompetent.) A. The note from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is in answer to a request for me to be furnished with telegrams recommending Maguire to the office of collector. (Answer objected to by the prosecution as incompetent and immaterial.)

Q. Did General Babcock, so far as you know, ever seek in any way to influence your action in reference to any charge made or proposed to be made against Joyce or McDonald, or either of them? (Objected to as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.) A. Do not remember of his ever speaking to me on the subject at all; he certainly took no lively interest in the matter or I should have remembered it.

Q. Did Gen. Babcock, so far as you know, ever seek in any way to influence your action with reference to any investigation of alleged whisky frauds in St. Louis or elsewhere? (Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. He did not. Possibly I might state right here that I remember but one instance in his ever talking to me at all about the matter of investigation, except since he has been indicted, and then it was simply to say to me that he had asked Mr. Douglass why it was that they threatened all their officials, as though they were dishonest persons, by sending spies to watch them, and asking why they could not make inspections somewhat as they do in the army. Send a man of character to their distilleries and take their books and make a report that could be relied on. I believe that he simply told me that he had said this to Mr. Douglass. (Answer objected by prosecution as immaterial and incompetent, in stating conversations between the accused and witness.)

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of Gen. McDonald being in the city of Washington on the 7th of December, 1874? A. I do not remember the particular date. I remember the time in question.

Q. If I understand you correctly, Gen. Babcock's conception was that, in making the investigation, it would be wise to have it done by men of superior character than by men of inferior and suspicious character? (Objected to by the prosecution as immaterial and irrelevant.) A. Yes.

Q. Did you ride with him on or about that date or occasion, and was anything said then by him to you with reference to the investigation of alleged frauds in his district? (Objected to by the prosecution as irrelevant and immaterial. Conversations between John McDonald and witness are not admissable in any theory of this case.) A. I did not pick him up on the sidewalk; as I was taking a drive I invited him to get in and drive with me. I have no recollection of a single word of conversation on any matter touching his official position of business.

Q. Did Gen. Babcock at or about that time say anything, to your knowledge; did he in any way undertake to prevent them? (Same objections as to previous question.) A. I have no recollection of his saying anything about that. He certainly did not intercede with me to prevent them.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of the promulgation of any order transferring the various supervisors from their own to other districts? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. I do.

Q. State fully with whom the idea upon which that order was based originated, and the particulars of the reasons which induced you to direct it. (Same objection.) A. Some time while Mr. Richardson was Secretary of the Treasury—I think, at all events, before Mr. Bristow became Secretary of the Treasury—Mr. Douglass expressed the idea to me that it would be a good plan to occasionally change the supervisors around from one district to another, and I expressed myself favorably to it, but it was not done then and thought of any more by me, but when it became evident that the Treasury was being defrauded of a portion of the revenue that it should receive from the distillation of spirits in the West, Secretary Bristow called on me and made a general statement of his suspicions and I then suggested the idea. The previous suggestion the order making these transfers of supervisors was made at that time. I did not understand that there were any suspicions at all of the officials, but I knew that I had confidence in the officials had his own way of transacting his business; that these distillers, having so much pecuniary interest in deceiving the officials, would learn their ways and how to evade the law, and my suggestion was that by their duties over them their crooked ways would be detected. Those are the views I had, and the reason why I suggested the change. (Answer objected to by counsel for the prosecution as incompetent. The reasons why the order was made are not material.)

Q. Can you state whether Mr. Douglass—at that time Commissioner of Internal Revenue—was aware of the fact that you had suggested or made the order? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. He was not know.

Q. So far as you personally know? A. I don't know that he knew anything about it.

Q. After the order had been finally issued were any efforts made to induce you to direct its revocation or suspension? (Same objection as the previous question.) A. Most strenuous efforts were made.

