GEORGETOWN COLLEGE, Sept. 28, 1878.

To the ladies and gentlemen of Georgetown engaged in the noble work of succoring the yellow fever sufferers of the South:

Being unable to respond in person last Friday night, the 20th inst., to the touching appeal made by the yellow fever sufferers of the plague-stricken South through the ladies and gentlemen of Georgetown to every heart that beats in sympathy with poor, suffering humanity, we of the Philosophy Class of Georgetown College beg of you to add to the "rescue" sum this little pittance of $10 as a token of high regard for you and sincere sympathy with the noble cause in which you are enrolled, and upon whose banner is written in letters of gold—

"'Tis the first sanction nature gave to man
Each other to assist in what they can."

Very respectfully,
PHILOSOPHY CLASS OF GEORGETOWN COLLEGE.
W. GASTON PAYNE, Secretary.