Q. Were such efforts made by prominent public men? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. They were.

Q. Did you resist the pressure that was made upon you for the revocation or suspension of the order, and if you finally decided to direct the revocation of that order, will you please state why you were induced to do so, and by whom? (Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. I resisted the efforts to have the order revoked until I became convinced that it should be revoked or suspended in the interest of detecting frauds that had already been admitted. In a conversation with Supervisor Rathbone he stated to me that if the object of that order was to detect frauds that had already been committed he thought it was well. He said this order went into effect on the 15th of February, and in January when we were talking that it gave the distillers who had been defrauding the Treasury nearly three weeks' notice to get their houses in order and be prepared to receive the new supervisor; that the new supervisor would probably go into the district where frauds might have been committed, and he would find everything in good order and would report that the order might possibly and probably would result in stopping the frauds at least for a time, but would not lead to the detection of those that had already been committed. I yielded to the order was revoked it would be looked upon as a triumph by those who had been defrauding the Treasury, and that it would encourage them and we could then send the special agents of the Treasury out to the suspected distilleries. We could send good men. As one such he mentioned Mr. Brooks. He said that he would go and not be known to the distillers, and before they would be aware of it their ways would be discovered, the proofs would be all complete, and then they could seize the distilleries and prosecute them. I was so confident that his argument was good and that it was in the interest of punishing frauds that this order should be suspended that I told him I should wait and give one an opportunity of judging what other people think of him. I certainly had a good opportunity not only of knowing his character myself, but of knowing the opinion of others.

Q. And from these opportunities, what has been his reputation? A. Good.

Q. Were you acquainted with C. W. Ford, of St. Louis, in his lifetime, and what position did he hold at the time of his death? A. I was intimately acquainted with Mr. Ford, here, in the State of New York. When I was a lieutenant in the army he was there then with his family living in the same town where I was stationed. Then from 1854 to 1860 we were both living in St. Louis county, and our relations were intimate from 1854 up to the time of his death. He was connected with the United States Express Company in St. Louis, and from 1869, but I will not be sure about that, to his death he was collector of internal revenue of the first collection district of Missouri.

Q. State what, if any, applications were made at the time of his decease as to the appointment of his successor? (Objected to by the counsel for the prosecution as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent. A. It will be impossible for me to remember all of the applications that were made for the place. I do remember, however, of General Babcock bringing me a dispatch that was addressed to him from John A. Joyce, practically applying for the place. (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution unless the telegram is produced.)

Q. Have you that dispatch? A. I have not.

Q. Do you know where it is personally? A. No. I suppose it could be found. I think very likely either General Babcock's counsel or the District Attorney at St. Louis has it.

Q. Do you remember any other communications with regard to the appointment of Mr. Ford's successor emanating from his sureties? (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. When General Babcock showed me that dispatch from John A. Joyce I said to him that Mr. Ford having died suddenly and away from home I should be guided largely in selecting his successor by the recommendations or wishes of his bondsmen; that I thought they were entitled at least to approval of the appointment of the man who should succeed to the duties of the office. (Answer objected to by counsel for the prosecution on the ground that it is incompetent for the witness to state conversations between himself and the defendant of the nature of it.)

Q. What did you ultimately decide to do with reference to the appointment, and to whom, if to any one, did you decide to leave the naming of his successor? (Objected by the counsel for the prosecution as irrelevant and incompetent.) A. That was answered in my answer to the previous question.

Q. Whom did the bondsmen actually recommend? (Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.) A. Constantine Maguire.

Q. And on whose recommendation exclusively was he appointed? A. I had relied upon those recommendation exclusively; he was well recommended, and satisfactory to the bondsmen of Mr. Ford. (Counsel objected to by counsel for the prosecution, unless the recommendations, if in writing, are produced.)

Q. Did Gen. Babcock ever in any way, directly or indirectly, use any request or seek to influence the appointment of Mr. Maguire? (Objected to as exchange a word with you on the subject which indicated that he desired his appointment? (Objected to as incompetent, irrelevancy and incompetency. The witness cannot state conversations between himself and defendant.) A. I do not think he ever did; I do not think he was aware of the existence of Constantine Maguire before his recommendation.

Q. Did you inform General Babcock that you intended to telegraph the name of Ford's successor to his bondsmen, and did you request him so to notify those parties? (Objected to on the ground of irrelevancy and incompetency. The question is answered in a previous answer.)

Q. It embraces, perhaps, this addition. Did you request him to notify the parties? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. That part I don't remember. It was what I expected or thought of that this ever would become a matter of investigation, and therefore my memory would not be accurate.

Q. Are the telegrams now shown you the ones received in relation to the appointment of Mr. Maguire? (Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and because the papers do not purport to be originals.) A. I have no doubt that these are the dispatches, or copies of the dispatches, that I received; or, if not, telegrams similar in tenor to those that were received.

The papers were marked exhibits Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

Q. There is a letter, Mr. President, connected with these telegrams, dated January 4, 1876, from D. D. Pratt, Commissioner. Will you be kind enough to explain how that letter was received by you, and what connection it had with the telegrams? (Objected to as immaterial, irrevelant and incompetent.) A. The note from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is in answer to a request for me to be furnished with telegrams recommending Maguire to the office of collector. (Answer objected to by the prosecution as incompetent and immaterial.)

Q. Did General Babcock, so far as you know, ever seek in any way to influence your action in reference to any charge made or proposed to be made against Joyce or McDonald, or either of them? (Objected to as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.) A. Do not remember of his ever speaking to me on the subject at all; he certainly took no lively interest in the matter or I should have remembered it.

Q. Did Gen. Babcock, so far as you know, ever seek in any way to influence your action with reference to any investigation of alleged whisky frauds in St. Louis or elsewhere? (Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. He did not. Possibly I might state right here that I remember but one instance in his ever talking to me at all about the matter of investigation, except since he has been indicted, and then it was simply to say to me that he had asked Mr. Douglass why it was that they threatened all their officials, as though they were dishonest persons, by sending spies to watch them, and asking why they could not make inspections somewhat as they do in the army. Send a man of character to their distilleries and take their books and make a report that could be relied on. I believe that he simply told me that he had said this to Mr. Douglass. (Answer objected by prosecution as immaterial and incompetent, in stating conversations between the accused and witness.)

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of Gen. McDonald being in the city of Washington on the 7th of December, 1874? A. I do not remember the particular date. I remember the time in question.

Q. If I understand you correctly, Gen. Babcock's conception was that, in making the investigation, it would be wise to have it done by men of superior character than by men of inferior and suspicious character? (Objected to by the prosecution as immaterial and irrelevant.) A. Yes.

Q. Did you ride with him on or about that date or occasion, and was anything said then by him to you with reference to the investigation of alleged frauds in his district? (Objected to by the prosecution as irrelevant and immaterial. Conversations between John McDonald and witness are not admissable in any theory of this case.) A. I did not pick him up on the sidewalk; as I was taking a drive I invited him to get in and drive with me. I have no recollection of a single word of conversation on any matter touching his official position of business.

Q. Did Gen. Babcock at or about that time say anything, to your knowledge; did he in any way undertake to prevent them? (Same objections as to previous question.) A. I have no recollection of his saying anything about that. He certainly did not intercede with me to prevent them.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of the promulgation of any order transferring the various supervisors from their own to other districts? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. I do.

Q. State fully with whom the idea upon which that order was based originated, and the particulars of the reasons which induced you to direct it. (Same objection.) A. Some time while Mr. Richardson was Secretary of the Treasury—I think, at all events, before Mr. Bristow became Secretary of the Treasury—Mr. Douglass expressed the idea to me that it would be a good plan to occasionally change the supervisors around from one district to another, and I expressed myself favorably to it, but it was not done then and thought of any more by me, but when it became evident that the Treasury was being defrauded of a portion of the revenue that it should receive from the distillation of spirits in the West, Secretary Bristow called on me and made a general statement of his suspicions and I then suggested the idea. The previous suggestion the order making these transfers of supervisors was made at that time. I did not understand that there were any suspicions at all of the officials, but I knew that I had confidence in the officials had his own way of transacting his business; that these distillers, having so much pecuniary interest in deceiving the officials, would learn their ways and how to evade the law, and my suggestion was that by their duties over them their crooked ways would be detected. Those are the views I had, and the reason why I suggested the change. (Answer objected to by counsel for the prosecution as incompetent. The reasons why the order was made are not material.)

Q. Can you state whether Mr. Douglass—at that time Commissioner of Internal Revenue—was aware of the fact that you had suggested or made the order? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. He was not know.

Q. So far as you personally know? A. I don't know that he knew anything about it.

Q. After the order had been finally issued were any efforts made to induce you to direct its revocation or suspension? (Same objection as the previous question.) A. Most strenuous efforts were made.

Q. Were such efforts made by prominent public men? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. They were.

Q. Did you resist the pressure that was made upon you for the revocation or suspension of the order, and if you finally decided to direct the revocation of that order, will you please state why you were induced to do so, and by whom? (Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. I resisted the efforts to have the order revoked until I became convinced that it should be revoked or suspended in the interest of detecting frauds that had already been admitted. In a conversation with Supervisor Rathbone he stated to me that if the object of that order was to detect frauds that had already been committed he thought it was well. He said this order went into effect on the 15th of February, and in January when we were talking that it gave the distillers who had been defrauding the Treasury nearly three weeks' notice to get their houses in order and be prepared to receive the new supervisor; that the new supervisor would probably go into the district where frauds might have been committed, and he would find everything in good order and would report that the order might possibly and probably would result in stopping the frauds at least for a time, but would not lead to the detection of those that had already been committed. If the order was revoked it would be looked upon as a triumph by those who had been defrauding the Treasury, and we could then send the special agents of the Treasury out to the suspected distilleries. We could send good men. As one such he mentioned Mr. Brooks. He said that he would go and not be known to the distillers, and before they would be aware of it their ways would be discovered, the proofs would be all complete, and then they could seize the distilleries and prosecute them. I was so confident that his argument was good and that it was in the interest of punishing frauds that this order should be suspended that I told him I should wait and give one an opportunity of judging what other people think of him. I certainly had a good opportunity not only of knowing his character myself, but of knowing the opinion of others.

Q. And from these opportunities, what has been his reputation? A. Good.

Q. Were you acquainted with C. W. Ford, of St. Louis, in his lifetime, and what position did he hold at the time of his death? A. I was intimately acquainted with Mr. Ford, here, in the State of New York. When I was a lieutenant in the army he was there then with his family living in the same town where I was stationed. Then from 1854 to 1860 we were both living in St. Louis county, and our relations were intimate from 1854 up to the time of his death. He was connected with the United States Express Company in St. Louis, and from 1869, but I will not be sure about that, to his death he was collector of internal revenue of the first collection district of Missouri.

Q. State what, if any, applications were made at the time of his decease as to the appointment of his successor? (Objected to by the counsel for the prosecution as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent. A. It will be impossible for me to remember all of the applications that were made for the place. I do remember, however, of General Babcock bringing me a dispatch that was addressed to him from John A. Joyce, practically applying for the place. (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution unless the telegram is produced.)

Q. Have you that dispatch? A. I have not.

Q. Do you know where it is personally? A. No. I suppose it could be found. I think very likely either General Babcock's counsel or the District Attorney at St. Louis has it.

Q. Do you remember any other communications with regard to the appointment of Mr. Ford's successor emanating from his sureties? (Objected to by counsel for the prosecution as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. When General Babcock showed me that dispatch from John A. Joyce I said to him that Mr. Ford having died suddenly and away from home I should be guided largely in selecting his successor by the recommendations or wishes of his bondsmen; that I thought they were entitled at least to approval of the appointment of the man who should succeed to the duties of the office. (Answer objected to by counsel for the prosecution on the ground that it is incompetent for the witness to state conversations between himself and the defendant of the nature of it.)

Q. What did you ultimately decide to do with reference to the appointment, and to whom, if to any one, did you decide to leave the naming of his successor? (Objected by the counsel for the prosecution as irrelevant and incompetent.) A. That was answered in my answer to the previous question.

Q. Whom did the bondsmen actually recommend? (Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.) A. Constantine Maguire.

Q. And on whose recommendation exclusively was he appointed? A. I had relied upon those recommendation exclusively; he was well recommended, and satisfactory to the bondsmen of Mr. Ford. (Counsel objected to by counsel for the prosecution, unless the recommendations, if in writing, are produced.)

Q. Did Gen. Babcock ever in any way, directly or indirectly, use any request or seek to influence the appointment of Mr. Maguire? (Objected to as exchange a word with you on the subject which indicated that he desired his appointment? (Objected to as incompetent, irrelevancy and incompetency. The witness cannot state conversations between himself and defendant.) A. I do not think he ever did; I do not think he was aware of the existence of Constantine Maguire before his recommendation.

Q. Did you inform General Babcock that you intended to telegraph the name of Ford's successor to his bondsmen, and did you request him so to notify those parties? (Objected to on the ground of irrelevancy and incompetency. The question is answered in a previous answer.)

Q. It embraces, perhaps, this addition. Did you request him to notify the parties? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. That part I don't remember. It was what I expected or thought of that this ever would become a matter of investigation, and therefore my memory would not be accurate.

Q. Are the telegrams now shown you the ones received in relation to the appointment of Mr. Maguire? (Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and because the papers do not purport to be originals.) A. I have no doubt that these are the dispatches, or copies of the dispatches, that I received; or, if not, telegrams similar in tenor to those that were received.

The papers were marked exhibits Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

Q. There is a letter, Mr. President, connected with these telegrams, dated January 4, 1876, from D. D. Pratt, Commissioner. Will you be kind enough to explain how that letter was received by you, and what connection it had with the telegrams? (Objected to as immaterial, irrevelant and incompetent.) A. The note from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is in answer to a request for me to be furnished with telegrams recommending Maguire to the office of collector. (Answer objected to by the prosecution as incompetent and immaterial.)

Q. Did General Babcock, so far as you know, ever seek in any way to influence your action in reference to any charge made or proposed to be made against Joyce or McDonald, or either of them? (Objected to as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.) A. Do not remember of his ever speaking to me on the subject at all; he certainly took no lively interest in the matter or I should have remembered it.

Q. Did Gen. Babcock, so far as you know, ever seek in any way to influence your action with reference to any investigation of alleged whisky frauds in St. Louis or elsewhere? (Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.) A. He did not. Possibly I might state right here that I remember but one instance in his ever talking to me at all about the matter of investigation, except since he has been indicted, and then it was simply to say to me that he had asked Mr. Douglass why it was that they threatened all their officials, as though they were dishonest persons, by sending spies to watch them, and asking why they could not make inspections somewhat as they do in the army. Send a man of character to their distilleries and take their books and make a report that could be relied on. I believe that he simply told me that he had said this to Mr. Douglass. (Answer objected by prosecution as immaterial and incompetent, in stating conversations between the accused and witness.)

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of Gen. McDonald being in the city of Washington on the 7th of December, 1874? A. I do not remember the particular date. I remember the time in question.

Q. If I understand you correctly, Gen. Babcock's conception was that, in making the investigation, it would be wise to have it done by men of superior character than by men of inferior and suspicious character? (Objected to by the prosecution as immaterial and irrelevant.) A. Yes.

Q. Did you ride with him on or about that date or occasion, and was anything said then by him to you with reference to the investigation of alleged frauds in his district? (Objected to by the prosecution as irrelevant and immaterial. Conversations between John McDonald and witness are not admissable in any theory of this case.) A. I did not pick him up on the sidewalk; as I was taking a drive I invited him to get in and drive with me. I have no recollection of a single word of conversation on any matter touching his official position of business.

Q. Did Gen. Babcock at or about that time say anything, to your knowledge; did he in any way undertake to prevent them? (Same objections as to previous question.) A. I have no recollection of his saying anything about that. He certainly did not intercede with me to prevent them.

Q. Do you remember the circumstance of the promulgation of any order transferring the various supervisors from their own to other districts? (Same objection as to previous question.) A. I do.

Q. State fully with whom the idea upon which that order was based originated, and the particulars of the reasons which induced you to direct it. (Same objection.) A. Some time while Mr. Richardson was Secretary of the Treasury—I think, at all events, before Mr. Bristow became Secretary of the Treasury—Mr. Douglass expressed the idea to me that it would be a good plan to occasionally change the supervisors around from one district to another, and I expressed myself favorably to it, but it was not done then and thought of any more by me, but when it became evident that the Treasury was being defrauded of a portion of the revenue that it should receive from the distillation of spirits in the West, Secretary Bristow called on me and made a general statement of his suspicions and I then suggested